7 He made known his ways unto Moses, ^ohis acts unto the children of Israel.

8 The LORD is merciful and gracious, ^rslow to anger, and ^pplenteous in mercy.

9 He will not always chide; neither will he keep his anger for ever.

10 He hath not ^ddealt with us after our sins, nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

11 ^hFor ²as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him.

12 As far ¹as the east is from the west, ^kso far hath he removed our transgressions from us.

13 Like as a father pitieth his children, so the LORD pitieth them that fear him.

14 For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that ¹we are dust.

15 As for man, his days are as grass; as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth:

16 For the wind passeth over it, and ²it is gone; ^mand the place thereof shall know it no more.

17 But the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness ⁿunto children's children;

18 To such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them.

19 The LORD hath ^oprepared his throne in the heavens; and his kingdom ruleth over all.

20 Bless the LORD, ye his angels, ⁴that excel in strength, that do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word.

21 Bless ye the LORD, ^pall ye his hosts; ye ^qministers of his, that do his pleasure.

22 Bless the LORD, all his works, in all places of his dominion: bless the LORD, O my soul.

PSALM CIV.

¹ A meditation upon the majesty, power, and wonderful providence of God. 31 God's glory is eternal. 33 Praise ascribed to God.

BLESS the LORD, O my soul. O LORD my God, ^athou art very great; the heathen will fear the name of the Lord, and all the kingdoms of the earth his glory. When that period shall have arrived, a spirit of prayer will break forth in the Church, which will be heard in heaven, and followed by abundant manifestations of God's power on earth. The work of conversion will go on apace. The groaning of the prisoner will be heard; and those that have forfeited life, and deserve to die, will be remembered for good. They will be loosed and let go, that they may declare the name of the Lord in Zion, and his praises in Jerusalem.

Psalm CIII. 1-5. We have nowhere a more complete exhibition of the blessings of the Gospel, and the effect of the application of the Atonement, than in these verses. Redemption, forgiveness, peace, hope, and joy, are all expressed here. Ver. 6-22. The Psalmist, having spoken of his soul as rejoicing in the salvation of the Gospel, touches certain points of experience which all believers will clearly understand. It is their happiness to remember that the Lord is merciful and gracious, removing transgression, and exercising pity. Few ideas find an easier admission into the soul than fatherly affection; and such is the simile employed to represent the Divine compassion. But the Psalmist, amidst this abounding grace, is careful to provide against self-deception. The mercy of the Lord is for them that fear him, and whose fear is manifested by the keeping of the covenant; that is, in New Testament language, holding fast the Gospel, and remembering his commandments to do them. Faith can only be proved by works; no faith justifies which does not sanctify. None enjoy the blessings of the covenant, but they whose love leads them to walk in the ordinances and commandments of God.

Psalm CIV. 1-35. This psalm has been greatly ad-

^bthou art clothed with honour and majesty:

2 Who coverest thyself with light as with a garment; who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain;

3 Who ^clayeth the beams of his chambers in the waters; who maketh the clouds his chariot; ^dwho walketh upon the wings of the wind;

4 Who ^emaketh his angels spirits; ^fhis ministers a flaming fire;

5 ¹Who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever.

6 Thou ^gcoveredst it with the deep as with a garment: the waters stood above the mountains.

7 ^hAt thy rebuke they fled; at the voice of thy thunder they hasted away.

8 ²They go up by the mountains; they go down by the valleys unto the place which thou hast founded for them.

9 Thou hast set a bound that they may not pass over; that they turn not again to cover the earth.

10 ³He sendeth the springs into the valleys, which ⁴run among the hills.

11 They ⁵give drink to every beast of the field: the wild asses ⁶quench their thirst.

12 By them shall the fowls of the heaven have their habitation, which ⁷sing among the branches.

13 He ⁸watereth the hills from his chambers; the earth is satisfied with the fruit of thy works.

14 He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth;

15 And wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and ⁹oil to ¹⁰make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart.

16 The trees of the LORD are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon, which he hath planted;

17 Where the birds make their nests: as for the stork, the fir-trees are her house.

18 The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats, and the rocks for ¹¹the conies.

19 He appointed the moon for seasons; the sun knoweth his going down.

20 Thou ¹²makest darkness, and it is night; wherein all the beasts ¹³of the forest do creep forth.

21 ¹⁴The young lions roar after their prey, and ¹⁵seek their meat from God.

PSALM CV.

1 An exhortation to praise God. 8 God's providence over Abraham, 16 Joseph, 23 Israel in Egypt, 26 Moses delivering the Israelites, 37 and over his people brought out of Egypt, and planted in Canaan.

O GIVE thanks unto the LORD; call upon his name: make known his deeds among the people.

2 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him: ²talk ye of all his wondrous works.

3 ³Glory ye in his holy name: ⁴let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

4 ⁵Seek the LORD, and his strength; seek his face evermore.

5 ⁶Remember his marvellous works that he hath done; his wonders, and ⁷the judgments of his mouth; mired for regularity of composition, richness of imagery, sublimity of sentiment, and elegance of diction. Some of our best critics, viewing it simply as poetry, have assigned to it a first place in the whole Collection of Divine Songs. It contains but little of an evangelical character, however, and nothing concerning the coming kingdom. It is matter rather for spirits who have kept their first estate, than for those that have been ransomed by the blood of the Lamb, and clothed with the garments of salvation. It is expressive of high personal enjoyment—seraphic and loving adoration. "My meditation of him shall be sweet: I will be glad in the Lord."

The felicity of spirits unfallen, and of spirits regenerated and restored, is the same in its essential character, source, and manifestation.

Psalm CV. 1-45. This psalm is marked by extraordinary grandeur, beautifully blending points of experience with matters of history. The people of God are here taught to glory in his holy name, and to rejoice while following after God. The seeking of the Lord's strength is represented as the prime business of life. The everlasting covenant, too, is significantly pointed at. The Divine fidelity to promise, and the wonder-working 8 Nevertheless ⁱhe saved them for his name's sake, that he might make his mighty power to be known.

9 He rebuked the Red sea also, and it was dried up: so he led them through the depths, as through the wilderness.

10 And he saved them from the hand power by which the promise was fulfilled, are gloriously delineated. His "holy promise" is not less sure to us than it was to the seed of Abraham; and when we are brought out of Egyptian darkness and thralldom, the result is always joy and gladness.

Psalm CVI. 1-43. This psalm has been considered as an appendix to that which precedes; it has been conjectured to be written during the Babylonish captivity. It is more important, however, to notice its highly evangelical character. It is an impressive lesson on the history of the Church, the perversity of human nature, the mercy and purity of the Most High God. The sum of the Psalmist's wishes was, to be remembered with the of him that hated them, and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.

11 And the waters covered their enemies; there was not one of them left.

12 Then believed they his words; they sang his praise.

13 ¹They ²soon forgot his works; ³they waited not for his counsel;

14 ¹But ²lusted exceedingly in the wilderness, ³and tempted God in the desert.

15 And he gave them their request; but sent leanness into their soul.

16 They envied Moses also in the camp, and Aaron ²the saint of the LORD.

17 The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram.

18 And a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burnt up the wicked.

19 They ²made a calf in Horeb, and worshipped the molten image.

20 Thus they changed their glory ²into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.

21 They forgot ²God their Saviour, which had done great things in Egypt;

22 ¹Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and ²terrible things by the Red sea.

23 Therefore he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his chosen ²stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.

24 Yea, they despised ⁴the ²"pleasant land"; ³they believed not his word;

25 But ¹murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the LORD.

26 Therefore he ²lifted up his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness:

27 To ²overthrow their seed also among the nations, and ³to scatter them in the lands.

28 They joined themselves also unto ²Baal-peor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead.

29 Thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions; and ²the plague brake in upon them.

30 Then ²stood up Phinehas, and executed judgment: and so the plague was stayed.

31 And that was counted unto him for righteousness unto all generations for evermore.

32 They ²angered him also at the waters of strife, so that it went ill with Moses for their sakes:

PSALM CVII.

O GIVE thanks unto the LORD, for he is ²good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

favour which belongs to his people; to be visited with his salvation, to see the good of his chosen, to rejoice in the gladness of his nation, and to glory in his inheritance, was all his concern. Possessed of these, he was rich in the wealth which endures to eternity. The sins of Israel, which are vividly portrayed, find but too much of a counterpart in the people of God under a perfect dispensation. Little did Abraham anticipate, when, as an act of faith, he stood prepared to offer up his only son, Isaac, confident that God would raise him from the dead, that, in after ages, his offspring would sacrifice their sons and their daughters unto devils, and shed innocent blood to the idols of Canaan! So still, little do the holiest of men often imagine the contrast the conduct of their children may present to their own; but, apprised of the fearful possibility, it behoves them to leave behind the largest possible legacy of good example, sound instruction, and fervent prayer.

Psalm CVII. 1-43. It is presumed that this psalm was written after the delivery from the Babylonish captivity; and if so, it is a sublime and touching recognition of the boundless mercy of the God of Abraham. It is strongly marked throughout by comprehension of 4 They ^cwandered in the wilderness in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in.

5 ^dHungry and thirsty, their soul fainted in them.

6 Then ^ethey cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and ^fhe delivered them out of their distresses.

7 And he led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation.

8 Oh that men would ^gpraise the LORD for his goodness, and for ^hhis wonderful works to the children of men!

9 For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.

10 Such as sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death, being ⁱbound in affliction and iron;

11 Because they rebelled against the words of God, and ^kcontemned the counsel of the most High:

12 Therefore he brought down their heart with labour: they fell down, ^land there was none to help.

13 Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saved them out of their distresses.

14 He ^mbrought them out of darkness and the shadow of death, and ⁿbrake their bands in sunder.

15 Oh ^othat men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

16 For ^phe hath broken the gates of brass, and cut the bars of iron in sunder.

17 ^qFools, because of their transgression, and because of their iniquities, are afflicted:

18 Their soul ^rabhorreth all manner of meat; and ^sthey draw near unto the gates of death.

19 Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses.

20 He sent his word, and ^thealed them, and ^udelivered them from their destructions.

21 Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

22 And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and ^vdeclare his works with ^wrejoicing.

23 They ^xthat go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters;

24 These see the works of the LORD, and ^yhis wonders in the deep.

25 For he commandeth, and ^zraiseth

1 David encourageth himself to praise God. 5 He prayeth for God's assistance according to his promise. 11 His confidence in God's help.

view and depth of emotion. The mind of the writer, moreover, is burdened with the thought of the ingratitude of the Church, and her danger of forgetting the goodness of the Lord. Hence in ver. 8, 15, 21, 31, we have the devout and benevolent exclamation, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" Few wishes, even of Scripture, are more appropriate to every child of God; for all feel the utter disproportion between their mercies, and their thanksgiving. This psalm bears a remarkably meditative character, and finely exemplifies the appropriate exercise of cultivated intellect and sanctified mind, which will everywhere find abundance of matter for profitable meditation. The last verse expresses this idea with great beauty: "Whoso is wise, and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord."

Psalm CVIII. 1-13. Fixity of heart is one of the highest attainments in Christian experience. Wandering thoughts have ever been to godly people a source of the deepest disquietude; in opposition to this, a heart fixed on the Lord, his word, promise, and precept, is the highest felicity, and the chief source of strength. God alone can give help from spiritual trouble; and vain is all help of merely human origin. Man can aid only by bringing nigh the word of God, and justifying his ways to his creatures, exhibiting his promises, and explaining his purposes. Whatever we undertake, reposing solely on God, we have reason to hope great things; with his help we shall be enabled to make short work of our enemies.

Psalm CIX. 1-31. It is believed that David penned this psalm during one of the most afflictive hours of his life—that in which his infatuated people made Absalom king. There seems doubt, however, as to the party here denounced; some have thought it Doeg—a species of type of the traitor Judas—others have thought it refers to Ahithophel. Be that as it may, the psalm will be useful to the people of God generally, while suffering from the scourge of the tongue, and the ingratitude of men whose benefactors they have been. A Christian often meets with parties to whom he may say, "For my love they are my adversaries;" and it will be well under the circumstances to follow David's example, who gave himself unto prayer. The invective here presented is inexpressibly terrible. Nothing more than the evils here enumerated can be required to perfect that curse which causeless shall not come. There is power in an approving conscience to support the believer under all circumstances. If a man's own heart do not condemn him, he has seldom much to apprehend from the condemnation of his God. How great is the privilege to be enabled to say with the Psalmist, "Let them curse, but bless thou!" Their curse is but so much polluted breath; but the blessing of God is a living and life-preserving reality.

Psalm CX. 1-7. This is unquestionably a prophecy of the Messiah, whose kingdom and glory it predicts and portrays in words of matchless beauty. A hostile world, which he hath redeemed by his blood, must be subdued by his power. Enemies must everywhere be turned into friends, each of whom, like the Apostle of the Gentiles, will be prepared, should duty require it, to die for the Lord Jesus. The human race, then, quickened by his Spirit, will be arrayed in the beauties of holiness. The perpetuity of his priesthood is necessary to his people, not less than the perpetuity of his kingship. His word, attended by his own power, will strike through the hearts of kings, who, with their peoples, will bow at his footstool and magnify his grace, blessing his name and rejoicing in his service.

Psalm CXI. 1-10. David's praise in the assembly of the upright was heart-work. To him science was always subordinate to devotion. "I will praise the Lord with my whole heart," is an appropriate motto for all the faithful. Redemption is his work, and the covenant by which it is provided is stable and sure. The "wisdom" of which "the fear of the Lord" makes no part is little worth. Much worldly knowledge is compatible with the utter absence of true happiness. The knowledge of God in Christ is the chief concern of every human being; that alone can save the soul, and nurture it for the inheritance of the saints in light. It is matter for lamentation, however, that multitudes, averse to this, are only concerned to know God in his works, which, however important, interesting, and ennobling, yield no information touching either justice or mercy. Let all young persons as well as old first seek the Lord and his righteousness, and then they may devote themselves to the pursuit of general knowledge, according to taste, time, and circumstance. The Mechanics' Institute in its own place may be good; but that place is only a secondary one. The House of God; the Bible Class on the Lord's-day, or on the week evening, as taught by competent teachers, is entitled to the first place, since that alone has to do with sin and salvation, guilt and pardon, peace and adoption.

Psalm CXII. 1-10. The Scriptures uniformly associate the fear of the Lord with happiness; and all experience testifies to the union. How is it, then, that multitudes of young persons, on the contrary, connect it with misery? The fact is simply that the "carnal mind is enmity against God; and, therefore, not subject to his law." Upright men may often be so surrounded by difficulties as to be compared with persons in darkness, ever: the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.

7 He ^ashall not be afraid of evil tidings: his heart is fixed, trusting in the LORD.

8 His heart is established, he shall not be afraid, 'until he see his desire upon his enemies.

9 He hath ^adispersed, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness endureth for ever; ^ahis horn shall be exalted with honour.

10 The wicked shall see it, and be grieved; ¹he shall gnash with his teeth, ²and melt away: ¹the desire of the wicked shall perish.

8 Which ^dturned the rock into a standing water, the flint into a fountain of waters.

PSALM CXV.

1 God is entreated to assert his own honour against the reproaches of the heathen. 4 Idols are vanity. 9 An exhortation to trust in God.

NOT ^aunto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake.

2 Wherefore should the heathen say, Where ^ais now their God?

3 But our God is in the heavens; ^bhe hath done whatsoever he hath pleased.

4 Their ^cidols are silver and gold, the work of men's hands.

5 They have mouths, but they speak not; eyes have they, but they see not;

6 They have ears, but they hear not; noses have they, but they smell not;

7 They have hands, but they handle not; feet have they, but they walk not; neither speak they through their throat.

8 They that ^dmake them are like unto them; so ^ais every one that trusteth in them.

9 O Israel, ^etrust thou in the LORD; he ^ais their help and their shield.

10 O ^fhouse of Aaron, trust in the LORD; he is their help and their shield.

11 ^gYe that fear the LORD, trust in the LORD; he ^ais their help and their shield.

not knowing how to proceed; but let them only have patience, and light will arise, making plain their path. Good men delight in good deeds; they are ready to shew favour, and to lend money; but in so doing they will exercise the discretion proper to such services. They will not give in charity the money of others, neither will they give their own money where it would only tend to increase the misery which calls for it. This discretion will occasionally subject them to a charge of hard-heartedness; but let them lend a deaf ear to such accusations. The primary question is, how best to promote the real and substantial wants of the needy, which may involve considerations too varied and comprehensive for the thoughtless duly to appreciate them. Trust in the Lord is the best preparation for evil tidings; for whatever he does is done wisely, and the day will declare that "he has done all things well." Great blessings are provided for the rich man who wisely disposes of his substance, and whose hand is ever open to the deserving poor. Never is a Christian so Christ-like as when he is thus employed.

Psalm CXIII. 1-9. This, and the five following psalms, used to be sung at the Feast of Tabernacles and the Passover; it has therefore been inferred that one or more of these was sung by Christ and his Apostles after the Passover. These lines constitute a burst of praise. The third verse bears somewhat on the kingdom of heaven, which was afterwards to come, the establishment of which would be characterised by the praise of the Lord, from the rise of the sun to the going down of the same.

Psalm CXIV. 1-8. It would appear from this language, that the children of Israel, in Egypt, were a kingdom within a kingdom, not mixing with the Egyptians generally. One of the happy results of this isolation was, the preservation of their own language, which they all appear to have spoken on their departure, with but little knowledge of that of the people of the country. The last verse recognises one of the most remarkable events in the history of the desert, when the bursting rock supplied the camp with typical water.

Psalm CXV. 1-18. There is difficulty in determining the great occasion to which this psalm primarily refers. One thing, however, is clear; the hand of the Lord is devoutly and fervently acknowledged as giving the victory, whoever may have been the foe. "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory." We have here a portraiture of idolatry the most complete to be found in Inspiration; nothing could more impressively expose the folly and iniquity of idol-worship. The exhortation to trust in the Lord, and bless his name, was suitable to the display of grace and power which the psalm is intended to celebrate. It is meet 12 The LORD ¹hath been mindful of us; he will bless us: ²he will bless the house of Israel; he will bless the house of Aaron:

13 He will ¹bless them that fear the LORD, ²both small ¹and great.

14 The ²LORD shall increase you more and more, ³you and your children.

15 Ye are blessed of the LORD, which made heaven and earth.

16 The heaven, even the heavens, are the LORD's; ²but the earth hath he given to the children of men.

17 The ²dead praise not the LORD, neither any that ¹go down into silence.

18 But ²we will bless the LORD from this time forth and for evermore. Praise the LORD.

PSALM CXVI.

¹ The Psalmist professeth his love and duty to God for his deliverance. 12 He studieth duly to express his thankfulness.

I ¹LOVE the LORD, ²because he hath heard my voice and my supplications.

2 Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, ³therefore will I call upon him ¹as long as I live.

3 The ²sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell ²gat hold upon me: I found trouble and sorrow.

4 Then called I upon the name of the LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, deliver my soul.

5 Gracious is the LORD, and righteous; yea, our God is merciful.

6 The LORD ²preserveth the simple: ¹I was brought low, and he helped me.

7 Return unto thy rest, O my soul; for the LORD hath ²dealt bountifully with thee.

8 For thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling.

9 I will ²walk before the LORD ¹in the land of the living.

10 I believed, therefore have I spoken: ²I was greatly afflicted.

11 I said ¹in my haste, ²All men are liars.

12 What shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits toward me?

13 I will ²take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the LORD.

PSALM CXVII.

An exhortation to all nations to praise God for his mercy and truth.

O PRAISE the LORD, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people.

2 For his merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth of the LORD endureth for ever. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXVIII.

O GIVE thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: because his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Let Israel now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

3 Let the house of Aaron now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Let them now that fear the LORD say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

5 I called upon the LORD ¹in distress: the LORD answered me, and ²set me in a large place.

6 ²The LORD is ²on my side; I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

7 The LORD ²taketh my part with them that help me: ³therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

8 It is ²better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man:

9 It is ²better to trust in the LORD ¹than to put confidence in princes.

10 All nations compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I ²destroy them.

11 They ²compassed me about; yea, that great deliverances should be followed by renewed consecration. Nothing could be more graceful than the resolution with which the psalm closes:—"We will bless the Lord from this time forth and for evermore." Thanks, praise, and blessing, can only cease with the existence of the redeemed.

Psalm CXVI. 1-19. Some have ascribed this psalm to David, after the rebellion of Absalom; and others to Hezekiah, on his recovery from illness. In either case the principle is the same: it is an acknowledgment of mercy, and an expression of thanks. The distress here depicted is intense in the extreme. Ver. 3, indeed, has had a complete accomplishment only in the Saviour's anguish in the garden. The soul may well return to rest, which has been loaded with the bounty of the Lord. Great are the deliverances expressed and implied in the deliverance of the soul from death, the eyes from tears, and the feet from falling. And the best return for blessings so great, is to walk before the Lord in the land of the living, taking the cup of salvation, calling upon his name, and paying the vows which have been made in the night of tribulation.

Psalm CXVII. 1, 2. This psalm, notwithstanding its brevity, presents a magnificent idea. Assuming that all the nations of the earth have seen the salvation of our God, they are exhorted to praise him on the ground of his merciful kindness, and encouraged by the fact that the truth of the Gospel endures for ever.

Psalm CXVIII. 1-18. We here behold Israel led by her king in solemn procession to the temple, offering sacrifices for victory. The conquests of David are a splendid type of the Son of God, who laid the foundation of the peace, power, and prosperity which marked the ensuing reign, permitting and enabling Solomon to carry out the stupendous enterprise to which he was divinely they compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

12 They compassed me about ^blike bees: they are quenched as the fire of thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will ^ddestroy them.

13 ^kThou hast thrust sore at me, that I might fall: but the LORD helped me.

14 The LORD ^lis my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

15 The ^mvoice of rejoicing and salvation ^{is} in the tabernacles of the righteous: the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.

16 The right hand of the LORD is exalted; the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.

17 I shall not die, but live, and declare the works of the LORD.

18 The LORD hath ⁿchastened me sore: but he hath not given me over unto death.

19 ^oOpen to me the gates of righteousness: ^pI will go into them, and I will praise the LORD:

20 This ^qgate of the LORD, into which the righteous shall enter.

21 I will praise thee: for thou hast heard me, and art become my salvation.

22 ^rThe stone ^{which} the builders refused is become ^sthe head stone of the corner.

25 ^vSave now, I beseech thee, O LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, ^wsend now prosperity.

26 Blessed ^{be} he that cometh in the name of the LORD: we have blessed you out of the house of the LORD.

27 ^xGod is the LORD, which hath ^yshewed us light: ^zbind the sacrifice with cords, even unto ^athe horns of the altar.

28 Thou art ^bmy God, and I will praise thee: ^cthou art my God, I will exalt thee.

29 O give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXIX.

This psalm containeth sundry prayers, praises, and professions of obedience.

called. This psalm gives striking prominence to the numbers, strength, and malice of the adversary, ascribing the victory exclusively to the Lord. The king, with whom the people are taught to join, cries out with holy joy, "The Lord is my strength and song, and is become my salvation." Ver. 19-29. The Messiah stands forth in all his glory in these significant verses; the stone which the builders refused had become the head stone of the corner. The act was the Lord's, and marvellous in the eyes of his people. The foundation of heaven's kingdom was laid in the stoning sacrifice of the Lamb: all that is wanted is the descent of the Spirit, to ensure prosperity boundless and long-enduring. These verses, which are full of evangelical sentiment, will find a prompt response in the heart of every believer.

Psalm CXIX. 1-176. Our limits forbid any attempt at exhibiting the substance of the several parts of which this psalm is composed. Even in the most compressed manner, to display its beauties were to write a volume of considerable magnitude. All that is intended, therefore, is to set forth its general character; and even this is next to impossible within a limited space. In whatever light viewed, it is a marvellous treasury of inspired wisdom. The view in which it represents the Sacred Scriptures is entitled to special notice. In every variety 27 Make me to understand the way of thy precepts: ^aso shall I talk of thy wondrous works.

28 My soul ^bmelteth for heaviness: strengthen thou me according unto thy word.

29 ^cRemove from me the way of lying; and ^dgrant me thy law graciously.

61 ^eThe ^fbands of the wicked have robbed me: but I have not forgotten thy law.

62 At midnight I will rise to give thanks unto thee because of thy righteous judgments.

63 I am ^ga companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts.

64 The earth, O LORD, is full of thy mercy: teach me thy statutes. TETH.

65 Thou hast ^hdealt well with thy servant, O LORD, according unto thy word.

66 Teach me good judgment and knowledge: for I have believed thy commandments.

67 Before I was afflicted I went astray; ⁱbut now have I kept thy word.

68 Thou art ^jgood, and doest good: ^kteach me thy statutes.

69 ^lThe proud have forged a lie against me: but ^mI will keep thy precepts ⁿwith my whole heart.

70 Their heart is as fat as grease: but I delight in thy ^olaw.

71 It is ^pgood for me that I have been afflicted; that I might learn thy statutes.

72 The law of thy mouth is better unto me than ^qthousands of gold and silver. JOD.

73 Thy hands have made me, and fashioned me: give me understanding, ^rthat I may learn thy commandments.

74 They that fear thee will be glad when they see me; because ^sI have hoped in thy word.

75 I know, O LORD, that thy judgments ^tare ^uright, and ^vthat ^wthou in faithfulness hast afflicted me.

76 Let, I pray thee, thy merciful kind-of expression, it sets forth the perfection, beauty, and glory of the commandments, statutes, precepts, promises, and innumerable excellences of the Word of God. But while it abounds in doctrine and experience, it is a finished portraiture of the moral character of the true child of God. It displays the experience of the power of the truth upon the regenerated heart in every aspect, and delineates the condition of the believer in all conceivable varieties of situation. As a development of the moral likeness of a saint under the ancient Dispensation, it presents a most exalted view of the piety even of that age. There are heights and depths of spiritual ness be ^afor my comfort, according to thy word unto thy servant.

77 Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live: for thy law is my delight.

78 Let the proud be ashamed; for they dealt perversely with me without a cause: but ^aI will meditate in thy precepts.

79 Let ^mthose that fear thee turn unto me, and those that have known thy testimonies.

80 Let my heart be ^asound in thy statutes, ^othat I be not ashamed.

CAPH.

81 My soul ^bfainteth for thy salvation; but I hope in thy word.

82 Mine eyes fail for thy word, saying, ^aWhen wilt thou comfort me?

83 For I am become ^alike a bottle in the smoke; ^ayet do I not forget thy statutes.

84 ^aHow many are the days of thy servant? ^awhen wilt thou execute judgment on them that persecute me?

85 The proud have digged pits for me, ^awhich are not after thy law.

86 All thy commandments are ^afaithful: ^athey persecute me wrongfully; ^ahelp thou me.

87 They had ^balmost consumed me ^oupon earth: ^abut I forsook not thy precepts.

88 ^oQuicken me after thy loving-kindness; ^aso shall I keep the testimony of thy mouth.

LAMED.

89 ^aFor ever, O LORD, thy word is settled in heaven.

90 Thy ^bfaithfulness is ^aunto all generations: ^athou hast established the earth, and it ^aabideth.

91 They ^acontinue this day according to thine ordinances: for ^aall are thy servants.

92 Unless ^mthy law had been my delights, ^aI should then have perished in mine affliction.

93 I ^owill never forget thy precepts: for with them thou hast quickened me.

94 ^aI am thine, save me: ^afor I have sought thy precepts.

95 The wicked have waited for me to destroy me: but I will consider thy testimonies.

96 I have ^aseen an end of all perfection: but thy commandment is exceeding broad.

MEM.

97 ^oHow love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day.

98 Thou, through thy commandments, hast made me wiser than mine enemies; for ^athey are ever with me.

99 I have more understanding ^athan all my teachers: for thy testimonies are my meditation.

100 I ^aunderstand more than the ancients, because I keep thy precepts.

101 I have refrained my feet from every evil way, that I might keep thy word.

102 I have not departed from thy judgments: ^afor thou hast taught me.

103 How ^asweet are thy words unto my ^ataste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!

104 Through thy precepts I get understanding: therefore I hate every ^afalse way.

NUN.

105 Thy word is a ^alamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

106 I have sworn, and I will perform ^ait, that I will keep thy righteous judgments.

107 I am ^aafflicted very much: ^bquicken me, O LORD, according unto thy word.

108 ^aAccept, I beseech thee, the free-will-offerings of my mouth, O LORD, and ^ateach me thy judgments.

109 My soul is continually in my hand: ^ayet do I not forget thy law.

110 The ^awicked have laid a snare for me; ^ayet I erred not from thy precepts.

111 ^bThy testimonies have I taken as an heritage for ever: ^afor they are the rejoicing of my heart.

112 I have ^ainclined mine heart to ^aperform thy statutes alway, even unto ^athe end.

SAMECH.

113 I ^ahate vain thoughts: but ^athy law do I love.

114 Thou art ^amy hiding-place and ^amy shield: ^aI hope in thy word.

115 ^aDepart from me, ye evil-doers: ^afor I will keep the commandments of my God.

116 ^aUphold me according unto thy word, that I may live: ^aand let me not be ashamed of my hope.

117 ^aHold thou me up, and I shall be safe: ^aand I will have respect unto thy statutes continually.

118 Thou hast ^atrodden down all them that ^aerr from thy statutes: for ^atheir deceit is falsehood.

119 Thou ^aputtest ^aaway all the wicked of the earth like dross: therefore I love thy testimonies.

120 My flesh trembleth for fear of thee; and I am afraid of thy judgments.

AIN.

121 I have done judgment and justice: ^aleave me not to mine oppressors.

122 Be ^asurety for thy servant for good: ^alet not the proud oppress me.

123 Mine eyes fail for thy salvation, and for the word of thy righteousness.

124 ^aDeal with thy servant according emotion here indicated, which nothing can exceed. Many portions of it, indeed, are applicable, in their full extent, to the Lord Jesus Christ only. It is impossible adequately to estimate the value of such a composition. It is a mirror, in which the likeness of the man who is filled with the fulness of God is most vividly presented.

It is a great treasury, in which there is something for every one. No case can be conceived, for which provision is not here made. There is a peculiar elevation also about the tone which pervades it. Although the sun is not always shining—for there are even here indications of clouds and darkness, sorrow and suffering—unto thy mercy, and teach me thy statutes.

125 I am thy servant; give me understanding, that I may know thy testimonies.

126 It is time for thee, LORD, to work; for ^bthey have made void thy law.

127 Therefore ¹I love thy commandments above gold, yea, above fine gold.

128 Therefore ¹I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right; ¹and I hate every false way.

PE.

129 Thy testimonies are wonderful: therefore doth my soul keep them.

130 The ^mentrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple.

131 I opened my mouth, and panted: for ¹I longed for thy commandments.

132 ⁰Look thou upon me, and be merciful unto me, ³as thou usest to do unto those that love thy name.

133 ⁰Order my steps in thy word: and ¹let not any iniquity have dominion over me.

134 Deliver me from the oppression of man: so will I keep thy precepts.

135 Make thy face to shine upon thy servant: and teach me thy statutes.

136 ¹Rivers of waters run down mine eyes, because they keep not thy law.

TZADDI.

137 Righteous art thou, O LORD, and upright are thy judgments.

138 Thy testimonies that thou hast commanded are ¹righteous and very ⁶faithful.

139 My zeal hath ⁶consumed me; because mine enemies have forgotten thy words.

140 Thy word is ¹very ¹pure: therefore thy servant loveth it.

141 I am ¹small and despised; yet do not I forget thy precepts.

142 Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and thy law is the truth.

143 ¹Trouble and anguish have ⁸taken hold on me; yet thy commandments are my delights.

144 The ¹righteousness of thy testimonies is everlasting: give me ¹understanding, and I shall live.

KOPH.

145 I cried with my whole heart; hear me, O LORD: I will keep thy statutes.

146 I cried unto thee; save me, ⁹and I shall keep thy testimonies.

147 I ¹prevented the dawning of the morning, and cried: I ¹hoped in thy word.

148 Mine eyes prevent the night-watches, that I might meditate in thy word.

149 Hear my voice, according unto thy loving-kindness: O LORD, quicken me according to thy judgment.

yet sunshine, joy, and gladness is the prevailing element. Confidence in God is a prime characteristic; while the happy fruits of that confidence richly overspread the whole. It may serve to excite the attention of the youthful reader to the importance of this psalm, to inform him that the excellent Philip Henry counselled his children to take a verse of it every morning for meditation, and thus to go over the psalm twice in the year; which the holy man said would soon bring them to be in love with all the rest of the Scriptures.

PSALM CXX.

PSALM CXXII.

1 David professeth his joy for the church, and for placing the ark in Zion: 7 he prayeth for the place thereof.

A song of degrees of David.

I WAS glad when they said unto me, ^aLet us go into the house of the LORD.

2 Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem.

3 Jerusalem is ^bbuilt as a city that is compact together:

4 Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the LORD, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the LORD.

5 For ¹there ¹are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David.

6 ^aPray for the peace of Jerusalem: ^athey shall prosper that love thee.

7 Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity ^awithin thy palaces.

8 For ^amy brethren and companions' sakes, I will now say, Peace be within thee.

9 Because of the house of the LORD our God ^bI will seek thy good.

PSALM CXXIII.

1 The godly profess their confidence in God, 3 and pray to be delivered from contempt.

A song of degrees.

UNTO thee lift I up mine eyes, ^aO thou that dwellest in the heavens.

2 Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress; so our eyes wait upon the LORD our God, until that he have mercy upon us.

3 Have mercy upon us, O LORD, have mercy upon us: ^bfor we are exceedingly filled with contempt.

4 Our soul is exceedingly filled ^awith the scorning of those that are at ease, and with the contempt of the proud.

Psalm CXX. 1-7. These words were wrung from the heart of the Psalmist by his sufferings when insulted by Doeg. David, notwithstanding his pre-eminent spirituality, and his implicit confidence in the promises on which the Father of mercies had caused him to hope, was far from insensible to the malice of men, and the scourge of the tongue. Preservation from this is indeed mentioned as among the mercies provided for the faithful under particular circumstances. We find the Lord Jesus himself complaining that reproach had broken his heart. The lesson taught by these facts is, that even when the soul is conscious of integrity, and can make its appeal to the Searcher of hearts, it is yet cause of the deepest sorrow to be overwhelmed by slander, falsehood, and calumny, which for a moment may beloud a shining character, and thus bring disgrace on the Gospel of Christ.

Psalm CXXI. 1-8. This is the language of a king of Israel going forth to meet his enemies, and looking up to the Oracle on Mount Zion for support. It also admits of application to the ordinances of religion. The especial privilege of the faithful, under the protection of the Omniscient eye, is beautifully expressed. An ever-present God, the Father of spirits, boundless in mercy, and unchangeable in truth, is the guardian of his children, who are shut up as in his own pavilion.

Psalm CXXII. 1-9. This psalm is considered to have been especially used when the Children of Israel went up periodically to observe the solemn feasts, which they did three times a-year. To the true-hearted Israelite these were always delightful seasons. To such, it was the highest felicity to stand within the gates of Jerusalem, the seat of the thrones of judgment. In order to the full enjoyment of this privilege, peace was indispensable; civil war or foreign invasion were incompatible with these holy solemnities. On these grounds it was with the utmost propriety that the people were exhorted to "pray for the peace of Jerusalem," and encouraged to persevere therein by the assurance that they should "prosper who loved her." The Sweet Singer of Israel, while he indited the lesson, set the example, avowing his determination, for the sake of his brethren and companions, and the House of his God, to pray for her peace, and seek her good. This example is eminently deserving the attention of the saints; it is fraught with a principle and a lesson which it is the duty of all that know the truth to carry out; and so doing, they will not only be the instruments of good to others, but adopt the surest methods of securing the best interests of their own souls.

Psalm CXXIII. 1-4. The language of this psalm is that of love, confidence, and consecration. Some of the figures here employed are illustrated by Eastern travel. We are told that, to a large extent, business is managed by signs among the Turks. In Asia Minor, orders are given by a sign of the hands; and the same obtains in the Court of Persia. In Egypt, the slaves stand at the bottom of the room, watching with the utmost attention every motion of their master, who commands them by signs. Ladies are waited on in the same way; servants

PSALM CXXIV.

1 The godly bless God for a miraculous deliverance; 4 they declare their great danger; 6 they praise God.

A song of degrees of David.

If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, "now may Israel say;

2 If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, when men rose up against us:

3 Then they had swallowed us up quick, when their wrath was kindled against us:

4 Then the waters had overwhelmed us, the stream had gone over our soul:

5 Then the proud waters had gone over our soul.

6 Blessed be the LORD, who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth.

7 Our soul is escaped as a bird out of the snare of the fowlers: the snare is broken, and we are escaped.

8 Our help is in the name of the LORD, who made heaven and earth.

PSALM CXXV.

1 The safety of such as trust in God. 4 A prayer for the godly, and against the wicked.

A song of degrees.

THEY that trust in the LORD shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever.

2 As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the LORD is round about his people from henceforth, even for ever.

3 For the rod of the wicked shall not rest upon the lot of the righteous; lest the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity.

PSALM CXXVI.

1 The church, celebrating her incredible return out of captivity, 4 prayeth for, and prophesieth the good success thereof.

A song of degrees.

WHEN the LORD turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream.

2 Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: then said they among the heathen, The LORD hath done great things for them.

3 The LORD hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.

4 Turn again our captivity, O LORD, as the streams in the south.

5 They that sow in tears shall reap in joy.

6 He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him.

PSALM CXXVII.

1 The vanity of human endeavours without God's blessing. 3 Children are his gift.

A song of degrees for Solomon.

EXCEPT the LORD build the house, they labour in vain that build it: except the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.

2 It is vain for you to rise up early, to sit up late, to eat the bread of sorrows: for so he giveth his beloved sleep.

3 Lo, children are an heritage of the LORD: and the fruit of the womb is his reward.

are instructed in their duty by a motion of the finger or the eye, often not perceived by a stranger. Thus the children of God fix their eyes on his Word and works, his precepts and providences, with a view to ascertain his holy will, and happy are they who are habitually in a frame of mind so to do.

Psalm CXXIV. 1-8. The idea of peril is strongly impressed by these words; the danger was great, and but for the Divine interposition the destruction would have been certain. But the Lord appeared, and his saints were safe. There is no danger to those whose help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth. It is matter of everlasting consolation and of sure confidence to the Christian, that nothing is able to pluck him out of his Father's hand. He may therefore boldly say, as he marches to Zion, "The Lord is my helper! I will go in the strength of the Lord God!"

Psalm CXXV. 1-5. The natural position of Mount Zion presented a beautiful spiritual emblem of the position of Israel. Jerusalem was fortified with mountains, which exceedingly contributed to strengthen all her artificial fortifications. The great Roman historian Tacitus, referring to it, describes it as inaccessible, from the walls and the mountains, the rocks and the towers, by which it was surrounded. The prayer contained in ver. 4 is remarkable: it is not simply a supplication but a fact. God does good to those that be good, and to them that are upright in heart. The two characters, the righteous and the wicked, are here placed in affecting contrast; and as is the way, so will be the end. Purity and peace, sin and misery, are united as cause and effect, and nothing can separate them.

Psalm CXXVI. 1-6. It seems highly probable that this psalm was expressly composed to celebrate the return of the Jews from Babylon, and it is eminently fitted to express the feelings natural and appropriate to such an occasion. It must not be supposed, however, that the whole of the Jews had at that time returned, since the vast majority never did so; and others came in successive portions under different leaders, and hence the propriety of the prayer contained in ver. 4 for the completion of the restoration. The figure, "streams in the south," had an import to the Jews which is but slightly perceived by us. The autumnal rains were made to restore those mountain torrents which had been dried up by the heat of summer. During that period the waters disappeared; but when the rains returned, the channels were filled again and the stream rolled on. So, while the children of Israel were in Babylon, cities, towns, villages, all were desolate till the return of the captives. "Sowing in tears," is expressive of toil, affliction, and peril. Well watered fields, after the seed is sown, are highly productive; and sufferings which have softened the heart, and led to tears of penitence, and a return to God, are always a blessing.

Psalm CXXVII. 1-5. In the Old as well as the New Testament, we are taught doctrinally as well as historically that man is nothing, and that God is all in all. Whatever he may be engaged in, his success is not from himself; and hence it becomes him, in all his ways, to acknowledge God, that his steps may be directed. It has been thought, not without some probability, that this psalm may have been composed by Solomon, while engaged in building the temple or the palace; and it would have been alike appropriate while Zerubbabel was engaged in building the second temple. The psalm has been spiritualised, and the Messiah represented as building his spiritual house. To this, whatever be its origin, 4 As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth.

5 Happy is the man that hath ³his quiver full of them: ¹they shall not be ashamed, but they shall ⁴speak with the enemies in the gate.

PSALM CXXVIII.

The sundry blessings which follow them that fear God, and walk in his ways.

it is doubtless in the fullest sense applicable; for it is not by might, nor by power, that this work is to be achieved, but by the Spirit of the Lord. The materials employed are regenerated souls; none are admissible but those who have become the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. In the East, it is common to speak of children as the arrows of their parents; as arrows are a means of defence and aggression, so are children to their parents. The Chinese have a proverb, that when a son is born into a family, a bow and an arrow are hung up before his gate, meaning by the expression that an additional protection to the parents had arrived. The speaking with the enemies in the gate was then a phrase of similar import, and of much force in the East, and it is so still in many places. There the people assembled for public business, and for the dispensation of justice; and there children come to years pleaded the cause of their parents against their adversaries.

Psalm CXXVIII. 1-6. In the East, it was a common thing to lead the branches of the vine over the houses; they are at the present time planted in houses, and over the stairs leading to the upper apartments. The simile, as applied to youth, is one of great beauty. The vine is a humble plant, raised with care and labour; but in process of time it presents a lovely and a noble sight, as it exhibits the rich clusters which bear down its branches. It is viewed as the ornament and the glory of the house by which it is supported, and forms the finest conceivable emblem of a fair and virtuous wife. Women then, as now, had separate apartments in the East; and as the houses form a square, with an open area in the middle, and the rooms on each side, the sides of the house may mean the wife's apartments. Olive-trees, which were a precious thing, were actually planted around their tables, or banqueting places, and in their gardens, where they cheered the eye by their verdure, and refreshed the guests by their cooling shade, significantly representing the satisfaction which parents feel at the sight of a numerous, affectionate, prosperous, and happy offspring.

Psalm CXXIX. 1-8. There is difficulty in determining the period to which this psalm refers. It was applicable to the Jews in divers ages, more especially during the invasion of Sennacherib, and the perilous time in which the city and temple were rebuilt. From first to last, indeed, the Children of Israel, as the objects of Heathen enmity, had been the subjects of constant affliction. Their oppressions, which began with Egypt, continued, with periods of rest, till the final destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. The figure by which the back of the Church is represented as torn up by the plough, is expressive of the most terrible affliction. It is taken from the idea of scourging the body. The Hindus of the present time often exclaim, when in deep trouble, "How they plough me, and tear me up!" The cutting asunder of the cords of the wicked is considered to refer to the termination of persecution; when the cords by which the oxen are fastened to the plough are cut, the plough stands still, and the operation of turning up the soil comes to an end. Just so it is when God breaks the rod of the oppressors, then have his people peace. In Judea, the flat roofs of the houses were favourable to the produce of flowers and herbs, which explains the idea here set forth of grass on the house-tops. The soil, however, was artificial, and by exposure to the rigours of a burning sun, it is speedily dried, so that whatever is planted in it, unless frequently watered, is sure to wither and die.

Psalm CXXX. 1-8. This is a psalm of a deeply spiritual character. The depths out of which the Church cried, signify troubles and calamities. The figure is descriptive of the dungeons in Eastern galls, where the prisoners were treated with great cruelty. Their condition still corresponds with that in which Jeremiah was thrust, or rather dropt. Such a dungeon may be likened to a ditch or a mire; it is meetly described as "an horrible pit, and miry clay." The doctrine of human depravity, and the guilt which flows from it, are here strongly recognised, as also forgiveness through the mercy of God. Then, as now, under the the LORD there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption.

8 And he shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities.

PSALM CXXXIII.

The benefit of the communion of saints.

A song of degrees of David.

BEHOLD, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!

2 It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments;

New Testament dispensation, salvation was understood to be a thing wholly of grace, from which all work, and all merit, other than that of Christ, is completely excluded. The watching here spoken of would seem to indicate the functions of the priests, who watched the break of day, from a high tower, for the purpose of offering the morning sacrifice.

Psalm CXXXI. 1-3. We must not suppose that the words with which this psalm opens are those of self-sufficiency or spiritual pride; they are simply an appeal to the Searcher of hearts as to the conscious condition, at that moment, of the speaker. The language indicates a state of mind for which every child of God should strive, since in each successive step he is getting nearer and nearer to the model of the Master; it is simply growing in grace, and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus. This weaning process is one which often requires much time, and involves a no small measure of suffering. In the weaning of a child there is a great conflict in its little breast; it would have that which it cannot get, and unable to take possession by violence, it utters its grief in cries and tears. There is much in the process from which the Children of God may learn a precious lesson. Life, more especially the latter portion of it, is the period during which the Lord weans his children from this lower earth; and happy are they who cheerfully submit to the means, and reach that state which leaves them fully satisfied with God alone.

Psalm CXXXII. 1-10. So reluctant are learned men to receive the common-sense interpretation of Scripture, that they frequently depart from truth in quest of originality. The present psalm supplies an extraordinary instance. While the very first verse determines David to have been its penman, some have thought it was written during the Captivity; others, while the second temple was building. Nothing is more clear, however, than that, while penned by David, it referred to the ark, and expressed David's solicitude for the honour of his God. The best commentary on the psalm is the history of the ark, as set forth in the historic books. David desired rest for the ark; a place fixed and sacred in which it could not be disturbed. From the time of the Exodus from Egypt, it had not dwelt in a house, but was moved to and fro in the tabernacle. But after the rearing of the temple, it remained in the Holy of Holies till the destruction which followed the "captivity." This was therefore a place of repose which represented the Lord's presence with Israel. Ver. 11-18. These verses comprise one of the most precious portions of Scripture; the covenant and the blessings of its observance are strikingly delineated; the election of grace also, in its sovereignty alone, are set forth in unmistakable terms. The bread of her poor is just the bread of the poor in spirit, which the Lord promises abundantly to bless; that is, he will render it efficacious for peace, sanctity, comfort, and hope. Experimental piety is connected with salvation in very expressive terms. So far from being a thing of dead, dull formality, it was to be an affair of the heart. The saints of God, unable to contain themselves, shout aloud for joy.

Psalm CXXXIII. 1-3. The Church had not to wait for the light of the New Testament to learn the doctrine of spiritual unity; it is here taught with singular beauty, and the psalm has been one peculiarly precious in every age to spiritual people. Whatever defects the faithful may at times have presented, on this score they have always admired unity, and in their better moments longed for it; in its furtherance also they have been ever ready to make every sacrifice short of truth and conscience. We are told by ancient writers, that the holy oil was poured on the top of the priest's head, which was bare, so plentifully as to run down his face, upon his beard, to the collar of his robe—a term which is implied by the “akirts of his garment.” The dew of Hermon, on a summer’s morning, presented a beautiful illustration of this priestly anointing. These dews were so copious as to be equivalent to a heavy rain. They communicate moisture to the very sands, in regions where it seldom rains during the summer months. The dew, as a source of fruitfulness, was viewed as the gift and blessing of the Lord.

Psalm CXXXIV. 1-3. It has been supposed that this psalm was sung by the priests on shutting the gates of the temple in the evening, and doubtless it is expressive of the emotion befitting such an occasion. It is a chastened burst of high devotion; it was an affecting spectacle to the eye of faith throughout all the land to behold from night to night, while the whole earth was quiet and at rest, the servants of God lifting up their hands in the sanctuary and blessing his holy name. Thus the nation might be said all night long to pour out their hearts before him, by this their representative body, which beautifully directed the thoughts of the people to heaven.

Psalm CXXXV. 1-21. The Divine choice of Israel from among all the people of the earth, is here set forth in a manner which is strikingly calculated to illustrate the New Testament Scriptures. The rest of the psalm is expressive of the folly and guilt of idol-worship. Rightly to appreciate the beauty of this composition in relation to idolatry, it is necessary to remember the condition of mankind at the time it was written. All the nations of the earth were covered with darkness, under the dominion of the wicked one, and “mad upon their idols,” and the knowledge of the living and true God was confined to Judea. The responsibility of possessing this knowledge was as great as the privilege, and it will become the objects of the Divine compassion to consecrate themselves, soul, body, and spirit, to promote the Divine honour, to make life one long act of blessing, thanksgiving, and praise.

Psalm CXXXVI. 1-26. This grand ode celebrates some of the mightier movements of the hand of the Most High. It recounts the marvellous deeds performed in creation and providence, especially on behalf of the children of Abraham. The Divine favour, grace, and goodness, are connected with the Divine mercy.

PSALM CXXXVII.

1 The constancy of the Jews in captivity. 7 The prophet curses Edom and Babel.

By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down ; yea, ¹we wept, when we remembered Zion.

2 We ²hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.

Nothing could meet the case of guilty creatures but the exercise of that attribute ; and its ever-during character was a fact eminently calculated to strengthen, comfort, and encourage. The doctrine of redemption is significantly hinted at in ver. 24, and the figure is full of the Gospel element. The song of redemption from the hands of the enemies, so proper for the Jew, is unspeakably more so for the Gentile. The former was achieved by the simple display of power, shedding the blood of the wicked—the latter by the display of justice, requiring the shedding of the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ for guilty man.

Psalm CXXXVII. 1-9. There can be no mistake as to the occasion of this psalm, and the place in which it was first employed as an element of worship. It has been suggested, not without probability, that the body of Jewish captives was dispersed along the sides of the rivers, and that they were largely employed in the wretched drudgery of draining the marshy grounds. So situated, their punishment daily reminded them of their guilt, conducting their tenderest thoughts back to the land of their fathers' sepulchres. Their afflictions were not a little enhanced by the unreflecting cruelty of their taskmasters requiring a song from them in a strange land. No condition or employment was less in harmony with the melody of music ; they felt their condition, and resented the indignity. It would have derogated from

PSALM CXXXVIII.

1 David praiseth God for the truth of his word. 4 He prophesieth that the kings of the earth shall praise God.

A psalm of David.

I WILL praise thee with my whole heart ; before the gods will I sing praise unto thee.

2 I will worship ¹toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy loving-kindness, and for thy truth : for thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name.

3 In the day when I cried thou answeredst me, and ²strengthenedst me with strength in my soul.

4 ³All the kings of the earth shall praise thee, O LORD, ⁴when they hear the words of thy mouth.

5 Yea, they shall sing in the ways of the LORD : for great is the glory of the LORD.

6 Though the LORD ⁵be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly : but the proud he knoweth ⁶afar off.

7 Though I walk in the midst of trouble, ⁷thou wilt revive me : thou shalt their honour as children of Abraham, and the chosen of the Most High God. It would have seemed as if they had been so weaned from Jerusalem as to have forgotten her, and become reconciled to the thralldom of the idolatrous powers by which they had been carried away. This psalm was wonderfully calculated to strengthen their principles, to nourish both their piety and their patriotism. There is something fearfully significant also in ver. 8, from which we learn that they knew even then that Babylon, the despoiler of their country, was "to be destroyed." They were comforted by the very thought ; and that comfort was all the more vital from the assurance they felt that in due season the God of their father Abraham would restore them.

Psalm CXXXVIII. 1-8. This is one of David's noblest odes. When he penned it, he appears to have been in the enjoyment of great peace, and surrounded with great comfort. Filled with love, he pours forth his heart in the praise of the Most High, rejoicing in the thought that all the kings of the earth would come and worship at his footstool. The latter verses present an example of spiritual exercise. When we enjoy tranquillity, we are not to forget our affliction ; it will be well to remember, that in the course of time the cup must return. Under these circumstances, however, we are to comfort ourselves with the assurance, that "though we walk in the midst of trouble," the Lord will "revive" us. It is stretch forth thine hand against the wrath of mine enemies, ^aand thy right hand shall save me.

8 The LORD will perfect that which concerneth me: thy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever: forsake not the works of thine own hands.

our consolation, under the painful consciousness of our manifold shortcomings, that he will perfect what concerneth us. He that has begun the good work will carry it on till the day of Christ.

Psalm CXXXIX. 1-16. This psalm occupies a high place amongst the sublimest portions of the book. Nothing can exceed the great and lofty portraiture which David here draws of his position as a creature in the midst of this vast universe. The deliberate perusal of these verses is calculated to awe into silence and fear the most unreflecting men. Nothing but faith in the doctrines here laid down is required to disturb and to awaken the solicitude of the whole human race. To remember that they live, and move, and have their being in this great and dreadful God, that searches the heart and tries the reins, would fill the whole human family with consternation, and elicit the cry, "What shall we do to be saved?" Amidst these sublime and awful thoughts, David enjoyed the comfort of the Spirit of adoption. "How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them!" This is language of the highest and purest experience; and happy shall we be in proportion as we can adopt it. The best proof we can give that we are good, and made so by the grace and Spirit of God, is that we hate evil, and shun the company of those who love it. Further, a desire to have the heart searched, and the thoughts tried, even by God, is the highest possible proof of sincerity and integrity—of grace reigning through righteousness, and a heart filled with the fullness of God.

Psalm CXL. 1-13. David here exemplifies the readiness and the promptitude with which, in every season of danger, he fled for refuge to his strong fortress. In every age the tongue has been the chosen instrument of malignity. The sword and the spear were only employed occasionally, and by men of a certain class—those able to go forth to war; but all, strong and weak, young and old, rich and poor, were capable of wielding the tongue, 7 O God the Lord, 'the strength of my salvation, 'thou hast covered my head in the day of battle.

8 'Grant not, O LORD, the desires of the wicked: further not his wicked device, 'lest they exalt themselves. Selah.

9 As for the head of those that compass me about, 'let the mischief of their own lips cover them.

10 Let 'burning coals fall upon them: 'let them be cast into the fire; 'into deep pits, that they rise not up again.

11 'Let not 'an 'evil speaker be established in the earth: evil shall hunt the violent man to overthrow him.

12 I know that the LORD will maintain the cause of the afflicted, and the right of the poor.

13 Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto thy name; the upright shall dwell in thy presence.

PSALM CXXII.

¹ David prayeth that his suit may be acceptable, ⁸ his conscience sincere, ⁹ and his life safe from the snares of the wicked.

A psalm of David.

LORD, I cry unto thee: make haste unto me; give ear unto my voice, when I cry unto thee.

2 Let my prayer be 'set forth before thee 'as incense, and 'the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice.

3 Set a watch, O LORD, before my mouth; 'keep the door of my lips.

4 Incline not my heart to any evil thing, 'to practise wicked works with men that work iniquity; 'and let me not eat of their dainties.

5 Let 'the righteous 'smite me, it shall be a kindness; and let him reprove me, it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head: for yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities.

David sheweth that in his trouble all his comfort was in prayer unto God.

¹ Maschil of David; A prayer 'when he was in the cave.

I CRIED unto the LORD with my voice: with my voice unto the LORD did I make my supplication.

2 I poured out my complaint before him; 'I shewed before him my trouble.

3 When my spirit was overwhelmed within me, 'then thou knewest my path: in the way wherein I walked have they privily laid a snare for me.

4 'I looked on my right hand, and beheld, 'but there was no man that would know me: 'refuge 'failed me; no man cared for my soul.

5 I cried unto thee, O LORD: I said, 'Thou art my refuge and 'my portion 'in the land of the living.

6 Attend unto my cry; for I am brought very low: deliver me from my persecutors; 'for they are stronger than I.

7 Bring my soul out of prison, that I may praise thy name: the righteous shall compass me about; for thou shalt deal bountifully with me.

PSALM CXLIII.

¹ David prayeth for favour in judgment; ⁸ he complaineth of his grief; ⁷⁻¹⁰ he prayeth for deliverance, guidance, and support; ¹² for the destruction of his enemies.

A psalm of David.

HEAR my prayer, O LORD; give ear to my supplications: in thy faithfulness answer me, and in thy righteousness.

2 And enter not into judgment with thy servant: for 'in thy sight shall no man living be justified.

3 For the enemy hath persecuted my soul; 'he hath smitten my life down to the

which is often likened to a weapon of war of the deadliest description. David shews that he was far from insensible to slander and calumny. He had a vivid conception of its wickedness and cruelty, and deemed it amongst the heaviest trials that could descend upon an innocent man. Nowhere is his prayer more vehement than against these evil-speakers. It was his special comfort to remember that the Most High God heard all their words, and perceived all their deeds, and watched over his children as in a pavilion.

Psalm CXXII. 1-4. As in the former case, David lifted up his prayer against the evil speaker, so here he applies for grace to avoid that sin himself. Saints cannot do better than to follow his example, praying the Lord to set a watch before their mouths, and keep the door of their lips. The tongue, as the source of sin, is a source of danger; no small part of the troubles which afflict individuals and families is the fruit of an unbridled tongue. The test of spiritual integrity is intense hatred of every evil thing; a determination not to "practise wicked works with men that work iniquity." Ver. 5-10. The number is not very great of those who excel in giving advice, and smaller still is that of those who take it in a proper spirit. David here sets a beautiful example; however the language of fraternal reproof may wound his pride, he will view it as kindness. Happy the man that walks in his footsteps, and deems needful reproof an excellent oil that will not hurt his head; and that instead of taking offence, and turning it into a cause of quarrel, makes prayer for his correctors in the hour of their calamity!

Psalm CXLII. 1-7. We have here a recognition of mercy under circumstances of deep affliction. The Psalmist lays bare his own heart, telling us how he was situated, what he felt, and what he said; and he also records the happy results of his confidence in the Most High. It is seemly for the righteous, not only to sympathise with their suffering brethren, but to compass them about on their deliverance, which will greatly add to their felicity. When the saint has something great to say for God, he requires an audience. It is not uncommon for David to call around him the faithful for that very purpose.

Psalm CXLIII. 1-12. Amid the tribulations of the night, it will be salutary to meditate on the mercies of ground: 'he hath made me to dwell in darkness, as those that have been long dead.

4 Therefore is my spirit overwhelmed within me; my heart within me is desolate.

5 I remember the days of old; I meditate on all thy works; I muse on the work of thy hands.

6 I stretch forth my hands unto thee: my soul thirsteth after thee, as a thirsty land. Selah.

7 ⁴Hear me speedily, O LORD; my spirit faileth: hide not thy face from me, ¹lest I be like unto them that go down into the pit.

8 Cause me ^oto hear thy loving-kindness in the morning; for in thee do I trust: ¹'cause me to know the way wherein I should walk; ²for I lift up my soul unto thee.

9 Deliver me, O LORD, from mine enemies: ¹I ²flee unto thee to hide me.

10 Teach me to do thy will; ¹for thou art my God: ²'thy spirit ³is good; lead me into ¹'the land of uprightness.

11 ¹Quicken me, O LORD, for thy name's sake: for thy righteousness' sake ²'bring my soul out of trouble.

12 And of thy mercy cut off mine enemies, and destroy all them that afflict my soul; for I ^oam thy servant.

9 I will sing a new song unto thee, O God: ¹'upon a psaltery, and an instrument of ten strings, will I sing praises unto thee.

10 It is he ^mthat giveth ⁶salvation unto kings: ²'who delivereth David his servant from the hurtful sword.

11 Rid me, and deliver me from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood:

12 That our sons may be ^oas plants grown up in their youth: that our daughters may be ²'as corner-stones, ⁶'polished ⁴'after the similitude of a palace;

13 That ^o'our garners may be full, affording ¹'all manner of store; that our sheep may bring forth thousands and ten thousands in our streets;

14 That our oxen may be ³'strong to labour; that there be ²'no breaking in, nor going out; that there be no complaining in our streets.

15 Happy is that people that is in such a case; yea, happy is that people whose God is the LORD.

PSALM CXLV.

1 David praiseth God for his fame, 7 goodness, 11 the glory of his kingdom, 14 his providence, 17 justice and holiness, 18 and for his especial favour for the righteous.

David's ^opsalm of praise.

I WILL extol thee, my God, O King; and ¹I will bless thy name for ever and ever.

2 Every day will I bless thee; and I will praise thy name for ever and ever.

3 Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised; ²'and his greatness ¹'is unsearchable.

4 One ⁴generation shall praise thy works the day, and it will tend to uphold the soul until the sun shall again shine. David remembered the days of old, meditating on all the works of his heavenly Father, and stretching forth his hands with earnest supplication, for a speedy answer. His own spirit often failed him; his God never. We should not simply be desirous to be delivered from the trouble which presses upon us, but to have the end answered. While David desired relief, he never for a moment forgot duty. In this very psalm, while imploring aid, he prays to be taught to do the will of God, that, through the Divine Spirit, he may be led into the land of uprightness. David goes to the bottom of things; correctly looking on all sorrow as the fruit of sin, he prays to be kept from sin as the only sure way to be kept from sorrow.

Psalm CXLIV. 1-10. David here is upon his high tower of confidence and hope; strong in his God, he looks down without fear on all beneath him. Full of hope, his feelings rise into song; and he praises the God that gives salvation to kings. All God's children are both kings and priests, animated by his grace, and bearing the image of sonship. They walk in his fear, and enjoy his favour. Ver. 11-15. David ranks as the highest of human felicities the joys of the domestic circle. These corner-stones, or columns, are those the fittest and best proportioned, through the combination of strength, symmetry, and beauty. The language is thought to allude to the carved figures on the walls of the Holy of Holies in the Temple of Solomon, the corners of which were highly ornamented; and the wishing of any one to be as beautiful, was the highest stretch of Hebrew fancy. The sheep of the East, we are told, will often bring forth three or four at a time, and that twice a-year. This immense fruitfulness is unknown in Europe, and hence the force of the figure is less strikingly felt. The idea of sheep bringing forth in the streets is also foreign to our notions; but in the East, there was provision made in the towns for the folding of the sheep, where they were preserved from danger, and where they might bring forth their young. This at once explains what is otherwise less clear. The prayer against "breaking in" and "going out," received but too much significance from the incursions of the enemy, or the removal of the people into captivity.

Psalm CXLV. 1-18. These grand and elevating thoughts are peculiarly meet for sacred song. They set to another, and shall declare thy mighty acts.

5 I will speak of the glorious honour of thy majesty, and of thy wondrous works.

6 And men shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts; and I will declare thy greatness.

7 They shall abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness, and shall sing of thy righteousness.

8 The LORD is gracious, and full of compassion; slow to anger, and of great mercy.

9 The LORD is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works.

10 All thy works shall praise thee, O LORD; and thy saints shall bless thee.

11 They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power;

12 To make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom.

13 Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.

14 The LORD upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down.

15 The eyes of all wait upon thee; and thou givest them their meat in due season.

16 Thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing.

17 The LORD is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works.

18 The LORD is high unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth.

19 He will fulfil the desire of them that fear him: he also will hear their cry, and will save them.

20 The LORD preserveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he destroy.

21 My mouth shall speak the praise of the LORD: and let all flesh bless his holy name for ever and ever.

PSALM CXLVI.

1 The Psalmist voweth perpetual praises to God. 8 He exhorteth not to trust in man. 5 God, for his power, justice, mercy, and kingdom, is only worthy to be trusted.

1 PRAISE ye the LORD. Praise the LORD, O my soul.

2 While I live will I praise the LORD; I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being.

3 Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help.

4 His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish.

5 Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the LORD his God;

6 Which made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that therein is; which keepeth truth for ever;

7 Which executeth judgment for the oppressed; which giveth food to the hungry. The LORD looseth the prisoners:

8 The LORD openeth the eyes of the blind: the LORD raiseth them that are bowed down: the LORD loveth the righteous:

9 The LORD preserveth the strangers; he relieveth the fatherless and widow: but the way of the wicked he turneth upside down.

10 The LORD shall reign for ever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXLVII.

Exhortations to praise God for his wisdom, power, and goodness displayed in providence, &c.

PRAISE ye the LORD: for it is good to sing praises unto our God; for it is pleasant; and praise is comely.

2 The LORD doth build up Jerusalem: he gathereth together the outcasts of Israel.

3 He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds.

4 He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names.

forth in glorious terms the memory of the Lord's great goodness, his boundless compassion, unutterable mercy, and the beneficence which he strews throughout the whole universe. The state of piety here depicted, clearly refers to the future and better times, when saints shall be "filled with the fulness of God." Then the delight of their hearts and the work of their lives will be to bless him, to speak of the glory of his kingdom, to talk of his power, and to make known his mighty acts. "The everlasting kingdom," is an expression which may refer either to the all-pervading rule of the Great Governor of the universe, or to the kingdom of heaven, properly so called, of which the Lord Jesus Christ is the Divine head. Ver. 14-21. The paternal character of God is beautifully delineated in these words. Presiding over the fountain of being, "he openeth his hand, and satisfieth the wants of every living thing," fulfilling the desires of them that fear him, hearing their cry, and saving them. His power is also pledged to preserve all that love him, and to crush their persecutors and oppressors. David's soul was so filled with a sense of the Lord's goodness, that nothing will satisfy him but that all flesh shall bless his holy name for ever and ever.

Psalm CXLVI. 1-6. It has been suggested that this psalm was probably written after the Captivity, when Cyrus withdrew his order for rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem. In opposition to this, it has been supposed as most probable that David wrote it towards the close of his reign; while others have ascribed it to Haggai and Zechariah. Such is the folly and worthlessness of mere human conjecture! Happily, however, the value of the psalm depends not on such figments, but on the glorious displays of the Divine character. Ver. 7-10. What can equal the benevolence and pathos of these verses? The oppressed, the starving, the imprisoned, the blind, the bowed down, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, all are the objects of the Divine care! The portraiture is beautiful in the extreme. Those who are conversant with the poetry of Greece and of Rome, will be in a position to pronounce on the infinite superiority of the poetry of the Hebrews. The gods of the heathen had no such sympathies; they yielded to the afflicted among their devotees no such succours. Well may the Christian exclaim, "Who is a God like unto our God?"

Psalm CXLVII. 1-20. In this psalm David marvelously blends the heavens and the earth with the affairs of men. He that counteth the stars, and knoweth them all by name, heals the broken in heart, and binds up their wounds. The condition of acceptable service is simple, uniform, and universal. The Lord takes pleasure in them that fear him, and hope in his mercy, and in none other. A perception of the demands of the law

5 Great is our LORD, and of great power: ²his understanding is infinite.

6 The LORD lifteth up the meek: he casteth the wicked down to the ground.

7 Sing unto the LORD with thanksgiving; sing praise upon the harp unto our God:

8 Who covereth the heaven with clouds, who ⁴prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh grass to grow upon the mountains.

9 He ⁶giveth to the beast his food, and to the young ravens which cry.

10 He delighteth not in the strength of the horse; he taketh not pleasure in the legs of a man.

11 The LORD taketh pleasure in them ¹that fear him, in those that hope in his mercy.

12 Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion:

13 For ⁶he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath blessed thy children within thee.

14 ⁸He maketh peace in thy borders, and ¹filleth thee with the ⁴finest of the wheat.

15 He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: his word runneth very swiftly.

16 He ¹giveth snow like wool: he ⁸scattereth the hoar-frost like ashes.

17 He ¹casteth forth his ice like morsels: ¹¹who can stand before his cold?

18 He sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.

19 He ²sheweth his ⁶word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel.

20 He hath ⁶not dealt so with any nation: and as for his judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXLVIII.

1 The Psalmist calleth upon the celestial, 7 the terrestrial, 11 and the rational creatures, to praise God.

PRAISE ye the LORD. Praise ye the LORD from the heavens: praise him in the heights.

will produce faith, which will bring peace, followed by hope. The Gospel sets everything right between the Creator and the creature. The Psalmist makes an affecting reference to their high privileges, emphatically observing that he hath not dealt so with any nation; and as for his judgments, they have not known them. Did the faithful meditate more on their mercies, we should have more humble, devout, and fervent thanksgiving. It is always a profitable exercise to meditate on the goodness of the Lord, and compare the privileges of our own country with those of most other nations.

Psalm CXLVIII. 1-14. The fervent spirit of the Psalmist desired to convert the whole universe into an instrument of praise. Kings, people, princes, judges, young men and maidens, old men and children, he would have them all unite in a solemn psalm to magnify the Lord. It has been thought, perhaps, not without ground, that the latter verse of this psalm has a peculiar reference to the appearance of the Son of God in the flesh. At his birth the horn of his people was exalted. It was the pledge of the glorious deliverance which awaited the world. The horn of his people is represented as the subject of the praise of all his saints. It has been considered that this refers to David as a type of Christ, whom God has exalted to be a prince and a saviour. A "people near to him," is a phrase which impressively indicates the privileges of all the faithful in Christ, of all who have received the spirit of adoption, and who exult in its blessing. Between God and man there is a dreadful gulf; but his own children continually rejoice before him.

Psalm CXLIX. 1-9. This brief psalm is distinguished by several extraordinary beauties. It is sung by the "congregation of saints," an idea which suggests a fearful contrast to the mass of human kind. The sight of a multitude of persons all born again, sealed and led by the Holy Spirit, heirs of heaven, and without one false professor among them, would be a sublime spectacle. Meanwhile, Christian society is sadly mixed. We have the wheat and the tares growing together, and seen from a distance the one is not to be distinguished from the other. The Psalmist speaks not of such, but of those who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit, to whom there is, therefore, now no condemnation. The Lord delights in his Son as Emmanuel, and he will beautify the meek with salvation. Here, as in a multitude of cases, the experience of the saints is delineated. They are called on to be joyful in glory. The idea of singing the songs of Zion on their bed, implies a very high degree of emotion and enthusiasm in the best sense. The language, however, which seems strange to us, is familiar to Oriental ears. It refers to the couches on ³mouth, ⁴and a two-edged sword in their hand;

7 To ^eexecute vengeance upon the heathen, ^{and} punishments upon the people;

8 To ^bbind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron;

THE PROVERBS.

The Analysis of this wonderful Book presents something which may be described as the Introduction, comprising Chapters i. to ix., containing directions, cautions, and incitements to the pursuit of Wisdom; the Proverbs of Solomon, put together by himself, comprising Chapters x. to xxiv.; Solomon's Proverbs, copied by the men of Hezekiah, comprising Chapters xxv. to xxix.; the words of Agur in Chapter xxx.; and the instructions of Solomon's Mother in Chapter xxxi. The Book of Proverbs stands infinitely above every collection of wisdom that the wit of man has brought together. Each is a gem more precious than fine gold. Had they come to us from Greece instead of Judea, and made no mention of the God of truth and love, the wise men of this world would never have ceased to extol them, and to glorify their Author.

Psalm CL. 1-6. This exhortation to praise the Lord is of a most comprehensive character. Beginning with the sanctuary, the Psalmist steps forth and avails himself of "the firmament of his power," thus inviting all beings to join in the celebration of the Creator's goodness, greatness, and glory.

Chap. I. 1. The meaning of the term "Proverbs" may best be got by an examination of the Book. From this it will be seen, that it is more comprehensive than the acceptance in which the word is usually taken in the English language. It signifies not merely a terse sentence, but more extended illustrations of moral duties, delivered in language either simple or lofty, and under various figures of speech, such as personification, similitude, direct address, and lively description. Ver. 2-6. It deserves particularly to be noted, that the party here selected for instruction is young men. From this we are taught—what all history and all experience illustrates and confirms—that the fate of nations turns instrumentally on their character. Whatever the importance may be which attaches to the young of the other sex, things in the main, and generally, will go well or ill according to the character of the husbands and the fathers of each successive generation. Ver. 7-9. Educationists, Moralists, Statesmen, and Philosophers, ought well to mark the declaration of the seventh verse. All knowledge is vain which does not produce the fear of the Lord; that once established, then every fresh acquisition will be sanctified, and rendered subservient to the Divine glory. It is matter for deep regret that young men are often found eagerly bent on the attainment of everything but this. That which ought to be first is put last, if it be not wholly excluded from their study. So far as this world's wisdom is concerned, other things being equal, the devout student has greatly the advantage. The natural order is, first, the knowledge of the Creator, and then the knowledge of creation: both are harmonious, and the perfection of education requires their union. How these beautiful verses sustain parental authority in youth, and filial reverence in after years! Ver. 10-19. From this language we obtain a glimpse at society in the East. It would appear that then, as now, there was more zeal for the destruction than for the salvation of men. Young men were solicited to join bands of robbers, whose haunts were in the forests, and in desolate places, and who, however they might escape for a time, were, in the end, sure to be overtaken by law and justice. Then, stance, we shall fill our houses with spoil:

14 Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse.

15 My son, walk not thou in the way with them; ¹refrain thy foot from their path:

16 For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood:

17 (Surely in vain the net is spread in the ⁶sight of any bird:)

18 And they ¹lay wait for their own blood; they lurk privily for their own lives.

19 So are the ways of ⁷every one that is greedy of gain; which ⁸taketh away the life of the owners thereof.

20 ¶ ¹Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets:

21 She ²crieth in the chief place of concourse, in the openings of the gates: in the city she uttereth her words, saying,

22 How long, ³ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorers delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge?

23 Turn you at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my Spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you.

24 ¶ Because I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded;

25 But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof:

26 I also ⁴will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh;

27 When your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when ⁵distress and anguish cometh upon you.

28 Then ⁶shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me:

29 For ⁷that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the LORD:

30 They ⁸would none of my counsel; they despised all my reproof:

31 Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices.

32 For the ⁹turning away of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them.

33 But ¹⁰whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, ⁴and shall be quiet from fear of evil.

CHAPTER II.

¹ Wisdom promiseth godliness to her children, ¹⁰ safety from evil company, ²⁰ and direction in good ways.

MY son, if thou wilt receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee;

2 So that ²thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and ³apply thine heart to understanding;

3 Yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and ⁴liftest up thy voice for understanding;

4 If ⁵thou seekest her as silver, and ⁶searchest for her as for hid treasures;

5 Then shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and ⁷find the knowledge of God.

6 For ⁸the LORD giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding.

7 He ⁹layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous: he is ¹⁰a buckler to them that walk uprightly.

8 He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of his saints.

9 Then ¹¹shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path.

10 ¶ When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul;

11 Discretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee:

12 To deliver thee from the way of the evil man, ¹²from the man that speaketh froward things;

13 Who ¹³leave the paths of uprightness, to walk in the ways of darkness;

14 Who rejoice to do evil, ¹⁴and delight in the frowardness of the wicked;

15 Whose ways are crooked, and they froward in their paths:

16 To ¹⁵deliver thee from the strange woman, even from the stranger which flattereth with her words;

17 Which forsaketh ¹⁶the guide of her youth, and forgetteth the covenant of her God:

18 For her house inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the dead.

as now, it appears that covetousness prompted violence, and often led to murder. Whether Jew or Gentile, human nature from the days of Cain has been the same, while its development is dependent upon circumstances. Ver. 20-23. The address of Wisdom is full of beauty: she accommodates herself to mankind, becoming all things to all men, that she may enlighten, save, and bless them. The language in the last of the foregoing verses is remarkable: it is an express promise of the Holy Spirit to every returning penitent for purposes of instruction. Ver. 24-33. Nowhere in Scripture is there a more awful and overpowering address than in these words. It is a frightful picture of hardened impenitence and offended justice, which may well make the ears of every ungodly reader to tingle. The Divine equity is strongly manifested. The sinner is represented as reaping the fruit of seed deliberately sown with his own hands; thus every mouth will be stopped, and the whole world of wicked men stand guilty before God. At the very outset, the inspired writer aims at reconciling man to God, rightly judging that the success of his subsequent instructions will depend upon this great event. Repentance, therefore, towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus, once realised, the best book in existence for instruction in the Morals of Christianity will be the Proverbs of Solomon.

Chap. II. 1-9. The lesson here set forth is above all price. The writer having pointed out in the previous chapter the prior claims of the knowledge of the Most High, in the present directs to the method of obtaining it. What prominence is given to prayer! The authors and disciples of a vain philosophy make nothing of such an exercise. The very suggestion would offend their dignity. It is, nevertheless, sure that the knowledge of Divine things can only be attained through Divine teaching, and that prayer is the condition of the blessing. Men may make great advances in earthly knowledge without heavenly help; Biblical criticism may also be successfully conducted with natural talent, and a knowledge of language acquired; but without the Spirit of God not one step can be attained in this the highest of 19 ¹None that go unto her return again, neither ²take they hold of the paths of life.

20 That thou mayest walk in the way of good men, and keep the paths of the righteous.

21 For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it.

22 But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be ³rooted out of it.

CHAPTER III.

1 An exhortation to obedience, faith, mortification, devotion, and patience. 13 The happy gain and benefits of wisdom. 27 An exhortation to charitableness, peaceableness, contentedness. 33 The cursed state of the wicked.

MY son, forget not my law; but let thine heart keep my commandments:

2 For length of days, and ¹long life, and peace, shall they add to thee.

3 Let not mercy and truth forsake thee: ⁴bind them about thy neck; ⁵write them upon the table of thine heart:

4 So shalt thou find favour and ²good understanding in the sight of God and man.

5 [¶]Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; ⁶and lean not unto thine own understanding.

6 [¶]In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.

7 [¶]'Be not wise in thine own eyes: fear the LORD, and depart from evil.

8 It shall be ³health to ⁴thy navel, and ⁵'marrow to thy bones.

9 [¶]Honour the LORD with thy substance, and with the first-fruits of all thine increase:

10 [¶]So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine.

11 [¶]My son, despise not the chastening of the LORD; ¹neither be weary of his correction:

12 For whom the LORD loveth he correcteth, even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.

13 [¶]Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that ²getteth understanding:

14 For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.

all sciences. It may still be said to many of the leaders of public opinion, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures." It becomes, therefore, a matter of the utmost moment to obtain the light by which the depths of their wisdom may be fathomed, and the soul of the inquirer made wise unto salvation. The rule is thus supplied by which each man determines the probity of his knowledge. Has prayer mingled with his studies? Has he conducted all his inquiries in the spirit of a humble dependence upon the Most High, and under a sense of the necessity of constant teaching? Then the likelihood is, that what he has sought he has obtained: but whatever may have been his reading and inquiry, if he has been prayerless and self-confiding, there is every ground to expect that his labour has been in vain. Ver. 10-22. Man's principal enemy is his fellow. It is, therefore, a precious promise to be delivered from the "evil man." Evil communications—that is, communications with evil men—naturally tend to corrupt good morals. All intercourse from its very nature assimilates man to man. In all such cases, however, as a rule, the bad bring the good down to their own level; the contrary is a rare occurrence. The regenerate character, in its nature still mixed, is no match for the pure depravity of unregenerate man. Safety, then, must be sought in separation. The grace of God suffices wherever duty calls on man to mix with the wicked; but where such intercourse is the fruit of voluntary choice, there is no promise of Divine protection.

Chap. III. 1-20. The paternal spirit here continues to pour out Divine wisdom. The directions contained in ver. 5, 6 are of great moment. The young man who guides his life by such rules will never greatly err. He who leans on his own knowledge cannot trust to the Lord. The self-reliant will not acknowledge God, and, by consequence, he has no right to expect that his paths shall be directed. Among the Orientals the state of the navel is often proverbially mentioned as a criterion of health and happiness. Wisdom is mostly represented by a tree of life, yielding delicious and refreshing shade to those who repose under its branches. There may have been some reference to the Tree of Paradise, which was intended to supply man with life, health, and happiness.

35 The wise shall inherit glory: ^bbut shame ¹shall be the promotion of fools.

Ver. 21-35. The wonderful penetration of Solomon into the workings of the human heart begins now to be exemplified: ver. 28 supplies a striking illustration. The oppressor, whatever his rank in society, is not to be envied; in promoting misery he can find no lasting pleasure. God hath ordained that the author of evil shall share it. Shame is poor promotion, and yet folly deserves none other. It is a painful feeling. Under a perpetuity of it, existence becomes not merely an intolerable burden, but an overwhelming curse, a foretaste of hell itself. The prophet is emphatic on this great fact, when he states, with respect to the resurrection, that the one class shall awake to everlasting life, and the other to shame and everlasting contempt.

Chap. IV. 1-18. Every man, at the outset of life, ought to take as his guiding-star the opening words of ver. 7: "Wisdom is the principal thing." Wherever this is, in a sufficient degree, it will not fail to bring along with it everything else that man requires and this world can supply, in that measure which is best. If all the wise men of a nation could be gathered together, they would be found largely to consist of those in whose behalf the prayer of Agur has been realised; they have neither riches nor poverty, but they are fed with food convenient for them. They would constitute but a small portion of those that people the workhouse; nor would the numbers be great occupying the high places of the earth. Wise men idle not, waste not, want not; they employ proper means to accomplish desirable ends, and they never fail, in some degree, to realise their objects.

Ver. 14-27. The shining light is an impressive emblem of true piety in a flourishing condition. The idea of progress is likewise strongly impressed, since, like the sun, it shineth more and more until mid-day. Religion, therefore, ought, in every case, to be not only manifest, but progressive: to sit still is a preparation for backsliding. Divine influence is inseparable from salvation; nothing else can bring the heart to God, and when brought, nothing else can keep it there. Religion, therefore, is a business to be continually prosecuted, and that business consists in keeping the heart with all diligence. Life and death are there. The heart once taken captive, the whole man—principles, passions, desires, and motives—will be surrendered. The heart, as the seat of life, requires to be specially guarded. Even a small wound in so tender a part, is certain and immediate death. The bearing of the whole of these verses is to the effect, that safety requires a vigilance that never sleeps, and a humble dependence on God that is never withdrawn, as well as a Divine protection from evil both seen and unseen. Faith, which is everything, has truth for its object, and the glory of God for its end. Things must be estimated in the light of revelation, to the exclusion of worldly wisdom and carnal policy.

Chap. V. 1-14. The counsels here given are of the utmost importance, since the sins pointed out are of the most heinous description, and as such, fraught with the most terrible consequences. No position is so frightful, and so revolting, as that of a man who has been brought to the grave by his own transgressions; no sound as drop as an honey-comb, and her ¹mouth is ²smoother than oil:

4 But ³her end is bitter as wormwood, ⁴sharp as a two-edged sword.

5 Her feet go down to death; her steps take hold on hell.

6 Lest thou shouldest ponder the path of life, her ways are moveable, that thou canst not know them.

7 Hear me now therefore, O ye children, and depart not from the words of my mouth.

8 Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door of her house;

9 Lest ⁵thou give thine honour unto others, and thy years unto the cruel;

10 Lest strangers be filled with thy ⁶wealth, and thy labours be in the house of a stranger;

11 And ⁷thou mourn at the last, ⁸when thy flesh and thy body are consumed, 12 And say, ⁹How have I hated instruction, ¹⁰and my heart despised reproof; affecting as his mourning and moaning, while his body is consuming, and threatening speedily to fall asunder, and to drive the immortal inhabitant into eternity. Ver. 15-23. The happiness of home depends on congeniality of spirit between husband and wife. Where this exists, the result is a felicity no otherwise to be realised on earth. Loving each other fervently, and living for each other, and the God they serve, they become, in a great degree, independent of the cold and selfish world around them. Each can still count on one true and faithful heart to which it may unbosom itself of all its cares and trials, sure of sympathy, and, as far as possible, of succour. Licentiousness is wickedness in the first degree, and the fountain of all misery. Nothing is wanted but its universal prevalence to turn the world into a second Sodom. The great check to human transgression is the recognition, that the eye of the Lord pondereth all the goings of man. The element of the wicked is one of Atheism. Till the heart has become thoroughly hardened, and he has reached the practical conclusion that there is no God, he is the subject of checks which embitter the pleasures of sin, such as they are. The formation of habits is the result of repeated transgressions; and such habits once formed, become a chain to bind the soul of the sinner to the car of the Tempter. Such a man, shutting his eyes against the light, will die without instruction, and be hurled from his place into bottomless perdition. Nothing but the blood of Christ can meet the necessities of depraved nature: and its application to the soul is peculiarly the work of the Holy Spirit.

Chap. VI. 1-5. These verses supply a lesson of commercial prudence. The joining of hands was the ancient method of entering into contracts. It is not here intended to interdict the act of becoming surety in every case. All that is meant is, to caution the young man against rashness in a matter which may be attended with such results. In a business world like ours, suretyship, bonds, and engagements, are, to a considerable extent, necessary; without them the affairs of the nation would come to a stand. But in all such cases, discretion must be exercised, and no man is to take upon himself burdens greater than he can bear. When an error in this respect has been committed, it is the duty of the party concerned, with the least possible delay, to seek to extricate himself, even when the act may be considered humiliating to his pride. Ver. 6-16. The lesson of industry here presented has been admired in every age. The ant is in some material points a reproach to man; without guide, overseer, or ruler, she is steady to her labour, which she conducts with system and success. It is a reproach to man, with his reason, to come short of the instinct of the most insignificant creatures. To carry out the instruction here presented, will be to take a high place in society. Sloth will be expelled; men will live by rule, and they will husband time as much as money. The mind will be stored with useful know-

14 Frowardness is in his heart, ^mhe deviseth mischief continually; ⁿhe ²soweth discord.

15 Therefore shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall ^ohe be broken without remedy.

16 ¶ These ⁶six things doth the LORD hate: yea, seven are an abomination ⁸unto him:

17 ⁴A proud look, ⁹a lying tongue, ^rand hands that shed innocent blood,

18 An ¹heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, ^tfeet that be swift in running to mischief, 19 ¹A false witness that speaketh lies, and he, ²that soweth discord among brethren.

20 ¶ My son, keep thy father's commandment, and forsake not the law of thy mother:

21 Bind them continually upon thine heart, and tie them about thy neck.

22 When thou goest, it shall lead thee; when thou sleepest, it shall keep thee; and when thou awakest, it shall talk with thee.

23 For ⁷the commandment is a ¹lamp; and the law is light; ²and reproofs of instruction are the way of life:

24 To ¹keep thee from the evil woman, from the flattery ⁶of the tongue of a strange woman.

25 ^bLust not after her beauty in thine heart; neither let her ^ctake thee with her eyelids:

26 For ^dby means of a whorish woman a man is brought to ^aa piece of bread; and ^ethe adulteress will ^fhunt for the precious life.

27 Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burnt?

28 Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burnt?

30 Men do not despise a thief, if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry:

31 But ⁱif he be found, he shall restore sevenfold; ^jhe shall give all the substance of his house.

32 But whoso committeth adultery with a woman ^klacketh ^lunderstanding: he that doeth it destroyeth his own soul.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Solomon persuadeth to a sincere and kind familiarity with wisdom. 6 In an example of his own experience, he sheweth 10 the cunning of a lewd woman, 22 and the desperate simplicity of a wanton youth.

^a MY son, keep my words, and lay up my commandments with thee.

2 Keep my commandments, and live; and my law as the apple of thine eye.

3 ^bBind them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thine heart.

4 Say unto wisdom, ^cThou art my sister; and call understanding thy kinswoman:

5 That they may keep thee from the strange woman, from the stranger which flattereth with her words.

6 ¶ For at the window of my house I looked through my casement,

7 And beheld among the simple ones, I discerned among ¹the youths, a young man void of understanding,

8 Passing through the street ^dnear her corner; and he went the way to her house,

9 In ^ethe twilight, in the ^fevening, in the black and dark night;

10 And, behold, there met him a woman with ^gthe attire of an harlot, and ^hsubtile of heart.

11 (She is ⁱloud and stubborn; her feet abide not in her house:

12 Now is ^jshe without, now in the streets, and lieth in wait at every corner.)

13 So she caught him, and kissed him, and ^kwith an impudent face said unto him, 14 ^lI have peace-offerings with me; this day have I paid my vows:

15 Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee.

16 I have ^mdecked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved works, with ⁿfine linen of Egypt.

17 I have ^operfumed my bed ^pwith myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.

ledge, by the study of the Word and works of God, and the great living world around. Ver. 16-19. The matter comprised in these seven things deserves to be deeply and prayerfully pondered, in conjunction with the closest self-examination. These seven things withdrawn from society, would render earth—bad as it is now—a scene approaching to that of heaven. Ver. 20-35. He who makes light of his father's commandment, and forsakes the law of his mother, is on the road to ruin. Of all counsellors, these are most to be relied on, since none are so upright and so affectionate, and withal so thoroughly disinterested. Sin and punishment cannot possibly be separated. The sinner may seek for a hiding-place, but the earth can furnish him with none where his sin will not find him out. The transgression specified in these verses is the most heinous of which humanity is capable; and as is its character, such are its consequences; it is fraught with misery unutterable to all concerned.

Chap. VII. 1-27. The wisdom of the counsels here presented has been proved and tested in every age. One of the most eminent of Englishmen has left the following upon record for the benefit of his children:—"If I omit reading a portion of Scripture in the morning, it never goes well with me through the day." Let the promise and the precept go together; that men may obey the one, they must believe the other. The Divine promise is a power to which there is no other limit than faith. The path of danger was known to Solomon; and hence he is careful to erect finger-posts where the peril is most imminent. Danger is much an affair of time, place, and circumstances. Idleness, late hours, a vacant mind, evil company, and strong drink—these are among the materials of destruction. They have proved the overthrow of unsuspecting millions of the young; and they will continue to do so until the knowledge of God shall have filled the earth—when society will exhibit self-

18 Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning; let us solace ourselves with loves:

19 For ^athe goodman is not at home, ^bhe is gone a long journey:

20 He hath taken a bag of money ^cwith him, and will come home at ^dthe day appointed.

21 ^eWith her much fair speech she caused him to yield, with the flattering of her lips she forced him.

22 He goeth after her ^fstraightway, ^gas an ox goeth to the slaughter, or as a fool to ^hthe correction of the stocks;

23 Till ⁱa dart strike through his liver; as a bird hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not that it is for his life.

24 ^jHearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth:

25 Let not thine heart decline to her ways, go not astray in her paths:

26 For she hath cast down many wounded; yea, many strong men have been slain by her.

27 Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death.

control, steady employment, regulated energy, and mainly consecration of soul, body, and spirit to the service of the great Creator.

Chap. VIII. 1. The portraiture of Wisdom presented in this chapter is one of ineffable beauty. Her language is full of love to the human race, and intensely concerned to promote their welfare. She is a meet emblem of the Saviour, his Apostles and Evangelists, and the ministers of the Word, in diffusing the knowledge of the Lord throughout the earth. There is a peculiarity in the language which has excited some discussion among Biblical critics; closely examined, however, it seems to conduct to only one conclusion. The speaker assumes a personal attitude, and the utterances are personal; the properties are personal. Wisdom was set up from everlasting as the efficient Cause in the work of creation. The affections are personal—hatred love, joy, are all the attributes of a personal mind. The promises are personal, as also the commandment touching life and death. It is doubtful whether Solomon fully comprehended his own inspired words. We have authority from 1 Peter i. 10 for the fact, that the prophets were frequently ignorant of the entire scope of their own communications. The conclusion, then, that is reached is, that the language of the chapter refers not to attributes, but to a

CHAPTER X.

From this chapter to the five-and-twentieth are sundry observations of moral virtues, and their contrary vices.

THE Proverbs of Solomon. ^{ac}A wise son maketh a glad father: but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother.

2 ^{ad}Treasures of wickedness profit nothing: but righteousness delivereth from death.

3 THE LORD ^{ae}will not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish: but he casteth away ^{af}the substance of the wicked.

4 He becometh poor that dealeth ^{ag}with a slack hand: ^{ah}but the hand of the diligent maketh rich.

5 He that ^{ai}gathereth in summer is a wise son: but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame.

6 Blessings ^{aj}are upon the head of the just: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

7 The ^{ak}memory of the just is blessed:
but ^{al}the name of the wicked shall rot.

8 The ^{am}wise in heart will receive commandments: ^{an}but ^{ao}a prating fool shall ^{ap}fall.

9 He ^{aq}that walketh uprightly walketh

Person, and that Person the Son of God, Creator of the universe, the Prophet, Priest, King, and Almighty Saviour of his people. This, from the earliest age, has been the accredited interpretation of the chapter amongst the most enlightened and the holiest of men. Let Christians, therefore, rejoice in Christ the Lord, in whom are all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, and remember that it is their privilege to receive out of his fulness grace for grace. Christ is the wisdom of God incarnate; and they who want have only to ask of him, who will give whatever is necessary to meet their requirements
both for time and for eternity.

Chap. IX. 1-12. These verses belong to the foregoing chapter, from which they ought not to have been separated. The same beautiful idea is here carried out and completed. We have the gospel presented under a highly poetical simile. Wisdom, at a vast expense, has reared a palace, where she has spread a table for a starving world, whom she invites to the "feast of fat things."
The invitations are sent forth freely into every quarter, while she herself unites in the proclamation. It is not improbable that Solomon here referred to his own magnificent temple, to which men were summoned for the worship of God, instead of frequenting scenes of vice and dissipation; and, if so, he so far expounds the mystery of that marvellous structure which was typical of Christ and his gospel. As to the mission of the maidens, it is exemplified in the East at the present hour. A great European traveller states that he saw at Alexandria ten or twelve women going about, and inviting people to a banquet, making a particular kind of crying noise. These Eastern customs meet us at every turn, and tend to illustrate the Scripture, and confirm the truth of the representations of ancient events, habits, and customs. The lesson taught is solemnly emphatic.

It ought to be deeply affecting even to the most thoughtless, that all their works in time bear on eternity; that if they be wise, it is for themselves; that if they scorn and disobey, they themselves shall bear the consequences.
Whatever men sow, that they shall reap—life or death, and both extending through eternity. Ver. 13-18.
Wisdom now gives place to Folly, who is intent on calling the attention of mankind, not to save but to destroy them. The world is full of seductive influences, adapting itself to every variety of condition. Temptations are strewn in every path, and there is no place in which her siren song is not heard. Compliance is ruin; there is no safety but in flight. Every reader of these words is contended for by holiness and sin. The gospel feast is spread in opposition to the feast of the world; and every man will be found either at the one or at the other.
It behoves each reader, therefore, to inquire whose he is, and where he is. The last question will aid in answering the first.

Chap. X. 1-18. We have here a striking development of character. The wicked and the righteous are placed in opposition, and their principles indicated by their conduct. There is no parental joy comparable to that surely: ¹but he that perverteth his ways shall be known.

10 He ^mthat winketh with the eye causeth sorrow: ⁿbut a prating fool shall ⁴fall.

11 The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

12 Hatred stirreth up strifes: but love covereth all sins.

13 In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found: but ^aa rod is for the back of him that is void of ⁶understanding.

14 Wise men ¹play up knowledge: but the mouth of the foolish is near destruction.

15 The ⁹rich man's wealth is his strong city; ^rthe destruction of the poor is their poverty.

16 The ¹labour of the righteous tendeth to life: ^tthe fruit of the wicked to sin.

17 He is ⁱⁿ the way of life that keepeth instruction: but ^uhe that refuseth reproof ⁶erreth.

18 He ²that hideth hatred with lying lips, and he ⁷that uttereth a slander, is a fool.

19 In ^{the} multitude of words there wanteth not sin: ^{but} he that refraineth his lips is wise.

20 The tongue of the just is ^{as} choice silver: the heart of the wicked is little worth.

21 The lips of the righteous ^bfeed many: but fools die for want of ¹wisdom.

22 The blessing of the LORD, ^{it} maketh rich, and ^dhe addeth no sorrow with it.

CHAPTER XI.

¹A ^{FALSE} balance is abomination to the LORD: but ²a just weight is his delight.

2 When pride cometh, then cometh shame: ^{but} with the lowly is wisdom.

3 ^{The} integrity of the upright shall guide them: but the perverseness of transgressors shall destroy them.

4 Riches profit not in the day of wrath: but righteousness delivereth from death.

5 The righteousness of the perfect shall ^{direct} his way: but the wicked shall fall by his own wickedness.

6 The righteousness of the upright shall deliver them: but transgressors shall be taken in their own naughtiness.

7 When a wicked man dieth, his expectation shall perish; and the hope of unjust men perisheth.

8 The righteous is delivered out of trouble, and the wicked cometh in his stead.

9 An hypocrite with ^{his} mouth destroyeth his neighbour: but ^dthrough knowledge shall the just be delivered.

which is created by the wisdom of a son. The father's heart is far more excited by his son's advancement than by his own. The wise and the good extolling his son, is twice to extol himself. Of all the causes which burden and break the mother's heart, the heaviest is the folly of her cherished offspring. While the Scriptures teach throughout that, in everything, man is dependent for success on God, they are careful to connect means with ends. A slack hand ends in poverty, and a diligent hand conducts to wealth. The principle applies alike to business and to religion. Presumption and enthusiasm have made havoc in both these directions; and it will be the wisdom of every man to profit by the example. Just men are generally approved during their lifetime; but almost invariably so when they have been numbered with the dead. Their memory is then blessed by those who knew their worth, and shared in their kindness. Examples are to be found in private Christians, ministers of the Word, public benefactors, and rulers of the people. How different is the lot of the wicked, whose very name becomes the subject of rottenness! Ver. 19-32. Next to the management of the heart, the most difficult and the most important is the government of the tongue. Eminence in this is the result of experience and observation, and hence it is seldom attained till later life.

Young people, generally, even those under the influence of Christian principle, are here often sadly at fault. Few things are so demonstrative of improving wisdom, and growing piety, as a well-regulated tongue. This regulation has to do alike with silence and with speech; when it is necessary to speak at all. "The mouth of the just bringeth forth wisdom: but the froward tongue shall be cut out." How great, then, must be the sin, if it be estimated by the punishment!

Chap. XI. 1-20. Man's best guide is integrity;—"He that walketh uprightly, walketh surely." Righteousness of character is, in its own nature, light, which is always useful to guide the perplexed in a safe path. This wonderful Book, in every chapter, demonstrates the essential sameness of human society. When goodness combines with greatness in the persons of Rulers and Magistrates, that greatness acquires an indefinite force in influencing the public mind. When it goes well with such, the city rejoices. On the other hand, when the wicked fall from power, or are overtaken by fatal calamities, so far from the people regretting, they shout for joy. The history of almost every nation in Europe supplies illustrations of the principles here laid down. Again, the doctrine of the New Testament, touching 14 Frowardness is in his heart, ^mhe deviseth mischief continually; ⁿhe ²soweth discord.

15 Therefore shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall ^ohe be broken without remedy.

16 ¶ These ^psix things doth the LORD hate: yea, seven are an abomination ²unto him:

17 ⁴A proud look, ⁴a lying tongue, ⁴and hands that shed innocent blood,

18 An ⁴heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, ⁴feet that be swift in running to mischief, 19 ⁴A false witness that speaketh lies, and he ⁴that soweth discord among brethren.

20 ¶ My son, keep thy father's commandment, and forsake not the law of thy mother:

21 Bind them continually upon thine heart, and tie them about thy neck.

22 When thou goest, it shall lead thee; when thou sleepest, it shall keep thee; and when thou awakest, it shall talk with thee.

23 For ⁷the commandment is a ⁶lamp; and the law is light; ²and reproofs of instruction are the way of life:

24 To ²keep thee from the evil woman, from the flattery ⁶of the tongue of a strange woman.

25 ^bLust not after her beauty in thine heart; neither let her ⁴take thee with her eyelids:

26 For ^dby means of a whorish woman a man is brought to ^aa piece of bread; and ¹the adulteress will ¹hunt for the precious life.

27 Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burnt?

28 Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burnt?

29 So ⁴he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife; whosoever ¹toucheth her shall not be innocent.

30 Men do not despise a thief, if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry:

31 But ¹if he be found, he shall restore sevenfold; ¹he shall give all the substance of his house.

32 But whoso committeth adultery with a woman ¹lacketh ⁸understanding: he that doeth it destroyeth his own soul.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Solomon persuadeth to a sincere and kind familiarity with wisdom. 6 In an example of his own experience, he sheweth 10 the cunning of a lewd woman, 22 and the desperate simplicity of a wanton youth.

^a MY son, keep my words, and lay up my commandments with thee.

2 Keep my commandments, and live; and my law as the apple of thine eye.

3 ^bBind them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thine heart.

4 Say unto wisdom, ^cThou art my sister; and call understanding thy kinswoman:

5 That they may keep thee from the strange woman, from the stranger which flattereth with her words.

6 ¶ For at the window of my house I looked through my casement,

7 And beheld among the simple ones, I discerned among ¹the youths, a young man void of understanding,

8 Passing through the street ^dnear her corner; and he went the way to her house,

9 In ^ethe twilight, in the ²evening, in the black and dark night;

10 And, behold, there met him a woman with ^fthe attire of an harlot, and ³subtile of heart.

11 (She is ⁴bloud and stubborn; her feet abide not in her house:

12 Now is she without, now in the streets, and lieth in wait at every corner.)

13 So she caught him, and kissed him, and ⁵with an impudent face said unto him,

14 ⁴I have peace-offerings with me; this day have I paid my vows:

15 Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee.

16 I have ¹decked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved works, with ⁶fine linen of Egypt.

17 I have ¹perfumed my bed ^mwith myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.

ledge, by the study of the Word and works of God, and the great living world around. Ver. 16-19. The matter comprised in these seven things deserves to be deeply and prayerfully pondered, in conjunction with the closest self-examination. These seven things withdrawn from society, would render earth—bad as it is now—a scene approaching to that of heaven. Ver. 20-36. He who makes light of his father's commandment, and forsakes the law of his mother, is on the road to ruin. Of all counsellors, these are most to be relied on, since none are so upright and so affectionate, and withal so thoroughly disinterested. Sin and punishment cannot possibly be separated. The sinner may seek for a hiding-place, but the earth can furnish him with none where his sin will not find him out. The transgression specified in these verses is the most heinous of which humanity is capable; and as is its character, such are its consequences; it is fraught with misery unutterable to all concerned.

Chap. VII. 1-27. The wisdom of the counsels here presented has been proved and tested in every age. One of the most eminent of Englishmen has left the following upon record for the benefit of his children:—"If I omit reading a portion of Scripture in the morning, it never goes well with me through the day." Let the promise and the precept go together; that men may obey the one, they must believe the other. The Divine promise is a power to which there is no other limit than faith. The path of danger was known to Solomon; and hence he is careful to erect finger-posts where the peril is most imminent. Danger is much an affair of time, place, and circumstances. Idleness, late hours, a vacant mind, evil company, and strong drink—these are among the materials of destruction. They have proved the overthrow of unsuspecting millions of the young; and they will continue to do so until the knowledge of God shall have filled the earth—when society will exhibit self-

18 Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning; let us solace ourselves with loves:

19 For ^athe goodman is not at home, ^bhe is gone a long journey:

20 He hath taken a bag of money ^cwith him, and will come home at ^dthe day appointed.

21 ^eWith her much fair speech she caused him to yield, with the flattering of her lips she forced him.

22 He goeth after her ^fstraightway, ^gas an ox goeth to the slaughter, or as a fool to ^hthe correction of the stocks;

23 Till ⁱa dart strike through his liver; as a bird hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not that it is for his life.

24 ^jHearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth:

25 Let not thine heart decline to her ways, go not astray in her paths:

26 For she hath cast down many wounded; yea, many strong ^kmen have been slain by her.

27 Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death.

Chap. VIII. 1. The portraiture of Wisdom presented in this chapter is one of ineffable beauty. Her language is full of love to the human race, and intensely concerned to promote their welfare. She is a meet emblem of the Saviour, his Apostles and Evangelists, and the ministers of the Word, in diffusing the knowledge of the Lord throughout the earth. There is a peculiarity in the language which has excited some discussion among Biblical critics; closely examined, however, it seems to conduct to only one conclusion. The speaker assumes a personal attitude, and the utterances are personal; the properties are personal. Wisdom was set up from everlasting as the efficient Cause in the work of creation. The affections are personal—hatred love, joy, are all the attributes of a personal mind. The promises are personal, as also the commandment touching life and death. It is doubtful whether Solomon fully comprehended his own inspired words. We have authority from 1 Peter i. 10 for the fact, that the prophets were frequently ignorant of the entire scope of their own communications. The conclusion, then, that is reached is, that the language of the chapter refers not to attributes, but to a

CHAPTER VII.

1 Solomon persuadeth to a sincere and kind familiarity with wisdom. 6 In an example of his own experience, he sheweth 10 the cunning of a lewd woman, 22 and the desperate simplicity of a wanton youth.

MY son, keep my words, and lay up my commandments with thee.

2 Keep my commandments, and live; and my law as the apple of thine eye.

3 ^bBind them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thine heart.

4 Say unto wisdom, ^cThou art my sister; and call understanding ^{thy}kinswoman:

5 That they may keep thee from the strange woman, from the stranger which flattereth with her words.

6 ¶ For at the window of my house I looked through my casement,

7 And beheld among the simple ones, I discerned among ¹the youths, a young man void of understanding,

8 Passing through the street ^dnear her corner; and he went the way to her house,

9 In ^ethe twilight, in the ²evening, in the black and dark night;

10 And, behold, there met him a woman ^{with}the attire of an harlot, and ²subtile of heart.

11 (She is ^bloud and stubborn; her feet abide not in her house:

12 Now is ^{she} without, now in the streets, and lieth in wait at every corner.)

13 So she caught him, and kissed him, and ²with an impudent face said unto him,

14 ⁴I have peace-offerings with me; this day have I paid my vows:

15 Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee.

16 I have ¹decked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved ^{works}, with ²fine linen of Egypt.

17 I have ¹perfumed my bed ²with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.

ledge, by the study of the Word and works of God, and the great living world around. Ver. 16-19. The matter comprised in these seven things deserves to be deeply and prayerfully pondered, in conjunction with the closest self-examination. These seven things withdrawn from society, would render earth—bad as it is now—a scene approaching to that of heaven. Ver. 20-35. He who makes light of his father's commandment, and forsakes the law of his mother, is on the road to ruin. Of all counsellors, these are most to be relied on, since none are so upright and so affectionate, and withal so thoroughly disinterested. Sin and punishment cannot possibly be separated. The sinner may seek for a hiding-place, but the earth can furnish him with none where his sin will not find him out. The transgression specified in these verses is the most heinous of which humanity is capable; and as its character, such are its consequences; it is fraught with misery unutterable to all concerned.

Chap. VII. 1-27. The wisdom of the counsels here presented has been proved and tested in every age. One of the most eminent of Englishmen has left the following upon record for the benefit of his children:—"If I omit reading a portion of Scripture in the morning, it never goes well with me through the day." Let the promise and the precept go together; that men may obey the one, they must believe the other. The Divine promise is a power to which there is no other limit than faith. The path of danger was known to Solomon; and hence he is careful to erect finger-posts where the peril is most imminent. Danger is much an affair of time, place, and circumstances. Idleness, late hours, a vacant mind, evil company, and strong drink—these are among the materials of destruction. They have proved the overthrow of unsuspecting millions of the young; and they will continue to do so until the knowledge of God shall have filled the earth—when society will exhibit self-

18 Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning; let us solace ourselves with loves:

19 For ^athe goodman is not at home, ^ohe is gone a long journey:

20 He hath taken a bag of money ^bwith him, and will come home at ^cthe day appointed.

21 ^pWith her much fair speech she caused him to yield, with the flattering of her lips she forced him.

22 He goeth after her ⁷straightway, ^qas an ox goeth to the slaughter, or as a fool to ^rthe correction of the stocks;

23 Till ^aa dart strike through his liver; as a bird hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not that it is for his life.

24 ^tHearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth:

25 Let not thine heart decline to her ways, go not astray in her paths:

26 For she hath cast down many wounded; yea, many strong men have been slain by her.

27 Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death.

DOth not wisdom cry? and understanding put forth her voice?

2 She standeth in the top of high places, by the way in the places of the paths;

3 She ^acrieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the doors:

4 Unto you, O men, I call; and my voice is to the sons of man.

5 O ye simple, understand wisdom; and, ye fools, be ye of an understanding heart.

6 ^tHear; ^bfor I will speak of excellent things; and ^cthe opening of my lips shall be right things.

control, steady employment, regulated energy, and manly consecration of soul, body, and spirit to the service of the great Creator.

Chap. VIII. 1. The portraiture of Wisdom presented in this chapter is one of ineffable beauty. Her language is full of love to the human race, and intensely concerned to promote their welfare. She is a meet emblem of the Saviour, his Apostles and Evangelists, and the ministers of the Word, in diffusing the knowledge of the Lord throughout the earth. There is a peculiarity in the language which has excited some discussion among Biblical critics; closely examined, however, it seems to conduct to only one conclusion. The speaker assumes a personal attitude, and the utterances are personal; the properties are personal. Wisdom was set up from everlasting as the efficient Cause in the work of creation. The affections are personal—hatred love, joy, are all the attributes of a personal mind. The promises are personal, as also the commandment touching life and death. It is doubtful whether Solomon fully comprehended his own inspired words. We have authority from 1 Peter i. 10 for the fact, that the prophets were frequently ignorant of the entire scope of their own communications. The conclusion, then, that is reached is, that the language of the chapter refers not to attributes, but to a

CHAPTER X.

From this chapter to the five-and-twentieth are sundry observations of moral virtues, and their contrary vices.

THE Proverbs of Solomon. ^aA wise son
 maketh a glad father: but a foolish
 son is the heaviness of his mother.

2 ^bTreasures of wickedness profit nothing: but righteousness delivereth from death.

3 ^cThe LORD ^dwill not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish: but he casteth away ^ethe substance of the wicked.

4 He becometh poor that dealeth ^fwith a slack hand: ^gbut the hand of the diligent maketh rich.

5 He that ^hgathereth in summer is a wise son: but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame.

6 Blessings are upon the head of the just: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

7 The ⁱmemory of the just is blessed;
 but ^jthe name of the wicked shall rot.

8 The ^kwise in heart will receive commandments: ^lbut ^ma prating fool shall ⁿfall.

9 He ^othat walketh uprightly walketh

Person, and that Person the Son of God, Creator of the universe, the Prophet, Priest, King, and Almighty Saviour of his people. This, from the earliest age, has been the accredited interpretation of the chapter amongst the most enlightened and the holiest of men. Let Christians, therefore, rejoice in Christ the Lord, in whom are all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, and remember that it is their privilege to receive out of his fulness
 grace for grace. Christ is the wisdom of God incarnate;
 and they who want have only to ask of him, who will give whatever is necessary to meet their requirements
 both for time and for eternity.

Chap. IX. 1-12. These verses belong to the foregoing chapter, from which they ought not to have been separated. The same beautiful idea is here carried out and completed. We have the gospel presented under a highly poetical simile. Wisdom, at a vast expense, has reared a palace, where she has spread a table for a starving world, whom she invites to the "feast of fat things." The invitations are sent forth freely into every quarter, while she herself unites in the proclamation. It is not improbable that Solomon here referred to his own magnificent temple, to which men were summoned for the worship of God, instead of frequenting scenes of vice and dissipation; and, if so, he so far expounds the mystery of that marvellous structure which was typical of Christ and his gospel. As to the mission of the maidens, it is exemplified in the East at the present hour. A great European traveller states that he saw at Alexandria, ten or twelve women going about, and inviting people to a banquet, making a particular kind of crying noise. These Eastern customs meet us at every turn, and tend to illustrate the Scripture, and confirm the truth of the representations of ancient events, habits, and customs. The lesson taught is solemnly emphatic.

 It ought to be deeply affecting even to the most thoughtless, that all their works in time bear on eternity; that if they be wise, it is for themselves; that if they scorn and disobey, they themselves shall bear the consequences.
 Whatever men sow, that they shall reap—life or death,
 and both extending through eternity. Ver. 13-18.
 Wisdom now gives place to Folly, who is intent on calling the attention of mankind, not to save but to destroy them. The world is full of seductive influences, adapting itself to every variety of condition. Temptations are strewn in every path, and there is no place in which her syren song is not heard. Compliance is ruin; there is no safety but in flight. Every reader of these words is contended for by holiness and sin. The gospel feast is spread in opposition to the feast of the world; and every man will be found either at the one or at the other.
 It behoves each reader, therefore, to inquire whose he is, and where he is. The last question will aid in answering the first.

Chap. X. 1-18. We have here a striking development of character. The wicked and the righteous are placed in opposition, and their principles indicated by their conduct. There is no parental joy comparable to that surely: ¹but he that perverteth his ways shall be known.

10 He ¹that winketh with the eye causeth sorrow: ²but a prating fool shall ⁴fall.

11 The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

12 Hatred stirreth up strifes: but love covereth all sins.

13 In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found: but ^aa rod is for the back of him that is void of ^bunderstanding.

14 Wise men ¹play up knowledge: but the mouth of the foolish is near destruction.

15 The ^arich man's wealth is his strong city; ²the destruction of the poor is their poverty.

16 The ^alabour of the righteous tendeth to life: ^bthe fruit of the wicked to sin.

17 He is ^ain the way of life that keepeth instruction: but ^bhe that refuseth reproof ^cerreth.

18 He ^athat hideth hatred with lying lips, and he ^bthat uttereth a slander, is a fool.

19 In ^athe multitude of words there wanteth not sin: ^bbut he that refraineth his lips is wise.

20 The tongue of the just is ^achoice silver: the heart of the wicked is little worth.

21 The lips of the righteous ^bfeed many: but fools die for want of ^cwisdom.

22 The blessing of the LORD, ^ait maketh rich, and ^bhe addeth no sorrow with it.

23 It is ^aas sport to a fool to do mischief: but a man of understanding hath wisdom.

24 The fear of the wicked, it shall come upon him: but the desire of the righteous shall be granted.

25 As the whirlwind passeth, so is the wicked ^ano more: but the righteous is ^ban everlasting foundation.

26 As ^avinegar to the teeth, and ^bas

CHAPTER XI.

¹A FALSE balance is abomination to the LORD: but ²a just weight is his delight.

2 When pride cometh, then cometh shame: ^abut with the lowly is wisdom.

3 ^aThe integrity of the upright shall guide them: but the perverseness of transgressors shall destroy them.

8 The righteous is delivered out of trouble, and the wicked cometh in his stead.

9 An hypocrite with his mouth destroyeth his neighbour: but ^athrough knowledge shall the just be delivered.

10 When ^ait goeth well with the right-which is created by the wisdom of a son. The father's heart is far more excited by his son's advancement than by his own. The wise and the good extolling his son, is twice to extol himself. Of all the causes which burden and break the mother's heart, the heaviest is the folly of her cherished offspring. While the Scriptures teach throughout that, in everything, man is dependent for success on God, they are careful to connect means with ends. A slack hand ends in poverty, and a diligent hand conducts to wealth. The principle applies alike to business and to religion. Presumption and enthusiasm have made havoc in both these directions; and it will be the wisdom of every man to profit by the example. Just men are generally approved during their lifetime; but almost invariably so when they have been numbered with the dead. Their memory is then blessed by those who knew their worth, and shared in their kindness. Examples are to be found in private Christians, ministers of the Word, public benefactors, and rulers of the people. How different is the lot of the wicked, whose very name becomes the subject of rottenness! Ver. 19-32. Next to the management of the heart, the most difficult and the most important is the government of the tongue. Eminence in this is the result of experience and observation, and hence it is seldom attained till later life.

Young people, generally, even those under the influence of Christian principle, are here often sadly at fault. Few things are so demonstrative of improving wisdom, and growing piety, as a well-regulated tongue. This regulation has to do alike with silence and with speech; when it is necessary to speak at all. "The mouth of the just bringeth forth wisdom: but the froward tongue shall be cut out." How great, then, must be the sin, if it be estimated by the punishment!

Chap. XI. 1-20. Man's best guide is integrity;—"He that walketh uprightly, walketh surely." Righteousness of character is, in its own nature, light, which is always useful to guide the perplexed in a safe path. This wonderful Book, in every chapter, demonstrates the essential sameness of human society. When goodness combines with greatness in the persons of Rulers and Magistrates, that greatness acquires an indefinite force in influencing the public mind. When it goes well with such, the city rejoices. On the other hand, when the wicked fall from power, or are overtaken by fatal calamities, so far from the people regretting, they shout for joy. The history of almost every nation in Europe supplies illustrations of the principles here laid down. Again, the doctrine of the New Testament, touching eous, the city rejoiceth; and when the wicked perish, there is shouting.

11 By the blessing of the upright the city is exalted: but it is overthrown by the mouth of the wicked.

12 He that is void of wisdom despiseth his neighbour: but a man of understanding holdeth his peace.

13 A talebearer revealeth secrets: but he that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter.

14 Where no counsel is, the people fall: but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety.

15 He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it; and he that hateth suretish ship is sure.

16 A gracious woman retaineth honour; and strong men retain riches.

17 The merciful man doeth good to his own soul: but he that is cruel troubleth his own flesh.

18 The wicked worketh a deceitful work: but to him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward.

19 As righteousness tendeth to life; so he that pursueth evil, pursueth it to his own death.

20 They that are of a froward heart are abomination to the LORD: but such as are upright in their way, are his delight.

21 Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished: but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered.

22 As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion.

23 The desire of the righteous is only good; but the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

works and their influence on their author, is strikingly exemplified by Solomon. The man that shews mercy finds his account in it; his deed does good to his own soul; but the cruel oppressor of his fellow-creature pays the penalty of his barbarity in his own spirit; for, in spite of his rage, and the gratification it may seem for a moment to bring, he "troubleth his own flesh." Here again history supplies abundant illustrations. Ver. 21-27. The joining of hand in hand is a term which, in the East, signified the formation of a compact. The custom still prevails. Many of the Oriental women still wear a jewel of gold in their nostrils, frequently of great beauty; but as such a jewel would be in the snout of a swine an unseemly thing, so is beauty in a foolish woman—her fairness only serves to attract more attention to her indiscretion. She is the swine with the gem in its nose—a figure which ought deeply to affect those whom it concerns. Ver. 24, 25, contain a highly important principle, which, in every age, has had much to do with the operations of Christian benevolence. Examples illustrative of the truth of these encouraging words are found in every land. Many a generous man has not only reared a reputable family, but surrounded them with an abundance of comforts of life; while the grinding and the hard-hearted, in spite of their exactions, have been plunged into poverty. But the principle goes beyond mere pecuniary matters, and extends to the diffusion of Gospel truth. The liberal soul becomes fat through its own operations; and he that waters, so far from being parched, is himself also watered. In doing good, men get good. In furthering the welfare of their neighbours, they secure their own. Ver. 28-31. It is not a crime to possess riches, but to trust in them. Men may be at once rich and righteous; but such men, like their Lord, will go about doing good, and prize their wealth mainly for the opportunities it furnishes of feeding and clothing Christ in the person of his people. The "winning of souls" is an idea known only to Inspiration. Solomon was familiar with it, and he pronounces as "wise" the man that lays himself out to realise it. The day draws on when this will be found, beyond everything else, the best investment of time, labour, and substance. Strange it is, that even the people of God should be so little concerned about so productive an enterprise.

Chap. XII. 1-28. Knowledge and instruction generally go together. That instruction may be carried on by self, or proceed from others; but which ever it be, it is indispensable to knowledge. Where nothing is read, and nothing heard, it is presumption to look for intelligence. Even the brute creation finds its account in the spread of the Gospel. True piety is always productive of humanity. The righteous man regardeth the life of his beast, while the tender mercies of the wicked are cruelty. A world without Christ, is a world without humanity. The earth, once filled with his glory, will present a new aspect; the widow and the orphan, the stranger and the outcast—all flesh, who are the proper subjects of compassion, will obtain both sympathy and succour. Slavery, oppression, and wrong, in every shape, will disappear, and the family of God will stand forth in the beauty of holy brotherhood. No small portion of human suffering is the fruit of evil tongues: "there is that speaketh like the piercings of a sword." How emphatic, and how true! Falsehood, slander, and calumny, have blighted many a heart, and desolated many a home!

7 The wicked are overthrown, and are not: but the house of the righteous shall stand.

8 A man shall be ^hcommended according to his wisdom: but ^lhe that is ^lof a perverse heart shall be despised.

9 He that is despised, and hath a servant, is better than he that honoureth himself, and lacketh bread.

10 A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast: but the ²tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.

11 He that ^htilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread: but ^lhe that followeth vain persons is void of understanding.

12 The wicked ^mdesireth the ³net of evil men: but ^lthe root of the righteous yieldeth fruit.

13 The ⁴wicked is snared by the transgression of his lips: but the just shall come out of trouble.

14 A man shall be ^osatisfied with good by the fruit of his mouth; ^pand the recompence of a man's hands shall be rendered unto him.

15 The way of a fool is right in his own eyes: but he that hearkeneth unto counsel is wise.

16 A ^qfool's wrath is ⁶presently known; ^rbut a prudent man covereth shame.

17 He that speaketh truth sheweth forth righteousness: ^tbut a false witness deceit.

18 There is ^uthat speaketh like the piercings of a sword: ^xbut the tongue of the wise is health.

19 The ^ylip of truth shall be established for ever: ^zbut a lying tongue is but for a moment.

20 Deceit is in the heart of them that imagine evil: but to the counsellors of peace is joy.

21 There shall no evil happen to the just: but the wicked shall be filled with mischief.

22 Lying lips are abomination to the LORD: but they that deal truly are his delight.

23 A prudent man concealeth knowledge: but the heart of fools proclaimeth foolishness.

24 The hand of the diligent shall bear rule: but the ⁶slothful shall be under tribute.

14 The law of the wise is a fountain of life, ^rto depart from the snares of death.

15 Good understanding giveth favour: but the way of transgressors is hard.

Every utterance of the wicked has been as the stab of a dagger! This chapter bears very strongly on the importance of diligence, which accounts, to a large extent, for the great diversities of human condition. That men may reap, they must sow; and between the measure of the one, and the measure of the other, there is an established connexion. "The hand of the diligent shall bear rule; but the slothful shall be under tribute." Let no man, therefore, complain against the arrangements of Providence, till he shall have been satisfied that he has performed his own part.

Chap. XIII. 1-19. The seat of happiness is in the heart, not in houses and lands, and bills and bonds. Even in the days of Solomon there were men very poor, who yet had great riches; and so it is still. It were well that, in this commercial age and country, all young men should familiarise themselves with this most precious book, which would teach them, that "wealth obtained by vanity will be diminished." Examples of this from time to time are everywhere occurring. Men, panting to be rich, are under the temptation of resorting to unrighteous means, and the result, in a vast majority of instances, is discovery, disgrace, and utter ruin; whereas, "he that gathereth by labour shall increase." Be his revenues ever so small, they were honestly realised: and, with the blessing of God, he can hold on his way. Ver. 20-25. Ver. 20 ought to be indelibly engraven on the heart of every young man. His company will form his character: associating with fools will result in folly; but walking with wise men, in wisdom; and the fruits of wisdom will rejoice the heart. A man may be very poor, and yet very good; and "a good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children." A legacy of example, reputation, and prayer, is the best of all legacies; happy they who enjoy them! The matter of chastisement did not escape the capacious mind of Solomon. An indiscreet affection would connect hatred with the use of the rod: but Solomon reverses the matter. "He that spareth the rod hateth his son." The term rod, however, must not be taken in a sense too literal. Anything that expresses parental dissatisfaction, disapproval, or indignation, to an ingenuous child, will be viewed and felt as the father's rod. But where the use of the rod, in its literal sense, is necessary, it will not be withheld, as "a wise father that loveth him, chasteneth him betimes." Much will depend on this; early punishments, wisely administered, rarely fail of good effects; whereas late punishments are scarcely ever productive of good. They only tend further to harden, to deprave, and to drive the object of them to more desperate courses. With proper government, whether in families or schools, as a rule, personal chastisement will very rarely be necessary. Moral means are incomparably the best, and, skilfully employed, they seldom fail.

Chap. XIV. 1-13. Great prominence is here given to woman as the source of prosperity; and experience shews that the principle is one of all time. The numbers of men are very great who ascribe their success to the wisdom and management of their wives. On the other hand, to an opposite, but a corresponding cause, the ruin of multitudes may be traced. Scorn is a poor preparation for the search of wisdom; amid much lofty talk and vain pretension, men will never attain to it. Sin is often a cause of levity with thoughtless men; but they will find, when too late, that it is no matter for mockery. They may boast that their way is right, but the end will be death. No man ever yet hardened himself against God and prospered. Ver. 14-25. The fool rages where the wise man trembles; the former advances and is destroyed, the other flees and is safe. Goodness is the only sure road to promotion; the path may seem to be long, but the desired end will come at last. For a season, the wicked may seem to be in advance of the righteous; but sooner or later they will change places. Ver. 20 presents a severe but just reproof against mankind. Men shun the poor, whatever their personal excellence, and cleave to the rich, however worthless. Were men like God, they would love as he loves, and hate as he hates; the heart, not the house—character, not fortune, would regulate their affections. Ver. 26-35. refuge from danger, and a fountain of life. In a vain code of this world's honour, heat and haste of temper are identified with spirit, dignity, and manhood. The code of Scripture reverses the matter: he that is slow to wrath is of great understanding; but he that is hasty of spirit exalteth folly. The oppression of the poor ranks with great crimes against God. In itself it is a proof of an evil heart. They who have tasted the mercy of God, never fail of compassion to their suffering fellow-creatures. The most advantageous place for comparing the wicked with the righteous is the brink of eternity; where desperation seizes the one, hope fills the other. Hitherto nations have sought exaltation by the extension of sovereignty through successful war; but, according to the Scriptures, not rule, but righteousness, exalts a nation. That in which they boast is really their reproach; it is unchrist-like, and therefore unchristian. Goodness is greatness, benevolence is glory, whether in an individual or in a kingdom. These principles will one day receive universal exemplification; and when that period shall arrive, the present will present a frightful commentary on the past, illustrating the wickedness and the folly of mankind.

Chap. XV. 1-12. The power of a soft answer in turning wrath away, can only be comprehended by those that have made the experiment. Multitudes who have erred might have averted the penalties which their folly brought upon them, by resorting to this expedient. Instead of this, however, they have frequently added to their offences by their deportment, and by the subterfuges to which they have had recourse. Human nature is so constituted, even in the breasts of ungodly men, that they cannot resist the force of a soft answer. The principle applies even to the Divine nature. With penitence, confession, and submission, men take hold of the strength of God; the rod falls from his hand, and they are accepted. The lesson is of infinite importance to all mankind, but especially to the young, and those who are still pushing their way up in society. Much favour has been forfeited, and many a valuable place has been lost, through pride prompting to the neglect of this rule. A man's position, whether as a superior or a subordinate, is intimately connected with the government of the tongue. It is the most efficient instrument in promoting loss or gain, in making friends or foes. "A wholesome tongue is a tree of life." There is a world of wisdom in the expression. If it be a privilege for men possessing wealth to disperse it, how much greater is that of the wise in dispersing knowledge! Sacrifice is a duty, but it is not the first duty; that it may be acceptable, it must flow from a believing, loving, grateful heart. Ver. 10 comprises a principle of great moment; it receives exemplification from every department of human society, and strikingly illustrates the depravity of man. So far from correction being grievous to him that forsaketh the way, it ought to be accepted with grateful joy. Is it not the discovery of danger, and a warning against destruction? Why, then, should a benefactor be viewed as an enemy? The words with which it is connected, "He that hateth reproof shall die, may well prevent men from falling into such an error. Ver. 13-24. Ver. 16, 17 present some of the first lessons of Scripture. Great treasure, happily, is not within the reach of the mass of mankind; but the fear of the Lord is, which is far better. Simple fare and sumptuous festivity have no necessary connexion with happiness, which wholly turns upon peace and love. Here again the poor and the rich are placed upon a level. A family that can afford nothing beyond vegetables for a dinner, may yet possess a happiness unknown in the mansions of nobility. The joy which springs from folly is delusion; understanding may excite less, but it will profit more. That counsel may be useful, those that give it must be wise, else the larger the multitude the greater the confusion. Ver. 25-33. Ver. 28 sets forth a principle of great importance in life. In all matters of moment it is expedient to think much, and to be sparing of words. The habit, more especially to hot temperaments, may be difficult of formation, but it will reward the trouble. In cases of importance, it will be expedient not only to study the answer, but to lift up the heart to God for guidance. Nehemiah presents a fine example of this: before answering the question of the king, he says, "So I prayed unto the God of heaven." Mind is quick, and can easily do two such things at the same time. It may be a pleasure to the mouth of the wicked to "pour out evil things," but that pleasure will be dearly purchased.

Chap. XVI. 1-15. The great secret of a holy life is an habitual recognition of the Divine presence. If man would look to God to prepare his heart, and to guide his tongue, he would rarely think or speak amiss. Such is human nature, that things the most important are the most difficult: it is far easier for a man to take his works into his own hand, or to intrust them to others, than to commit them to the Lord. Against this perilous wickedness, it behoves every man to be upon his guard, and also to offer frequent prayer. Ver. 7 shews the extent to which an unseen Hand operates on the minds of men, and points out a short and easy method of subduing opponents, and securing peace; but the human heart finds it more gratifying to give battle to its enemies than to seek to please its Lord. Wickedness is abominable in proportion to the prominence of the perpetrator: a minor offence in a humble subject, becomes a revolting outrage in a powerful sovereign. The position of kings, however, is a circumstance which supplies strong temptation. In no other situation is human nature so surrounded with circumstances favourable to its development, which may account for the fact alleged by Daniel the prophet, that they have been generally the "basest of men." All history but serves to confirm and illustrate this language. Ver. 13 rather shews what kings should be than what they are. When "righteous lips" become their delight, courts will be filled and sovereigns served by the wise and the upright. Ver. 16-33. The search for gold is seldom successful, while that for understanding, properly conducted, never fails. How is it, then, that man is so foolish as to sacrifice the greater to the less, the wheat to the chaff? Ver. 18 is a noted proverb, of which common life supplies daily illustrations. To be wise in heart is far better than to be what the world calls successful in life. That very wisdom, however, may obstruct a man's earthly promotion, but it will exalt his character, magnify his God, and prepare him for the service of heaven. Pleasant words may yet be words of danger, and that which is sweet as the honeycomb may yet be deadly poison. The flatterer pleases, but he destroys. The faithful friend often offends, but his words are as a medicine. It is not easy, in this world of wickedness, to combine the pleasing with the true; but in a world of perfect men all words will be pleasant, the expressions of purity and love addressed to love and purity. There, needful reproof will be unknown, because unnecessary, and the accents of the flatterer will never be heard. Piety is beautiful in early youth, and not less beautiful in old age. No crown of glory is comparable to the hoary head, if found in the way of righteousness. Among the many studies which it behoves man to cultivate, a chief place is due to the rule of their own spirit. The achievement, to the carnal eye, may seem a humble one, and even be despised as cowardice; but it is better than the courage which takes a city. The hand of the Lord extends to the least as well as the greatest—the casting of a lot, and the elevation of a king.

Chap. XVII. 1-26. In every age people have been but too ready to identify happiness with rank. Solomon, throughout this Book, incessantly combats the idea, shewing that there is no connexion between poverty and misery, wealth and felicity. All the happiness of which humanity is capable is within the reach of every creature.

Men have only to turn from iniquity, to receive the Gospel, and to consecrate themselves to the Son of God, that the peace that passeth all understanding may keep their hearts and minds. A wise servant has frequently become the employer of his master's son. Money inherited is often recklessly spent; and in this way the position of parties becomes changed. The light in which men look upon the poor may be taken as a fair test of character; he who mocks them reproaches his Maker, who will visit him in due season with the chastisement due to his conduct. The feelings with which men view calamities reveal the true state of their hearts. No really good man can be glad at such events; but if such a man rejoice not at calamity, much less will he rejoice in iniquity, which, while it brings evil upon a fellow-creature, also dishonours the God of truth. The heart of the wise is susceptible; that of the fool is a stone; and hence the former feels one reproof more than the latter a hundred stripes. If mere money could procure wisdom, a wealthy fool might become a profound philosopher; but "he who hath no heart to it" will surround himself with tutors and professors to no purpose, whereas with a heart to it he may make vast progress even under a complication of appalling difficulties. Schools and colleges in every country have supplied illustrations. In this as much as in anything the proverb is exemplified, "Where there is a will there is a way." A cheerful disposition has in every age been favourable to health, whereas a drooping spirit has ever been injurious. Thus true piety, even in regard to the body, is fraught with benefit. The instances have been numerous of individuals pining away for months under a sense of sin, who, on coming to a knowledge of the truth, and obtaining peace with God, that moment began to improve in health. Ver. 27, 28. These verses comprise principles of great importance in personal conduct. The history of human kind, in every age and country, is exemplified in them. Men of the profoundest wisdom are rarely the first to offer their opinions, and can afford to wait; but people of an opposite character are ever impatient to command a hearing. Many a man would retain the respect of his neighbours by simply holding his peace. That he who waits in silence should be esteemed a man of understanding is remarkable, since the proof is purely negative, and it can only arise from the fact, that men of understanding have been ever remarkable for so doing.

Chap. XVIII. 1-16. The circuit of human knowledge is too vast for the bulk of mankind to compass it, but although few can attain the whole, many may a part; and in order to this, they must be the subjects of a strong desire, which is the foundation of success. In the absence of this, no man will comply with the conditions, or adopt the means indispensable to it. But if the desire be strong, he will bestir himself, and gird up the loins of his mind for the accomplishment of his object. From the constancy and the emphasis with which

Solomon, throughout this Book, condemns sloth and waste, we are impressively taught that this is one of the tendencies of human nature. A man of property, by continual waste, will inevitably descend to the lowest point of poverty; and a man with a productive business, which he neglects to cultivate, can never rise to competency. Such men, therefore, bid fair, ultimately, to become brothers in penury and misery. Humility is an important grace in personal character, which is fraught with the best results. Never yet did it bring any man to destruction, although it has conducted multitudes to honour. Ver. 17-24. Few Scriptures have been more frequently quoted than the opening verse in the affairs of the world. No day passes without countless instances of illustrations. Selfishness tends to bias the mind, as well as to dim the eye, or distort the vision. This holds alike in temporal and spiritual things, which accounts for the prayer of the Psalmist, that the Lord would search him, and try him, and see whether there were any wicked way within him. He that knows his own heart will least confide in its decisions, ever remembering its unparalleled deceitfulness. Among the many proofs which Solomon adduces of the deep depravity of man, not the least is contained in ver. 19. It were surely natural to infer, that of all offended men, a brother would be the most easily won, the most forward to overlook the failings of a brother, and the least disposed to exact from him with severity; but Solomon tells us it is not so, and universal experience confirms the statement. If the tongue possess such power for good or evil, surely the government of it ought, with all men, to be a matter of study and of prayer. The last verse is another of those precious maxims which are extensively in use: many a man has diminished, if not annihilated, the circle of his friends by his selfish coldness; whereas many others, starting in comparative isolation, by their frankness and generosity have increased their friends from one to a multitude. Friendships, based on similarity of tastes, views, pursuits, and objects, are often indestructible. The bond that binds such men together is far stronger than that of common brotherhood. Frequently, indeed, a friend will make sacrifices of time, and labour, and substance, for a friend, to an extent that few brothers would go. This fact, which reflects little credit on human nature, is yet wonderfully overruled for breaking up family monopolies; and if fraught with individual discomfort, it is largely promotive of the common good.

Chap. XIX. 1-16. Pretfulness against the Lord is always a proof of foolishness. No living man has a right to complain of any part of the Lord's dealings towards him. Ver. 4 is a heavy reproach on the sons of Adam. The language ought not to be thrown away upon rich men, who are but too ready to forget that their friends are attached, not by their worth but their substance. A change of circumstances would reveal to them the true state of the case. "The poor is separated from his neighbour." This ought not to be: friendship ought to be based on personal worth, and in no degree affected by the scale of earthly opulence. One may become richer without being better, and another poorer without being worse; the estimate ought not, therefore, to rest upon what men have or have not, but upon what they are in mind and morals, in knowledge and piety. "All the brethren of the poor do hate him; how much more do his friends go far from him," is language which ought to be a libel on mankind; but, unhappily, it is justified by fact. Men, even in moderate circumstances, are backward to claim poor relations, but it is not so where there is rank and opulence; in that case it is often the subject of ridiculous boast, and ostentatious publicity. The influence of true religion is to destroy this selfish principle, leading men to estimate themselves and each other by a higher standard. When Solomon says, "He that findeth a wife findeth a good thing, and obtaineth favour of the Lord," his language must be taken, not absolutely, but with the limitation that she be wise and good, otherwise the relation is a source of distress, not of comfort. It is a "prudent wife" that is "from the Lord." A "contentious wife," who is compared to a "continual dropping," is one of the heaviest calamities that can overtake a man. The expression may seem to indicate little, but the thing has a deadly power. This was one of the most cruel methods devised by the Inquisition for the destruction of heretics. This dropping for a given period on the head never failed to destroy life with the most intense torture. Ver. 17-29. Many are the encouragements which are given to the wealthy to exercise benevolence to the poor; but no Scripture sets the matter more strongly forth than does ver. 17. There are few exercises of Christian generosity that will prove a better investment than discreet benevolence to the poor.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE king's heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water: he turneth it whithersoever he will.

Early chastisements of children would save much heart-breakings and hopeless sorrow in later life. An indiscreet tenderness indulged in will engender the strongest passions, which, in the end, will prove the ruin of the individual, as well as a curse to his family and connexions.

Chap. XX. 1-16. While it is an honour for a man to cease from strife, it is sometimes difficult to determine the precise point, where it may be safely left off. Men engaged in the defence of truth or liberty, things in which the honour of God, and the welfare of men are concerned, are frequently compelled to proceed, when, were they to be governed by their own feelings, they would desist. In such cases, they will also have to contend with the disapprobation, perhaps the remonstrances, of the ill-judging, who are prepared to sacrifice the highest interests of earth and heaven to peace. Descent from just men that walk in their integrity involves very high responsibility, since it is both an honour and advantage. God is an example to men of equity; the Divine dispensations know nothing of divers weights and measures. As with men, so with children, they are known by their doings. Poverty, in all ages, and throughout the earth, has been the fruit of idleness. Ver. 14 presents a most unlovely aspect of human nature. As the world stands, it is needful for the buyer to be on his defence against the seller, and in turn the seller is to maintain a warfare with the buyer; but perfect truth and a right spirit would banish such things from the region of commerce. Nothing is wanted but to introduce the Royal Law, to set everything right there and everywhere. Ver. 17-30. The morrow will be the time to test the doings of to-day, as the hour of death will be the time to test the doings of a life-time. If the bread of deceit, however sweet at the moment, afterwards turn into gravel in the mouth, reflecting men will hesitate to eat it. Seeing that so much turns upon war, it of all things requires good advice before making it; and were such advice to be had by both parties, the wars of our world would be but few. The very climax of transgression is to defame or to imprecate judgment on a parent. He who is so lost to truth, love, and duty as to do so, is undone and ready for destruction. The spirit of man, undarkened by sin, is the candle of the Lord, which would never fail to conduct correct inquiries even in the deepest recesses of the soul. In proportion as that spirit is pure, it will be luminous, serving as a guide to itself, in the most intricate paths. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Chap. XXI. 1-17. The moral, as a thing of all times and places, should always take precedence of the ritual. It was, therefore, to no purpose that men abounded in sacrifice, while they neglected to do justice and judgment. The tendency of human nature is still to err in this direction, which renders it necessary for the soul to be constantly upon its watch. Treasures got by a lying tongue are but a light possession, and they frequently go as they come. The faith and patience of righteous men are sometimes tried by the prosperity of the wicked around them; but a little consideration of the source of their prosperity, with its accompaniments and results, will always suffice to relieve anxiety. Although he may prosper as the green bay-tree, the approaching winter will work desolation. When the righteous poor lift up their voice to cry for help, it behoves the hearer who has the means of relief to think twice before he turns a deaf ear, lest at a future day he himself may occupy their place. The pursuit of pleasure is a wasteful occupation even to the opulent; but for those whose subsistence is to be derived from industry, it is utter ruin. The love of wine and oil is unfavourable to the increase of property. Without frugality and economy, even an ample income will not suffice to realise a competence. Ver. 18-31. Solomon in this chapter glances more than once at the female sex, pointing out the misery of union or association with women of ungovernable tempers. The wise man teaches that anything is better, even dwelling in a corner of the house-top or in a wilderness, than with a "brawling, contentious, and angry woman." Experience and observation unite to confirm, that he who keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from troubles. Motive is everything. The sacrifice of the wicked, under any circumstances, is an abomination; but when it is actually offered with a view to further the purposes of iniquity, the wickedness is indefinitely enhanced.

Chap. XXII. 1-15. "A good name" does not mean celebrity, but esteem, respectability, confidence, which, to the truly upright and devout mind, is more precious than riches, since it is connected with a good conscience and a humble hope, that while the people of God approve, so will the common Father. Spirituality and the fear of the Lord are riches, and honour, and life. Ver. 6 has ever been celebrated as full of encouragement to careful domestic training. The commandment is explicit, and the promise is absolute. There is therefore the utmost reason to conclude, that, as a rule, wherever the training is properly conducted, the happy results will follow. The constitution of human society is such, that the rich naturally rule over the poor. This is the effect of circumstances rather than of any preconception on the part of the rich invading the rights of the poor. Were these rich men to lose their wealth, so that they should sink among the poor, the sceptre would speedily pass from their hands; and were the poor in turn to become wealthy, they would occupy the vacant place. Nothing can produce the social equality which a certain class of people are constantly clamoring for, but that which produces an equality of intelligence, integrity, industry and frugality. The same principle is comprised in the words, "The borrower is servant to the lender." If mere poverty involve inferiority and subservience to wealth, how much more the element of debt? This places the rich man still higher, and the poor man still lower. Happy he who "loveth pureness of heart!" From its abundance the mouth will speak, and the utterance will conciliate even the favour of the great. To activity, industry, and perseverance, there are no lions in the way, or if they be, they will be slain or put to flight. Ver. 16-23. Multitudes of fortunes have been built up by oppressing the poor, but the result has never been satisfactory; there has been no blessing in the acquisition. Ver. 24-29. These are precious verses for the youthful reader. Friendships with such parties as are here pointed out are neither satisfactory nor safe. They will never fail to prove a snare. It behoves a man to be on his guard against an excess of benevolence in the matter of surety, lest his heart prompt him to deeds which may prove his ruin. Where there is the slightest danger, no man should become surety for another unless he possess the means, and be disposed, in the event of necessity, to bear the consequences. Nothing can be more foolish than to do it with the possibility of having to pay by suffering his bed to be taken from under him.

CHAPTER XXIV.

BE "not thou envious against evil men, "neither desire to be with them ;

2 For their heart studieth destruction, and their lips talk of mischief.

3 Through wisdom is an house builded, and by understanding it is established.

4 And by knowledge shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches.

5 A wise man is 'strong ; yea, a man of knowledge "increaseth strength.

6 For "by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war : and in multitude of counsellors there is safety.

9 The "thought of foolishness is sin ; and "the scorner is an abomination to men.

10 "If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is "small.

11 If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and those that are ready to be slain ;

12 If thou sayest, Behold, we knew it not ; doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it ? and he that keepeth thy soul, doth not he know it ? and shall not he render to every man according to his works ?

13 My son, "eat thou honey, because it hypocrite, who, amidst professions of friendship, is hostile : "Eat and drink, saith he ; but his heart is not with thee." Under such circumstances, the choicest viands could hardly yield satisfaction even to a hungry man. Of all pursuits, that of wealth, in itself considered, is the least worthy of an immortal spirit ; even when successful, they may, in a moment, fly away. Solomon, in these utterances of wisdom, is not forgetful of the widow and the fatherless, whom he represents as under the special protection of the Most High, who will plead their cause with their oppressors. The children of pious and well-governed families sometimes envy the offspring of the ungodly who are permitted to indulge their passions and propensities at pleasure, and look upon themselves as hardly dealt with. Such envy, however, is without just foundation. It behoves them rather to pity such, while it will be their own wisdom to be in "the fear of the Lord all the day long." This, in the end, they will find to be the source of all true pleasure and lasting peace ; for there will be an end to earth and its gaieties, to man and his follies, and the expectation of the righteous shall not be cut off. Drunkenness and gluttony are incompatible with industry, and never fail, sooner or later, to plunge both individuals and families into the depths of misery. Ver. 22-23. No joy is so great as that which springs from wise and God-fearing children. Every parent may, in the highest sense, say with the apostle, I have no greater joy than this, to see my children walking in the truth. Ver. 29-35. This is a deeply affecting picture. Would that it might be indelibly impressed on the mind of every youthful reader !

It is a portraiture of a thing that has been realised in every age of the world. Seed and crop, cause and effect, have not more uniformly been connected than these evils with addictedness to wine. The passage is so forcible and vivid, that any attempt at a comment would only impair its beauty and its power. May God by his Spirit impress it on the heart of every reader !

Chap. XXIV. 1-10. The modern maxim, that "knowledge is power," is very remarkably illustrated in these verses, and throughout this Book. Through wisdom a house is built ; by knowledge its chambers are filled with pleasant and precious riches. A wise man is strong, and a man of knowledge increaseth strength. Thus, then, our wise men are, after all, indebted for this celebrated saying to the king of Israel. Ver. 11, 12. Nowhere is a more important doctrine enunciated concerning the duty of the Church to a perishing world. All flesh are being drawn unto death, and ready to be slain ; and it behoves the Church to know it. It was the command of her departing Lord, that she should forthwith betake herself to the great enterprise of the world's salvation. The doctrine now begins to be understood, and to be feebly recognised ; but the Church of Christ, in all her sections, is still but imperfectly awakened to it. How different the scale on which nations wage war against each other, and that on which the children of the kingdom conduct their spiritual campaign for a world's subjugation to the King of Zion ! Ver. 13-29. The knowledge of wisdom is meetly compared to the honey-comb ; no satisfaction is so exquisite. The exhortation, "Meddle not with them is good; and the honey-comb, which is sweet ⁴to thy taste:

14 So ¹shall the knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul: ^mwhen thou hast found it, then ⁿthere shall be a reward, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.

15 Lay not wait, O wicked man, against the dwelling of the righteous; ^ospoil not his resting-place:

16 For ^aa just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again: but the wicked shall fall into mischief.

17 Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth; and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth;

18 Lest the LORD see it, and it ⁵displease him, ^aand he turn away his wrath from him.

19 ⁶Fret not thyself because of evil men, neither be thou envious at the wicked:

20 For there shall be no reward to the evil man; ^athe ⁷candle of the wicked shall be put out.

21 My son, fear thou the LORD and the king; ^aand ⁸meddle not with them that are ⁸given to change:

22 For ^atheir calamity shall rise suddenly; and ^awho knoweth the ruin of them both?

23 These ⁷things also belong to the wise. ^aIt is not good to have respect of persons in judgment.

24 He ^athat saith unto the wicked, Thou art righteous; him shall the people curse, nations shall abhor him.

25 But to them that rebuke him shall be delight, and ^aa good blessing shall come upon them.

26 Every man shall kiss his lips that ¹giveth a right answer.

27 ^bPrepare thy work without, and make it fit for thyself in the field; and afterwards build thine house.

28 Be not a witness against thy neighbour without cause; and deceive not with thy lips.

29 ^cSay not, ^dI will do so to him as he hath done to me; I will render to the man according to his work.

30 I ^ewent by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding;

31 And, lo, ^fit was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, ^gand the stone-wall thereof was broken down.

32 Then I saw, and ²considered it well; I looked upon it, and received instruction, that are given to change," is well deserving of the attention of every young man. While an unsettled disposition is but too natural to youth, its indulgence often blights their prospects. The calamity of such frequently rises suddenly, and ruin is the result of restlessness. Ver. 30-34. Solomon here supplies a very severe reproof to indolence. These words are eminently calculated to awaken stupor, and to prompt men to honourable exertion. As a warning, the portraiture is perfect; and it well deserves the consideration of those whose life is spent in ignoble sloth, and whose short day is but an idle dream.

THESE are also proverbs of Solomon, ^awhich the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied out.

2 It is the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honour of kings is to search out a matter.

3 The heaven for height, and the earth for depth, and the heart of kings ¹is unsearchable.

4 Take ^aaway the dross from the silver, and there shall come forth a vessel for the finer.

5 Take away the wicked from before the king, and his throne shall be established in righteousness.

6 ²Put not forth thyself ^cin the presence of the king, and stand not in the place of great men:

7 For better ^{it} is that it be said unto thee, ^dCome up hither; ^ethan that thou shouldst be put lower in the presence of the prince whom thine eyes have seen.

8 Go not forth hastily to strive, lest thou know not ^fwhat to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to shame.

9 Debate thy cause with thy neighbour himself, and discover not ^aa secret to another;

10 Lest he that heareth ^{it} put thee to shame, and ^gthine infamy turn not away.

11 A ^hword ⁱfitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver.

12 As ¹an ear-ring of gold, and an ornament of fine gold, so is ^aa wise reprovcr upon an obedient ear.

13 As ¹the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is ^aa faithful messenger to them that send him; for he refresheth the soul of his masters.

14 Whoso boasteth himself ^aof a false gift is like clouds and wind without rain.

15 By long forbearing is a prince persuaded, and a soft tongue breaketh the bone.

16 Hast thou found honey? eat so much as is sufficient for thee, ²lest thou be filled therewith, and vomit it.

Temple, the men of Hezekiah discovered this part of Solomon's Proverbs, which was copied and made public. It would also seem that they had collected, from traditional sayings of Solomon, the gems of wisdom which are here presented to us. Ver. 9 embodies one of the most important principles of personal conduct. It is the same as that contained in the Saviour's injunction touching offences, in the Gospel of Matthew; and were it to be universally acted upon, it could not fail to be productive of the happiest consequences in families, in society, and in the world at large. Ver. 15 illustrates the power of petition persevered in. It seems indeed a means very unlikely to accomplish the end; but it is incomparably the most potent, alike on earth and in heaven. Ver. 17-28. The violation of propriety amongst neighbours 17 ⁶Withdraw thy foot from thy neighbour's house; lest he be ⁷weary of thee, and so hate thee.

18 A man that beareth false witness against his neighbour is a maul, and a sword, and a sharp arrow.

19 ³Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint.

20 As he ^othat taketh away a garment in cold weather, and as ^pvinegar upon nitre, ^qso is he that singeth songs to an heavy heart.

21 If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink:

22 For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the LORD shall reward thee.

23 The ^rnorth wind ^sdriveth away rain: ^tso doth an angry countenance a backbiting tongue.

24 It is better to dwell in a corner of the house-top, than with a brawling woman, and in a wide house.

25 As ^ucold waters to a thirsty soul, ^vso is good news from a far country.

26 A righteous man falling down before the wicked is as a troubled fountain, and a corrupt spring.

27 It is ^wnot good to eat much honey; ^xso for men to search their own glory is not glory.

28 He ^ythat hath no rule over his own spirit is like a city that is broken down, and without walls.

23 ¹Burning lips, and a wicked heart, are like a potsherd covered with silver dross.

24 He that hateth ⁴dissembleth with his lips, and layeth up deceit within him:

25 When ¹¹he ⁵speaketh fair, ¹believe him not; for there are ¹²seven abominations in his heart.

26 ⁶Whose hatred is covered by deceit, his wickedness shall be shewed before the whole congregation.

27 Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall there-is always attended with unhappy consequences. Familiarity is dangerous, as tending to impair respect, and produce contempt. The first verse, therefore, might be advantageously engraven on the heart of every man who has a neighbour. Good sense and right feeling will prevent those ruptures of friendship which terminate in enmity and alienation, rendering neighbourhood less a comfort than a calamity. This mode of conquering an enemy, wherever it is practicable, will be found successful. The metaphor is taken from the smelting of ores, where the fuel is placed on the top of the metal. True greatness thinks little about its own glory; it is satisfied with deserving well, and leaving the result to time and Providence. The highest deeds, moreover, of which man is capable, are often but imperfectly appreciated by his fellow-creatures. They may even bring upon him reproach and injury. It is enough, that, having acted, he should also suffer for the Son of God, from whom, in due season, he will receive glory.

Chap. XXVI. 1-16. Wherever men are indisposed to act, they will be at no loss for reasons. If they are bid go forth, and walk through the city, they will fortify themselves in their neglect by assuming that there is a lion in the streets. If, indeed, a lion were there, the fact would be sufficient cause; but these lions of imagination have been the ruin of millions. There is no hope of a lary man: the sluggard will be, and he deserves to be, a beggar. Ver. 17-23. There is not much room for sport in the affairs of men; both life and death are serious matters; but to deceive our fellow-creatures, and then, when discovered, to pretend that we were in sport, is to act the part of a madman, casting about firebrands, arrows, and death! Nothing is to be deemed sport which is in the smallest degree dangerous or mischievous. This sport has been the fountain of much mischief, more especially among young people and children. Talebearing is the cause of much disturbance to society. There may be difficulty in always determining the exact import in; and he that rolleth a stone, it will return upon him.

28 A lying tongue hateth those that are afflicted by it; and a flattering mouth worketh ruin.

CHAPTER XXVII.

2 Observations of self-love; 5 of true love; 11 of care to avoid offences; 23 and of the household care.

BOAST not thyself of ¹to-morrow; ^bfor thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.

2 Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips.

3 A stone is ²heavy, and the sand weighty; ^cbut a fool's wrath is heavier than them both.

4 Wrath is ²cruel, and anger is outrageous; but who is able to stand before ⁴envy?

5 Open rebuke is better than secret love.

6 Faithful are ⁴the wounds of a friend: but the kisses of an enemy are ⁵deceitful.

7 The full soul ⁶loatheth an honeycomb: but to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet.

8 As a bird that wandereth from her nest; so is a man that wandereth from his place.

9 Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart; ⁷so doth the sweetness of a man's friend ⁷by hearty counsel.

10 Thine own friend, and thy father's friend, forsake not; ⁸neither go into thy brother's house in the day of thy calamity: ⁸for ⁸better is a neighbour that is near, than a brother far off.

11 My son, be wise, and make my heart glad, ⁹that I may answer him that reproacheth me.

12 A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself: but the simple pass on, and are punished.

of the term. There are many occasions when it is proper and necessary to report things that have been seen and heard; but that is not to be considered talebearing, which is the work of busybodies, who love neither those that utter the tale, nor those that are receiving it, and who are intent rather on fomenting strife than on bringing friends together, and restoring a good understanding. When dissimulation is the offspring of hatred, it becomes doubly detestable. The man with seven abominations in his heart is not to be trusted, however fair his speech may be. The covering of hatred by deceit is a special offence against society, deserving public exposure. Such incidents are seldom successful in accomplishing their object, although they generally recoil on their authors. The idea of a man's falling into a pit, dug with his own hand for his neighbour, is most expressive; and it is amongst the universal proverbs supplied by holy Scripture. There is great depth in the closing verse—"A lying tongue hateth those that are afflicted by it." Human nature is such, that in proportion as men injure, they hate the object of their injury.

Chap. XXVII. 1-11. Vanity, in every age, has been prone to self-praise, which is sure to defeat its own object. It is the province of friendship, by fidelity, to wound; but such wounds are the expressions of love. The flatterer, on the contrary, pleases at the expense alike of truth and benefit; and by so doing he works the ruin of his victim. Fidelity of friendship is a choice virtue. A man's own friends, as a matter of course, he should not forsake in the day of adversity, which furnishes an opportunity of shewing his friendship; but if he love his father, he cannot but feel regard for his father's friends, and will be forward to do them a kindness. There is something mournful in the counsel given in the latter part of ver. 10, not to go into a brother's house in the day of calamity. It might be thought that that was the first house into which a man should go, and that there, if anywhere, he might look for sympathy and succour. Such, however, as bitter experience shews, is not always the fact: a neighbour will sometimes display a compassion and a generosity not to be found in a brother, whether near or at a distance. Ver. 12-27. Prudence is a virtue which, if duly exercised, will go far to preserve men from danger. Cordiality in friendship is not only proper, but necessary; yet it must not rise to adulation, which would subject it to a suspicion as proceeding either from weakness, or some sinister motive. If a man would walk securely touching his own affairs, it behoves him to watch them with his own eyes. "Be thou diligent to know the state of thy flocks, and look well to thy herds," is language applicable to every department of business. Riches are not for ever; and it is perilous even for men of opulence to repose too much confidence in those that have the command of their property. But if the principle is so important in business, how much more in religion! The benighted Papist may find, that by giving up the concerns of his soul to his priest, he is delivered from all further solicitude; but it does not follow that because he confides, he is 4 They that forsake the law praise the wicked: but such as keep the law contend with them.

5 Evil men understand not judgment: but they that seek the LORD understand all things.

6 Better is the poor that walketh in his uprightness, than he that is perverse in his ways, though he be rich.

7 Whoso keepeth the law is a wise son: but he that is a companion of riotous men shameth his father.

8 He that by usury and unjust gain increaseth his substance, he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor.

9 He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 Observations of public government, 15 and of private.

22 Of anger, pride, thievery, cowardice, and corruption.

HE that, being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suffer right. It therefore behoves every man to examine himself, whether he be in the faith, and whether the work of God is advancing in his soul.

Chap. XXVIII. 1-7. Guilt awakens fear, and integrity begets courage. The existence of a single wise man in the government of a nation, may be the means of its preservation from the direst calamities; and such men ought to be viewed as instruments provided by God for the good of mankind. The reason why they that forsake the law praise the wicked is obvious: they are happy in having associates in transgression; but foolishly so, since it will bring them no safety. Though hand join in hand, judgment will overtake iniquity. Ver. 8-11. There is a tendency in wealth to beget conceit in its possessor; and the worship with which he is surrounded operates unhappily on his understanding. The consequence which he derives from mere material circumstances, he naturally transfers to mind and to morals, deeming himself a wiser and a better man than he is. Ver. 12-23. Impatience to attain wealth has often driven men to dishonest practices; so that, even when success has followed endeavours, a consciousness that it had not been procured by just means haunts the possessor, embittering the cup which might otherwise have been sweet. Ver. 24-28. Instances of the robbery of parents are far from few; and there is reason to fear that the perpetration has been deemed but a slight offence. The infatuated evil doer has said, "It is no transgression;" but Solomon pronounces such a man the companion of a destroyer. The state of mind compatible with such a proceeding, is a meet preparation for transgression abroad, which, in due season, will be followed by appropriate penalties. The rise of wicked men to power has operated as a blight upon piety and goodness wherever their influence extended. The downfall of such men is not only not an object of pity, but of rejoicing. Their death redounds to the welfare of society.

Chap. XXIX. 1-9. The history of judgments abundantly exemplifies the opening verse. Notwithstanding the overflow of the Divine mercy to mankind in the glorious Gospel, and the marvellous patience exercised towards the wicked, there is yet a limit beyond which justice takes the place of mercy, and none can hinder it. The authority of the world has rarely been exercised by the righteous. The bulk both of the Jewish and Gentile kings were wicked, and under their respective reigns the people were wretched; but when a good king arose, the benefit was speedily felt, and a grateful people rejoiced. The death of the bad was not lamented; while that of the good was the signal for national mourning. In every rank of life real goodness has been matter for satisfaction to all that had to do with the subject of it, denly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

2 When the righteous are ²in authority, the people rejoice: but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn.

3 Whoso loveth wisdom rejoiceth his father: but ^bhe that keepeth company with harlots spendeth ^{his} substance.

4 The king by judgment establisheth the land: but ^bhe that receiveth gifts overthroweth it.

5 A man that flattereth his neighbour spreadeth a net for his feet.

6 In the transgression of an evil man ^{there is} a snare: but the righteous doth sing and rejoice.

7 The righteous ^cconsidereth the cause of the poor: ^dbut the wicked regardeth not to know ^{it}.

8 ^eScornful men ^fbring a city into a snare: but ^gwise men turn away wrath.

9 ^hIf ^aa wise man contendeth with a foolish man, whether he rage or laugh, ^{there is} no rest.

10 ⁱThe blood-thirsty hate the upright: but the just seek his soul.

11 A fool uttereth all his mind: but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards.

12 If a ruler hearken to lies, all his servants are wicked.

13 The poor and ^ethe deceitful man ^{meet} together: the LORD lighteneth both their eyes.

14 The king that faithfully judgeth the poor, his throne shall be established for ever.

15 The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to ^{himself} bringeth his mother to shame.

16 When the wicked are multiplied, transgression increaseth: but the righteous shall see their fall.

17 ^jCorrect thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul.

1 ^xAgur's confession of his faith. 11 ^yFour wicked generations. 15 ^zFour things insatiable. 18 ^{aa}Four things hard to be known. 21 ^{ab}Four things intolerable. 24 ^{ac}Four things exceeding wise. 29 ^{ad}Four things stately.

3 I ^bneither learned wisdom, ^cnor ^lhave the knowledge of the holy.

4 ^dWho hath ascended up into heaven, or descended? ^ewho hath gathered the wind in his fists? ^fwho hath bound the waters and the death of such, even in the humblest walks, has been cause of sincere lamentation. Among the evils condemned throughout this Book, an important place is assigned to flattery. The act always originates in evil, and its constant tendency is to injure the object of it. The human heart little requires the presentation of such incense. It has in itself sufficient vanity, pride, and conceit, even without external stimulation; but when the breath of flattery blows the fire of corruption into a flame, the danger is greatly increased. Ver. 10-17. How great the contrast between good and bad men! The bad seek to destroy the life of the good, and the good to save the soul of the bad. The ruler who encourages falsehood, will always find parties disposed to supply it. There are few who will not resort to deceit to depreciate their neighbours and exalt themselves. Human nature is so constituted, that, as a rule, it is no easy work to train even one child for God. The rod and reproof give wisdom; but if a child be left to itself, evil, and not good, may be anticipated. By this means many a parent has been brought to shame, and many a heart broken. The voice of heavenly wisdom, therefore, to every parent is, "Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul." An inquiry into the domestic condition of the nation for an ordinary lifetime, would illustrate the correctness of the allegation here laid down. Ver. 18-27. In the great economy of Providence, means are everywhere employed to accomplish ends. As, in the absence of vision, in the land of Palestine, the people perished, so now, where there is no proclamation of the Gospel, there can be no belief of it, and consequently no salvation. The operation of pride is not a little remarkable. Notwithstanding its all-devouring character, its constant tendency is to bring its subject down; whereas humility, which, to the carnal eye, is a low and a grovelling thing, conducts its subject to honour and dignity. It is much to be desired that ver. 25 might be deeply engraven on the heart of all youthful believers, and all recent converts. The fear of man brings a snare, which there is no means of resisting but by trust in the Lord. It is not a little strange, that people should be more afraid to do right in the presence of ungodly men, than to do wrong in the presence of the Eternal God himself!

Chap. XXX. 1-10. Mere opinion, in the absence of inspired testimony, is seldom of much value. Some think Agur was not a name, but a character, signifying a collector of sense,—a man who made abstracts of the writings of others. Some have even thought that Solomon himself was meant, but there is no authority for taking such a liberty with the inspired Word. It is enough that Agur was a wise man, through whom the Spirit of the Lord spoke for the instruction of mankind. He testifies "that every word of God is pure," and commands that men shall not add to his words, lest he reprove them, and they be found liars. Agur's prayer is not less precious than his counsels. It is a prayer in a garment? who hath established all the ends of the earth? what is his name, and what is his son's name, if thou canst tell?

5 Every word of God is pure: he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him.

6 Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.

7 Two things have I required of thee; deny me them not before I die:

8 Remove far from me vanity and lies; give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me:

9 Lest I be full, and deny thee, and say, Who is the LORD? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain.

10 Accuse not a servant unto his master, lest he curse thee, and thou be found guilty.

11 There is a generation that curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother.

12 There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness.

13 There is a generation, O how lofty are their eyes! and their eye-lids are lifted up.

14 There is a generation whose teeth are as swords, and their jaw-teeth as knives, to devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men.

15 The horse-leach hath two daughters, crying, Give, give. There are three things that are never satisfied, yea, four things say not, It is enough:

16 The grave; and the barren womb; the earth that is not filled with water; and the fire that saith not, It is enough.

17 The eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it.

18 There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not:

19 The way of an eagle in the air, the adapted to every soul of the human race. He desires that vanity and lies may be far removed from him; that he may receive neither poverty nor riches, but have a sufficiency for the journey of life. He well knew that the tendency of wealth was to promote pride and impiety, and that poverty leads to envy, and the adoption of unjustifiable means to supply its necessities. Ver. 11-14. This is a fearful summary of the classes into which mankind may be divided. How fallen is the creature, who, at his creation, bore the image of his Maker, holy, harmless, undefiled, and perfect in every attribute—mental, moral, and physical! The description given is applicable to the entire family of man; there are none by nature exempt, and the grace of God alone can make the difference. The picture here drawn resembles the description given of men in the Book of Psalms, and adopted by the Apostle in the Epistle to the Romans. Such is the creature, who boasts of his dignity, and congratulates himself on his sufficiency, not knowing that he is poor, and miserable, and blind, and naked. Ver. 17-19. The Holy Scriptures ever delight in dwelling on the duties of children to their parents, thus building up the domestic constitution, and fortifying it by the Divine authority. Would that ver. 17 were engraven on the heart of every child and young person that reads this page! "The eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it!" Youthful reader! ponder the words, and tremble at the thought of a transgression that is to be visited with such a punishment! Say not, it is only a figure, forasmuch as the figure comes short of the fact. The punishment of a wicked and cruel child will be terrible in the extreme! Ver. 19, 20. The voracious eagle looking out for its prey, the cunning serpent winding along the rocks, and the ship ploughing her way through the ocean, leave no traces behind them; and hence the movements of these creatures are the points set forth to illustrate the conduct of those, who, having grievously sinned, think no more about it. Ver. 32. When men have erred towards their fellow-creatures, and committed sin against the God of heaven, the only way to set matters right, to appease conscience, and procure peace, is at once to lay the hand upon the mouth—that is, to confess, to be sorry, and, where it is necessary and practicable, to make reparation.

ECCLESIASTES; OR, THE PREACHER.

The Book of Ecclesiastes occupies a place not less distinct, original, and remarkable, in the Inspired Volume, than the Book of Proverbs. They are both quite unlike each other, and everything else. The Author earnestly inquires after the chief good, or that which is the source of happiness; and here he treats the subject both positively and negatively. In the first part of the Book, he proclaims the vanity of all earthly things apart from true piety. In his estimate, riches, splendour, and power, contribute nothing to the real felicity of man; on the contrary, it shews that it can only be found in the favour of the Most High, and in a walk of loving consecration to his service. Notwithstanding the subdued estimate formed by Solomon, there is nothing morose or misanthropic about him. He counsels mankind to use the world as not abusing it, inasmuch as the fashion of this world passeth away. It is quite sufficient for the purposes of its appointment, and is only worthless when men endeavour to put things created in the place of the Creator, and to derive from them the happiness which the Divine love and favour alone can impart.

Solomon; but there is no direct proof that such was the fact. That he was a sovereign is certain, but there is no evidence that he was a prophet. The language before us, moreover, was a lesson of wisdom taught him by his mother, who may have been inspired, or who repeated the words of some inspired man. Suppositions on the subject have abounded, but they all go for nothing. Suffice it to say, that the counsels are admirable, and that it will be a happy day when they shall be so impressed on the hearts of kings as to constitute the principles by which they shall govern their personal conduct. Ver. 10-31. This passage has ever been famous as presenting a beautiful portraiture of the wife, the mother, and the mistress. As a picture, it is perfect. There is no conceivable excellence which may not be found there. This is the inspired definition of a helpmeet. We have but to conceive of an establishment at the head of which is such a woman, and to reflect on all she does and causes to be done, to form an idea of her worth and excellence. Truly happy is the man that finds such a companion; happy the children that have been reared around her; happy the maidens that live under her roof; and happy all, in any way related to her. The soul of a system, she moves, moulds, blesses, and adorns the whole. Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain, but a woman such as is here described, is the glory of man and a prime ornament of human nature.

CHAPTER I.

1 The Preacher sheweth that all human courses are vain; 4 because the creatures are restless in their courses, 12 and because he hath found it so in the studies of wisdom.

THE words of ^athe Preacher, the son of David, king of Jerusalem.

2 Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, ^bvanity of vanities; all is vanity.

3 What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

4 One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever.

5 The sun also ariseth, and the sun goeth down, ^cand ^dhasteth to his place where he arose.

6 The ^dwind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north: it whirleth about continually; and the wind returneth again according to his circuits.

7 All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they ^ereturn again.

8 All things are ^efull of labour; ^fman cannot utter it: ^gthe eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing.

9 ^hThe thing ⁱthat hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done, is that which shall be done: ^jand there is no new thing under the sun.

10 Is there ^kany thing whereof it may be said, See, this is new? ^lit hath been already of old time, which was before us.

11 There is no remembrance of former things; neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come with those that shall come after.

13 And I gave my heart to seek and search out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under heaven: ⁿthis sore travail hath God given to the sons of man, ^oto be exercised therewith.

Chap. I. 1-11. It was no mean distinction to be descended of David, and something even greater to be king of Jerusalem; but in Solomon's estimation, to be a preacher of righteousness to mankind was greater than either. He gives special prominence to his character as a preacher; and probably for the reason that this was a principal element in the type of which he was the subject. The Lord Jesus Christ expressly stated, on his appearing among his countrymen, that he assumed this character, saying, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Man, in the mutable character of everything around him, sees constant and countless remembrances of his own mortality, from which he should learn that this is not his rest, but that one generation passeth away and another comes, in due season to follow. Ver. 12-18. When Solomon became a king, he did not cease to be a student; and notwithstanding his extraordinary gifts and special endowments, he exerted his faculties to the utmost as a means of accomplishing his intellectual purposes. The range of his inquiries was marvellous—it extended to all things that are done under heaven. Whatever be a man's gifts, and whatever his dependence upon a higher Power, one of the conditions of attainment, whether intellectual or religious, is labour. It is only by sore travail that mental power can be developed, and mental opulence acquired. The result of Solomon's great experience of wisdom and knowledge, was the conviction that nothing earthly is satisfying. As men advance in wisdom, they descend in grief. The more they know of themselves and their fellow-creatures, the more clearly they perceive their own corruption; and the more extended their views of the work of God, the more vivid are the conceptions of their own nothingness. It is matter for thankfulness that the salvation of the soul, and the happiness which springs from it, have no connexion with scientific attainments. It is eternal life to know the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom he has sent.

Chap. II. 1-11. Solomon speaks in strongly figurative language concerning laughter and mirth, both of which he pronounces vanity, even where they are not sinful. Notwithstanding his festive injunctions, Solomon never relaxed his studies; and he fully developed the resources of his country to promote the magnificence of royalty. Nothing that worth, talents, and genius could effect, was wanting; but the possessor felt constrained, in viewing the mighty aggregate, to pronounce the whole "vanity and vexation of spirit." Ver. 12-26. Solomon, with all his wisdom, made experiments in folly; and, when he had done, he recorded it as the result that cattle above all that were in Jerusalem before me;

8 I gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings and of the provinces; I gat me ^amen-singers and women-singers, and the delights of the sons of men, as ^amusical instruments, and that of all sorts.

9 So I was great, and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem: also my wisdom remained with me.

10 And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them; I withheld not my heart from any joy: for my heart rejoiced in all my labour; and this was my portion of all my labour.

11 Then ^aI looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do; and, ^bbehold, all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun.

12 ¶ And ^aI turned myself to behold wisdom, and madness, and folly: for what can the man do that cometh after the king? ^ceven that which hath been already done.

13 Then ^aI saw ^athat wisdom excelleth folly, as far as ^alight excelleth darkness.

14 The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness: and I myself perceived also that ^aone event happeneth to them all.

15 Then said I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it happeneth ^aeven to me; ^aand why was I then more wise? ^aThen I said in my heart, that this also is vanity.

16 For ^athere is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever; seeing that which now is, in the days to come shall all be forgotten: and how dieth the wise man? as the fool.

17 Therefore I hated life; because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me: for all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

18 ¶ Yea, ^aI hated all my labour which I had ^ataken under the sun; because ^aI should leave it unto the man that shall be after me.

19 And who knoweth whether he shall be a wise man or a fool? yet shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have shewed myself wise under the sun. This is also vanity.

20 Therefore I went about ^bto cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I took under the sun.

21 For there is a man ^cwhose labour is in wisdom, and in knowledge, and in equity; yet to a man that hath not laboured therein shall he ^dleave it for his portion. This also is vanity, and a great evil.

22 For what hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the sun?

23 For all his days are sorrows, and his travail grief; yea, his heart taketh not rest in the night. This is also vanity.

24 ¶ There is nothing better for a man, than that he should eat and drink, and that he should ^emake his soul enjoy good in his labour. This also I saw, that it was from the hand of God.

25 For who can eat, or who else can hasten hereunto, more than I?

26 For God giveth to a man that is good ^fin his sight wisdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather, and to heap up, that he may give to him that is good before God. This also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

CHAPTER III.

1 By the necessary change of times, vanity is increased. 11 God's works are excellent. 16 From the abuse of human judicatures, God's judgment is inferred.

TO ^aevery thing there is a season, and ^ba time to every purpose ^bunder the heaven:

2 ^aA ^atime to ^bbe born, ^aand a time to die: ^aa time to plant, and a time to pluck up ^athat which is planted:

3 ^aA ^atime to kill, and ^aa time to heal: ^aa time to break down, and a time to build up:

wisdom excelled folly as much as light darkness. Solomon set an example to all wise men by calling in death to arbitrate between the contentions of rank and class. He clearly saw that, in the course of time, the fool and he would be alike low in the dust of death, and that the days would come when everything present would be forgotten. The candid confessions of Solomon commend themselves to the consciences of many of the opulent of the earth, whose enjoyment is embittered by the thought that it will soon come to an end. This is a feeling against which it behoves good men to guard, lest, like Solomon, they despair of all their labours which they take under the sun, and become depressed and selfish. Solomon soon recovered from his splanetic fit, and began again to look abroad with a cheerful countenance, satisfied that it was the will of God that the creature should be happy, and enjoy, in reasonable measure, the bounties with which his path is strewn. There is no profit in sullen or self-righteous mortification. The natural condition of every rational creature throughout the universe, whose mind has not been darkened, or his conscience hardened, by sin, is felicity. Man, at his creation, was happy, and when the Gospel shall have accomplished its mission, in producing a world of perfect men, happiness will be complete and universal, and sorrow and sighing will flee away.

Chap. III. 1-15. There is a time for everything, and the part of wisdom is to discover it. The six days of creation supply a beautiful example; each day had its own work, constituting a part of the glorious aggregate, the product of the week. There is nothing sour or cynical in the Divine philosophy of Solomon. He teaches, that it is the will of God, that every man should enjoy the good of all his labour. Ver. 16-22. The place of judgment, whatever be the scale of its exercise—whether the peasant's cottage, or the Imperial Court—ought to know nothing of wickedness. The dispenser of justice ought to think only of good. All the creatures, whether small or great, ought to be dealt with on a level, and the loftiest to sink into nothingness before the majesty of justice. Solomon, notwithstanding his incomparable intellectual power and regal glory, had yet an impressive view of the lowliness of man at his best estate. He reminds men, with all their pride, that they themselves "are beasts." They have much in common with the animals, and in consequence are subject to the same laws which guide them. "That which befalleth the sons of 8 A ^ptime to love, and ^aa time to hate: ^ra time of war, and a time of peace.

9 What profit hath he that worketh in that wherein he laboureth?

10 I have seen the travail which God hath given to the sons of men to be exercised in it.

11 He hath made every thing beautiful in his time: also he hath set the world in their heart; ^oso that no man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end.

12 I know that there is no good in them, ^tbut for a man to rejoice, and to do good in his life.

13 And also that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God.

16 And, moreover, I saw under the sun the place of judgment, that wickedness was there; and the place of righteousness, that iniquity was there.

17 I ^ssaid in mine heart, God shall judge the righteous and the wicked: ^ofor there is a time there for every purpose, and for every work.

18 I said in mine heart ^bconcerning the estate of the sons of men, ^othat God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts.

the other; yea, they have all one breath: so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast: for all is vanity.

20 All ^ogo unto one place: all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again.

21 ^TWho knoweth the spirit ^oof man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?

22 Wherefore I perceive that there is ^onothing better, than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for that is his portion: for ^owho shall bring him to see what shall be after him?

CHAPTER IV.

1 Vanity is increased unto men by oppression, 4 by envy, 5 by idleness, 7 by covetousness, 9 by solitariness, 13 and by wilfulness.

SO I returned, ^oand considered all the oppressions that are done under the sun: and behold ^bthe tears of such as were oppressed, and ^cthey had no comfort; and on the ¹side of their oppressors there was power; but they had no comfort.

2 Wherefore ⁴I praised the dead which are already dead, more than the living which are yet alive.

3 Yea, ^bbetter is he than both they which hath not yet been, who hath not seen the evil work that is done under the sun.

4 ^TAgain, I considered all travail, and ²every right work, that for this a man is envied of his neighbour. This is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

5 ^TThe fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh.

6 Better is ^{an} handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit.

7 ^TThen I returned, and I saw vanity under the sun.

8 There is ^{one} alone, and there is not a second; yea, ^bhe hath neither child nor brother: yet ^{is} there no end of all his labour; neither ^{is} his eye satisfied with riches; neither sait he, ¹For whom do I labour, and bereave my soul of good? This is also vanity, yea, ^mit is a sore travail.

9 ^TTwo ^{are} better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour.

10 For ^oif they fall, the one will lift up men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other. All are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." There is yet a wonderful and a glorious difference,—since the spirit of the one goeth upwards, and that of the other downwards. It is the prerogative of man alone, in this lower world, to bear the image of the living God, and, by the aid of His grace and spirit, to attain to glory, honour, and immortality.

Chap. IV. 1-3. The affections of Solomon were upon a scale as vast as his intellectual attributes. The thought of the sufferings of mankind oppressed him. Nowhere in the Old Testament Scripture have we so striking a burst of benevolence as in the opening verses of this chapter. The pathos is perfect. The same comprehensive vision as that which was exercised by Solomon would still produce the same effects. On whatever continent or island of the world we live, we behold tears, oppression, and desperation, the sight of which would awaken intolerable anguish, but for the remembrance that the Gospel of salvation will put an end to every evil. Ver. 4-6. The same sentiment which so frequently appears in the Book of Proverbs, comes forth again in these verses. The envy of the human heart, the superior value of the quietness arising from well-balanced judgment and rightly-regulated affections, are forcibly expressed. Ver. 7-12. In the days of Solomon, as now, there were multitudes of men of an earth-born spirit, who sought good in the things of time, and who confounded the means with the end. Although they had neither child nor brother to inherit their substance, there was no end of their exertions to accumulate. The portraiture is a very humbling one, and yet every age and country has presented it in the person of multitudes. Solomon had a clear view of the power of unity in furthering the welfare of man. The first step in the formation of companies, tribes, kingdoms, and empires is the his fellow : but woe to him that is alone when he falleth ; for he hath not another to help him up.

11 Again, ¹if two lie together, then they have heat : but how can one be warm alone ?

12 And if one prevail against him, two shall withstand him ; ²and a threefold cord is not quickly broken.

13 ¶ Better is a poor and a wise child than an old and foolish king, who ³will no more be admonished.

14 For out of prison he cometh to reign ; whereas ⁴also he that is born in his kingdom becometh poor.

15 I considered all the living which walk under the sun, with the second child that shall stand up in his stead.

16 There is ⁵no end of all the people, even of all that have been before them : ⁶they also that come after shall not rejoice in him. Surely this also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

CHAPTER V.

1 Vanities in divine service, 8 in murmuring against oppression, 9 and in riches. 18 Joy in riches is the gift of God.

KEEP thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more ready to hear than to give the sacrifice of fools : for they consider not that they do evil.

2 Be ⁷not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God : for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth ; therefore let thy words be few.

3 For a dream cometh through the multitude of business ; and a fool's voice is known by multitude of words.

4 When thou ⁸vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it ; ⁹for he hath no pleasure in fools : ¹⁰pay that which thou hast vowed.

5 Better is ¹¹it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay.

6 Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin ; neither say thou before the angel, that ¹²it was an error : wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thine hands ?

7 For in the multitude of dreams and many words there are also divers vanities : but fear thou God.

8 ¶ If thou seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not at the ¹matter : ²for he that is higher than the highest regardeth ; and there be ³higher than they.

9 ¶ Moreover, ⁴the profit of the earth is for all : ⁵the king himself is served by the field.

10 He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver ; nor he that loveth abundance with increase. This is also vanity.

11 When goods increase, ⁶they are increased that eat them : and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes ?

12 The sleep of a labouring man is sweet, whether he eat little or much : but the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

13 There is ⁷a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt.

14 But ⁸those riches perish by evil travail ; ⁹and he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand.

15 As he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came, and shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand.

16 And this also is ¹⁰a sore evil, that in all points as he came, so shall he go : and what profit hath he that hath laboured for the wind ?

17 All his days also ¹¹he eateth in darkness, and he hath much sorrow and wrath with his sickness.

18 ¶ Behold that which I have seen : ¹²it is good and comely for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the sun all ¹³the days of his life, which God giveth him ; for it is his portion.

union of two, and the principles which govern them, to keep matters right, ought to govern the aggregate, whether composed of thousands or of millions. Ver. 13-16. The Christian moralist does not estimate mankind according to their circumstances : a poor child may yet be wise, and a great king foolish ; and if the choice were given to a judicious pilgrim travelling to eternity, he would prefer the hut of the sagacious peasant to the palace of the imbecile monarch. Friendship is the foundation of happiness ; but as man is now constituted, most friendships are imperfect, and the cords which appear to bind men together, for better or for worse, have soon been snapped by the intervention of the talebearer, or the liar, or consumed by the fires of selfishness or jealousy.

Chap. V. 1-7. The opening verse clearly refers to the Jewish custom of keeping the foot, or taking off their sandals, thus preserving their feet uncovered on going into the sanctuary, or worshipping the Most High barefooted, in token of holy fear, as set forth in Exod. iii. 5. Great reverence is due unto God in meeting of his saints, and it therefore behoves them, in his house, to think before they speak, that their hearts may not be hasty to utter anything before God. Nothing is more irrational and revolting than the rapidity of a rhapsodical utterance in public prayer. It can neither edify the party himself nor the hearer. In prayer the affections ought to harmonise with the language ! every utterance should be felt. There should be no speaking in the air ; no expressions without an aim or an object, amounting to mere sound unaccompanied by the heart. They whose are intimately conversant with the workings of their own souls, will testify to the extreme difficulty of keeping the mind fixed, seeing God through every expression, and putting reality into every part of the exercise. This only is prayer ; and if so, how much need have the best of men to implore forgiveness for the sins of their holy things ! Ver. 8-20. The Sacred Scriptures throughout, uniformly denounce the oppression of the poor ; and yet a class of professed patriots and philanthropists have laboured hard to convince the multitudes that the ministers of the Gospel and the Sacred Scriptures are the enemies of liberty, and the abettors of despotism. All the genuine humanity as well as true liberty to be found in the world have sprung from the writings of the Prophets and the Apostles. It is a humbling sight to see men toiling, day and night, to heap up riches which, in 19 Every man also to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to take his portion, and to rejoice in his labour; this is the gift of God.

20 ⁶For he shall not much remember the days of his life; because God answereth him in the joy of his heart.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The vanity of riches without use: 3 of children; 6 and old age without riches. 9 The vanity of sight, and wandering desires. 11 The conclusion of vanities.

THERE is ^aan evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men:

2 A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour, ^bso that he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it: this is vanity, and it is an evil disease.

3 ¶ If a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, so that the days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, ^cand also that he have no burial; I say, that an untimely birth is better than he:

4 For he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and ^dhis name shall be covered with darkness.

5 Moreover, he hath not seen the sun, nor known any thing: ^ethis hath more rest than the other.

6 Yea, though he live a thousand years twice told, yet hath he seen no good: ^fdo not all go to one place?

7 ¶ All the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the ^gappetite is not filled.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Remedies against vanity are, a good name, 2 mortification, 7 patience, 11 wisdom. 23 The difficulty of getting wisdom. 25 The result of the Preacher's researches.

A GOOD ^sname is better than precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of one's birth.

2 ¶ It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting: for ^tthat is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to his heart.

3 ^uSorrow is better than laughter: for ^vby the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.

4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning: but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.

5 It is ^wbetter to hear the rebuke of the wise, than for a man to hear ^xthe song of fools.

6 For as the ^ycrackling of thorns under the end, are to prove their destruction. In no part of the world are men exposed to this danger so much as in Great Britain. In proportion as wealth is the standard of human value, and the chief mark of distinction in general society, will be the peril of men. The best corrective of this reigning vice is the prayerful study of the Word of God. Both the Old and the New Testament abound in the means of instruction, shewing that it is both the duty and the wisdom of men to weigh everything in the balances of the sanctuary: and to estimate its value by its bearing on peace of conscience, purity of character, and future hope, when earth with its opulence shall have passed away.

Chap. VI. 1-12. The love of the world has been a principal vice in every age. Solomon, in his day, represents it as common among men; they had riches, wealth, and honour, wanting nothing the soul could desire, and yet they had no power to enjoy it. Such men, like an untimely birth, come in with vanity, and depart in darkness, and they are soon forgotten in the generation they had not blessed. It is here distinctly taught, that God gives not only good, but the heart to enjoy it—a circumstance which ought greatly to enhance the benefaction. Most great principles in Scripture have been shadowed forth in Heathen literature: so it is in the present instance. One of the chief of the Roman Poets, addressing a ruler, distinguished for opulence, generosity, and hospitality, says, "The gods have given thee riches, and the heart to enjoy them."

Chap. VII. 1-10. A good name has ever been prized by virtuous men as valuable. The day of death is better than that of birth to every good man. It was, in fact, pronounced by an enlightened heathen who had a notion of immortality, as the gate of life. The house of mourning ought to be the school of wisdom. It is calculated to furnish materials for profitable meditation. No man was ever yet made the worse by the sigh of the mourner, and the sight of distress. The house of feasting, on the contrary, may be innocent, but it has frequently furnished occasion to sin. It is altogether lawful, and under the guidance of the judgment and the conscience it may be always safe. The Saviour appeared in both—feasting in Cana, and weeping in Bethany. The nature of oppression is to exasperate, and the oppressor is the source of all the evil that oppression may produce. Patience is a virtue, which depraved men rarely covet; but pride of spirit they admire. There seems in every age to have been a tendency amongst mankind to extol the past as superior to the present. This has often been done at the expense of justice, yet not uniformly. Looking back to the Patriarchal age we find a simplicity and a humanity, a piety and a general excellence, for which we look in vain in later times. The first generation of the Jews in Palestine, too, was incomparably the best. The first Church in Jerusalem also, displayed a measure of love and liberality such as we look for in vain at a subsequent period. So, too, at the Reformation from Popery, there was a clearness of conception, a strength of faith, and a force of character, not often found among after generations. The fact seems to be this: in religious things there is a tendency to decline; but in things temporal, as a matter of course, the tendency, from age to age, is to improve. Provision, however, is made for the increase, and ultimate universality of religion, by means of periodical Revivals, with increased vitality, purity, power, and diffusiveness. The last great Revival in our own country, which commenced about a century ago, presents a striking illustration. Ver. 11-22. Worth and property mutually adorn each other. Wisdom with poverty is a good thing, as a pot, so is ¹the laughter of the fool. This also is vanity.

7 ¶ Surely ²oppression maketh a wise man mad; and ³a gift destroyeth the heart.

8 Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof; and the patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.

9 Be not ¹hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for ²anger resteth in the bosom of fools.

10 Say not thou, ¹What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not enquire ²wisely concerning this.

11 ¶ Wisdom is ⁴good with an inheritance; and by it there is profit to ³them that see the sun.

12 For wisdom is ⁵a defence, and money is a defence: but the excellency of knowledge is, that wisdom giveth life to them that have it.

13 ²Consider the work of God: for ¹who can make that straight which he hath made crooked?

14 In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath ⁶set the one over against the other, ⁷to the end that man should find nothing after him.

15 All things have I seen in the days of my vanity: ⁸there is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness, and ⁹there is a wicked man that longeth his life in his wickedness.

16 Be ¹⁰not righteous over-much; ¹¹neither make thyself over-wise: why shouldest thou ¹²destroy thyself?

17 Be ¹³not over-much wicked, neither be thou foolish: why shouldest thou die ¹⁴before thy time?

18 It is good that thou shouldest take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thine hand: ¹⁵for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.

19 Wisdom ¹⁶strengtheneth the wise more than ten mighty men which are in the city.

20 For there is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not.

CHAPTER VIII.

2 Kings are greatly to be respected. 6 The divine providence is to be observed. 14 It is better with the godly in adversity than with the wicked in prosperity. 16 The work of God is unsearchable.

WHO is ¹as the wise man? and ²who knoweth the interpretation of a thing? a man's wisdom maketh his face to shine, and the ³boldness of his face shall be changed.

2 ¶ ⁴I counsel thee to keep the king's commandment, and that in regard of the oath of God.

3 Be not hasty to go out of his sight: stand not in an evil thing; for he doeth whatsoever pleaseth him.

4 Where the word of a king is, there is power; and who may say unto him, What doest thou?

likewise is property with ignorance; but to be seen to the fullest advantage, both must be combined. In our land, we have much intelligence without property; much property without intelligence. The day will come when this state of things will gradually disappear. As society is now constituted, money is within the reach of comparatively few; but wisdom may be attained by all; and if money be a defence, so is wisdom, and the better defence of the two. There is nothing fanatical in the Word of God; reason is never outraged. Men are permitted to be joyful in the day of prosperity; and in the day of adversity they are invited to consider. Now human nature is such, that it is natural to do both the one and the other, when placed in the circumstances specified. In every age the attention of thinking man has been directed to the circumstance, that the best men are often short-lived, whereas the wicked are frequently permitted, as if in judgment, to drag out their miserable and useless existence to an extreme old age. Ver. 16 has frequently been perverted by unhalloved readers. It clearly refers to the foregoing verse, and the reason seems to be, that we must not judge of character by either early removal or prolonged existence. There are reasons for this order of things, which, in due season, will appear, when it will be seen that in this, as in every arrangement, the Judge of all the earth has done right. Ver. 23-29. These verses set forth an awful fact. That sex which was expressly created to be a helpmeet to man, when perverted, becomes the greatest hindrance and the heaviest curse. Of all men, Solomon had the largest experience in this matter, and the testimony he has left behind him is humbling in the highest degree.

Chap. VIII. 1-7. It is to be noted that Solomon, at every turn, represents piety as beautiful, honourable, and glorious. A man's wisdom, that is, his piety, maketh his face to shine. It reflects honour upon its possessor, and dignifies the whole of his deportment. Where religion is genuine and deep, it produces in the heart a contentment, a happiness, and a benevolence, which beams forth from the very countenance. Nor is this strange: do not men of deep depravity, desperate character, and hardened villany, in the same way, reflect the condition of their souls? Society in every age has exemplified these facts. Ver. 8-11. These verses set forth a great and affecting truth, which it behoves every creature to lay to heart. In the days of Solomon, as now, there were multitudes who had the form of godli-

5 Whoso ^ckeepeth the commandment shall ²feel no evil thing: and ^aa wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment.

6 ¶ Because ^cto every purpose there is time and judgment, therefore the misery of man is great upon him.

7 For ^che knoweth not that which shall be: for who can tell him ^bwhen it shall be?

8 There ^cis no man that hath power over the spirit, to retain the spirit; neither hath he ^bpower in the day of death: and there is no ^cdischarge in that war; ^cneither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it.

9 All ^cthis have I seen, and applied my heart unto every work that is done under the sun: there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another to his own hurt.

10 And ^bso I saw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from the place of the holy, and ^mthey were forgotten in the city where they had so done. This is also vanity.

11 Because ^bsentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is ^cfully set in them to do evil.

12 ¶ Though a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that it shall be well with them that fear God, which fear before him:

13 But ^bit shall not be well with the wicked, ^cneither shall he prolong his days, which are as a shadow; because he feareth not before God.

14 There is a vanity which is done upon the earth; that there be just men, unto whom it happeneth according to the work of the wicked: again, there be wicked men, to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous. I said, that this also is vanity.

15 ¶ Then ^cI commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry; for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.

16 ¶ When ^cI applied mine heart to know wisdom, and to see the business that is done upon the earth: (for also ^cthere is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes:)

17 Then I beheld all the work of God, ^cthat a man cannot find out the work that is done under the sun: because though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it; yea farther, though a wise man think to know it, yet shall he not be able to find it.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Like things happen on earth to good and bad men. 4 There is a necessity of death unto men. 7 Comfort is all their portion in this life. 11 God's providence ruleth over all. 13 Wisdom is better than strength.

FOR all this I ^cconsidered in my heart, even to declare all this, that ^cthe righteous, and the wise, and their works, are in the hand of God: ^cno man knoweth either love or hatred by all that is before them.

2 All things come ^calike to all: there is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the good, and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not: ^cas is the good, so is the sinner; and he that sweareth, as he that ^cfeareth an oath.

3 This is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all: yea, ^calso the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, ^cand madness is in their heart while they live, and ^bafter that they go to the dead.

4 ¶ For ^cto him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion.

5 For the living know that they shall die: but ^cthe dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten.

6 Also ^ctheir love, and their hatred, and ness, while they denied the power of it; they came and went from "the place of the holy," and they were "forgotten in the city where they had so done." It is an awful thing to look on the corpse of a human being who has never heard the gospel of the grace of God, but it is something inexpressibly more awful to look on that of a man who had spent all his days in hearing the glad tidings of salvation, and at length died an impenitent unbeliever. In the last verse, Solomon dives deeply into human nature, and reveals a character peculiar to the race. It is strange that patience should only increase impenitence; but so it is! The crime, however, is peculiarly aggravated, and the punishment in proportion to the guilt. Ver. 12-17. One thing is sure, that whatever seeming contradictions an inscrutable Providence may permit in this present life, justice at last will be done, when it will be well with them that fear God, and walk in his holy ways; but ill with the wicked, because he feared not God, and trampled under foot the blood of the covenant! Let not devout readers, therefore, be stumbled by the prosperity of the wicked, or by his own afflictions. The time will come when countless millions will have to rejoice that they were not rich, but had simply food and clothing suitable for them. Let all, therefore, who possess these, thank the Lord, and be content, believing that their lot is the best that Infinite Wisdom could have devised for them.

Chap. IX. 1-10. Men must not judge of the ways of Providence according to appearances. It is but too common to estimate love by indulgence, but "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Prosperity is no sure sign of Divine approbation, neither is affliction of displeasure: nay, the prosperity of the wicked is frequently a preparation for judgments. Meanwhile matters present a very mingled and conflicting aspect, but the day which is to declare all things, will adjust and harmonise the whole; and it will then be seen that there is a difference between him that sweareth, and him that feareth an oath. The present condition of things is such, that even the more sagacious ancients argued, that there must of necessity either be no gods presiding over the present scene, or there must be another state in which virtue shall be rewarded and vice punished. It is enough for the good man that God accepts his works; this done, all is secure for eternity. True faith always works by love; and, wherever the works are present, there will be no dispute as to principle. Ver. 10 is one of those passages which come home with great power to the hearts of men. Life is the time for working. After death, the body of the righteous will rest long in the tomb, and the spirit of the just in the paradise of God. Ver. 11, 12. Solomon's mind was deeply impressed with the fact, that there was an all-pervading sovereignty in the affairs their envy, is now perished; neither ^mhave they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.

7 ¶ Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works.

8 Let ⁿthy garments be always white; and let thy head lack no ointment.

9 ^oLive joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest ^pall the days of the life of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: ^qfor that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun.

10 Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; ^rfor there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.

11 ¶ I returned, and saw under the sun, ^sthat the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; ^tbut time and chance happeneth to them all.

12 For man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds ^uthat are caught in the snare; so ^vare the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them.

13 ¶ This ^wwisdom have I seen also under the sun, and it ^xseemed great unto me:

14 There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it.

15 Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man.

16 Then said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard.

17 The words ^yof wise men are heard in quiet, more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.

18 Wisdom is ^zbetter than weapons of war: but ^aone sinner destroyeth much good.

savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour.

4 If the spirit of the ruler rise up against thee, ⁴leave not thy place; ⁵for yielding pacifieth great offences.

11 Surely ¹¹the serpent will bite without enchantment; and ¹²a babbler is no better.

12 The ¹³words of a wise man's mouth are ¹⁴gracious: ¹⁵but the lips of a fool will swallow up himself.

13 The beginning of the words of his mouth is foolishness; and the end of his ¹⁶talk is mischievous madness.

14 A ¹⁷fool also ¹⁸is full of words: ¹⁹a man cannot tell what shall be; and what shall be after him, who can tell him?

15 The labour of the foolish wearieth every one of them, because he knoweth not how to go to the city.

of men; so that sometimes the slow won the race, and the weak the battle. "Time and chance" are terms which must be understood according to the analogy of faith. There is a time for every purpose; everything which is to be foreseen by Omniscience, and forms a part of the complex and mighty whole. Ver. 13-18. These verses present an affecting picture of what has frequently occurred, and exhibit a principle in daily operation. Poverty and sagacity are frequently found united together; wisdom in most things is better than strength; and that strength may be used to the best purposes, it must be exercised under the guidance of wisdom; nevertheless, the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard. The question generally is, less, what is said? than, who says it? If uttered by the poor, it is despised; if by the rich, an oracle. No matter: "wisdom is better than weapons of war;" and the judicious man, pursuing his quiet and useful path, is more an object of respect, than the foolish ruler of foolish men.

Chap. X. 1-15. The wisest and the best man, by a single act, may incur an odium which will cleave to him through life. This is well exemplified by the simile of dead flies, which cause putrefaction and spoil the most precious ointment. Ver. 4 supplies a lesson of great importance to young persons entering into life, and to all that occupy subordinate positions in society. The neglect of this has subjected multitudes to tribulation. Acting on this Divine lesson, many a difference would easily have been adjusted which has led to unhappy results. There are few maxims more important to society. Where people are competent to their duties, and their employers are reasonable and just, connexions will heart, "and put away evil from thy flesh: "for childhood and youth are vanity.

CHAPTER XII

1 The Creator is to be remembered in due time. 8 The Preacher's care to edify. 13 The general conclusion, that man's chief concern is to fear God, and to obey his laws.

REMEMBER now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, "when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them:

2 While "the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, "nor the clouds return after the rain:

3 In the day when "the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders "cease, because they are few, "and those that look out of the windows be darkened;

4 And the doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low; and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird; and "all the daughters of musick shall be brought low:

5 Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way, and the "almond-tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail; "because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets:

6 Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern:

7 Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and "the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

8 ¶ Vanity "of vanities, saith the Preacher; all is vanity.

9 And "moreover, because the Preacher was wise, "he still taught the people knowledge; yea, "he gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.

10 The "Preacher sought to find out be generally lasting. Constant change is alike disadvantageous both to the one and to the other. In the East, as in many parts of Europe, walls of stone were reared as land-marks, and, becoming the nests of vipers, the man who removed them was exposed to danger. Ver. 16-20. To eat early in the morning, is considered by the Hindus as gross, disgraceful, and ruinous. All festivity is not forbidden; only the excess which unfits man for the duties of his office. Princes are to eat in due season for "strength, and not for drunkenness." Viewing society as a whole, those rule best who are born to it. Whatever objections may be made to hereditary sovereignty, it will for the most part be found to work better than popular election. Noble descent, as a rule, supplies a greater guarantee for dignity, propriety, and public spirit, than plebeian origin.

Chap. XI. 1-6. In India the principal article of human food is rice, which is, therefore, a staple commodity. The best crop is obtained by sowing the seed in a fruitful spot, and when the plants have risen a few inches, by taking them up with a ball of earth and dropping them into the fields, well overflowed with water. In Egypt the rice grounds are inundated from the time of sowing nearly till harvest. While the duty of employing proper means to accomplish desired ends is strongly inculcated, man is impressively taught his entire dependence on the Father of all. Ver. 7, 8. Light is the most beautiful object in creation: it and the eye are alike adapted to each other, and each depends for its utility on the other. Light without eyes, and eyes without light, would be alike valueless. It is proper that the young and strong should habitually remember, that in the event of life being preserved, they will be overtaken by age and frailty, and that, therefore, they ought to turn their strength to the best account while they have it. Ver. 9, 10. These are solemn words! "God will bring thee into judgment," is language which ought to penetrate the young man to whom it is addressed to his innermost soul. The proper plan to prepare for that judgment is to put away evil of every kind in thought, and speech, and behaviour, to follow the Lord fully, and by the strength of his grace, to walk in his holy ways.

Chap. XII. 1-7. Solomon in this Book, as in that of Proverbs, addresses himself particularly to young men. These verses present a very affecting representation of the condition of old age. The heavenly bodies, the sun and moon, signify the faculties of the soul, judgment, will, and affections. The sum of the whole is, the coming decay for which humanity should stand prepared. Each of the points here specified has a meaning, which will readily present itself to the reflecting reader.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON.

Some diversity of opinion has prevailed concerning this book. Although not expressly quoted in the New Testament, its strain and spirit strikingly coincide with many portions of the Bible. It is to be considered as a pastoral allegory representing the mutual love of Christ and his Church, under figures derived from the affections which obtain in human society. Our great concern, however, is to ascertain its spiritual import. It refers to times so distant, and to usages and habits so different from ours, that we can form but an imperfect conception of its literal bearing. But, under the teaching of the Divine Spirit, it may prove a source of abundant refreshment, comfort, and encouragement to the people of God. There is much in it descriptive of the most matured experience of the believer, illustrative of adoration, gratitude, and love to Him who is altogether lovely.

CHAPTER I.

Few things are more calculated to humble pride, and to keep alive a constant remembrance that men dwell in houses of clay. Ver. 8-12. As Solomon opened in the character of a Preacher, so here at the close he claims the same high office. Great prominence is given to teaching; he was less intent on persuading than on illuminating, and he persuaded only through enlightening: he still taught the people knowledge. Nothing else can nourish the soul but words of sound doctrine. Solomon, notwithstanding his matchless gifts, and Divine tuition, felt the need of study; and, accordingly, "he gave good heed, and sought out and set in order many proverbs." The example has the force of a rule to all instructors, and especially to those in comparative youth, and of but limited experience. Great prominence is given to the matter of studious endeavour; "The Preacher sought to find out acceptable words." Here, again, is a lesson; truth itself is sufficiently offensive to the human heart, so that it is very inexpedient to make it more so by the mode of its exhibition. So far as is compatible with integrity, it should be set forth in terms the most winning and persuasive. The goads were the pikes with which draught oxen were pricked forward. The nails or pins were firmly fixed to the walls in buildings, so that garments and utensils might be suspended from them. These things aptly indicate the pungency of truth. The masters of assemblies may be understood as meaning those who ruled by reason, swaying the judgments and the passions of multitudes, by fixing in their minds, and in their hearts, doctrines and arguments. Men in general were not meant to be students, or students only so far as is necessary to the due discharge of the duties of life. Severe intellectual application is hurtful, and carried to excess in delicate constitutions has often destroyed life. Ver. 13, 14. It is the province of wisdom to exemplify truth, and in this Solomon excelled all his predecessors. The rule of life is here furnished in a few words—"Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." This fear comprises love, which alone can produce filial obedience. It is the result of a regenerated heart, and an indwelling Spirit.

Chap. I. 1-4. The love of the Saviour to his people is the life of their souls; and the reciprocation of that love in its higher degrees is even begun on earth. It is a pleasure wholly different from all other pleasures, and such as can be comprehended only by those who experience it. In praise, prayer, and preaching, His name is everything; it may be fitly likened to the most precious "ointment poured forth." Without it, poetry, song, and sermon, whatever their other qualities, are dry and useless. They who love most are least satisfied with their own attainments; they desire to love him with all their soul, and heart, and strength, and mind. It is grace that desires grace, and the desire is strong for more in proportion to the measure already enjoyed. Ver. 5-8. As the Saviour rises in his people's estimation, they themselves sink; the highest excellence of the creature is not merely eclipsed, but lost in the splendour of his glory. The holiest of his people have sometimes been hardly dealt with by their brethren; their very zeal and spirituality have been treated as something culpable. But, under the circumstance, the remembrance of his love and tenderness will suffice to console and support them. The greatest of all errors is men's attending to the vineyards of others while they neglect their own. To promote the salvation of our fellow-men cannot compensate for our own perdition. Men are known by their company; the sheep naturally draw to the fold; they cannot rest at a distance from the Shepherd and Bishop of their souls. He only can guide, protect, and conduct to pastures green and streams refreshing. Ends can only be accomplished by means, and they who would grow in grace must wait on God in the ordinances of the Gospel. Ver. 9-17. The Lord Jesus always approves his own work, and delights in the graces he bestows on his people. Deep and habitual communion with him will, by degrees, transform them to his own glorious image. As the work advances pleasure will increase; every gift will grow, and every grace be developed, till the soul be filled with the fulness of God.

Chap. II. 1-4. The Saviour is alike beautiful and glorious to the spiritual eye in his humiliation and in his exaltation; and his people are, in this respect, like himself. However condemned by a wicked world, there is yet a beauty in their humility which renders them lovely to angels. The lily and the thorn are most expressive emblems of the righteous and the wicked, the children of God and the children of Belial. No two objects can be less like each other; and the difference is fraught with impressive lessons to the faithful. All the offices of the Saviour are alike necessary to his saints: there is nothing superfluous, and nothing defective. To the conscience burdened with sin, however, his priestly character is the first thing that presents itself: his atonement alone can bring peace; and that obtained, the soul is in a position to receive the lessons of her Prophet, and to obey the mandates of her King. Resting before his cross, and surrounded with the promises, which in him are yea and amen, his fruit will be sweet to his people's taste, and they will magnify his salvation. The Pharisee has no conception of what is meant by the "banqueting-house;" but to such as are quickened anew, enlightened, taught, and adopted into the Divine family, the expression is full of significance. God's ordinances ought always to prove a banqueting-house, strengthening and refreshing his people amid their trials and labours, and meeting them for future service and conflict. Ver. 5-9. While the Law is never to be forgotten, it must occupy but a secondary place as compared with the Gospel. While it convicts of sin, and guides in duty, yet nothing can feed and nourish the immortal spirit but the Gospel. Dead professors may treat with scorn Christian consolation, and affect to despise the comfort of love; but the true children of God, to their own blessed experience, know it to be a golden reality. Ver. 10-14. Unconverted men can make nothing of such language as this; but they who have passed from death unto life have been endowed with a disposition which responds to the voice of the Saviour in his Word, and ordinances, and providences. They know his voice, and are prompt to heed his bidding. To them even the last call which summons them home to grace and glory, although made through the medium of death, is not terrible, but the contrary; their response is, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus; come quickly!" Ver. 15-17. There is much spiritual import contained in ver. 15. As little foxes have yet the power of doing great mischief among the tender vines, so small neglects and small transgressions will deaden conscience, grieve the spirit, lower the tone of piety, and prepare the soul for great transgression. The enemy is too experienced in the work of destruction to urge the saint to great iniquities without having previously prepared him. It was a maxim even of Heathen wisdom, that no man becomes supremely wicked all at once. There are steps each an advance on its predecessor, and all conducting to the precipice. The Christian's safety, therefore, depends on his vigilance. To confide is to be surprised, perhaps destroyed! With watchfulness and prayer, and reliance on the strength of Heaven, there are no difficulties which may not be surmounted, no adversaries that may not be vanquished.

Chap. III. 1-3. Even the true Christian falls into negligence, which, before he is aware, brings darkness into his soul, and interrupts his communion with the Saviour. The result of this is, necessarily, distress; and it is matter for thanksgiving that it is so. Could danger be incurred without anything to apprise him of its approach, the peril would be great indeed! But happiness is suspended on holiness. Misery is the fruit of sin. Departing from the Lord, deadness and distress must ensue, and nothing can restore peace but a return. In such a case as this, deep humiliation is required, with careful searchings of heart, penitence for every ascertained evil, and a fresh application to the blood of sprinkling. In such circumstances, it is proper to repair to the watchmen of the city, who will be able to answer such questions as the case may suggest. Ver. 4-8. The loss of peace is frequently a thing of gradation; the restoration of it may be long in coming, or even come in portions. It is well for those who have culpably forgotten that they were purged from their old sins to be kept, for a season, at a distance, sorrowing for the past, and pondering over their folly. This is much fitted to impress their hearts with a sense of the danger of returning again to those ways from which they had clean escaped. The true penitent will be forward to confess his error, and to humble himself under the mighty hand of God, who will exalt, if not immediately, yet in due time. When grace is reigning through righteousness, ver. 6 is beautifully exemplified. All the elements of a new nature, love, joy, peace, patience, and hope, will thrive abundantly, and display themselves in all appropriate ways. Every service will be an offering to the Saviour, and life itself one acceptable sacrifice. These military figures, though strongly expressive, are but an imperfect emblem of the thing described. The protection of faithful guards and armed hosts may yet fail in the hour of danger; but they that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, nothing can move them. Ver. 9-11. The new covenant provides for all that is required by God's elect. Believers are born to privileges, of which nothing can deprive them. Objects of the Divine love, nothing can sever them from it. He who has begun the good work in them will carry it on to the day of Christ. If despised, and wronged by the world, they may with confidence look forward to a day of gladness, when their Master in heaven will avenge their cause, and humble their adversaries.

Chap. IV. 1-7. In the case of these opening verses, the figure comes far short of the fact. Not only is the Church of Christ the object of his love—she herself, through the grace of his Spirit, reflects his holiness, and adorns the truth. The mind enlightened, the will subdued, the affections purified and fixed on their proper objects, and the walk and conversation resembling his own—all unite to demonstrate that if any one be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature. Their habitual reliance on the finished work, and the promised assistance of his Spirit, their delight in his ordinances, and the imitation of his holy example, are all honourable to the Lord, contributing to the diffusion of his truth, and to the extension of his kingdom. That the real state of the case as to the power of the truth in renovating the soul of man may be fully understood, the entire Church

7 Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee.

8 ¶ Come with me from Lebanon, my spouse, with me from Lebanon: look from the top of Amana, from the top of Shenir and Hermon, from the lions' dens, from the mountains of the leopards.

10 How fair is thy love, my sister, my spouse! how much better is thy love than wine! and the smell of thine ointments than all spices!

11 Thy lips, O my spouse, drop as the honey-comb: honey and milk are under thy tongue; and the smell of thy garments is like the smell of Lebanon.

must be compared with the entire world. In this way it will be seen how much mankind owe to the law of the Lord, that converts the soul, and his testimony, which makes wise the simple. The personal history of the faithful in Christ Jesus, of all ranks and conditions, of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, is the best commentary on the Gospel. Ver. 8-16. When he summons them, forsaking earthly things, to look upward, it behoves them, with all possible promptness, so to do. The path is surrounded with peril. They are often beset with adversaries, of whom lions and leopards are but too expressive emblems. Nor is this all; they have also to contend with one who is far more terrible than these ferocious creatures. Their consolation is, that their Lord and Master sees everything, and controls everything, checking their adversaries, and making even their enemies to promote their spiritual interests. These verses are rich in a very high degree, so much so that they can only find their development in the treasures of the Gospel. Salvation is, from first to last, a work of pure mercy. But while it blesses the creature, it also glorifies the Saviour. He is not ashamed to acknowledge his people as his friends, and to confess them under all circumstances. His Church is fitly likened to a garden enclosed in the wilderness of human nature, and adorned with the plants of paradise. The "fountain sealed" is a precious idea: that seal the world cannot break; and the choice waters of felicity are shut up, and none can share them but through the Lord the Lamb. With such privileges, what returns should the people of God make! Nothing is more calculated at once to humble the saints and to quicken them than his abounding mercy, and the rich provisions of the everlasting covenant.

Chap. V. 1-3. The Saviour is here represented as blessing his Church, and conferring upon her special gospel privileges and consolation. Happy the saint, and happy the fellowship that is prepared to receive him! His visits leave behind them a satisfaction which the world can neither give nor take away, cheering the sorrowful, and preparing for conflict those who are called to fight the good fight of faith with spiritual enemies. Such visits, however, are less frequent than they might be, were the saints more desirous of them, and more concerned to be always ready for the coming of the Lord. They are too frequently asleep, and their lamps all but out, while they ought to be waking, looking and longing for the appearance of their Divine Benefactor. There is presented an idea of great moment, in connexion with Christian experience, in the expression, that while the bride "slept, her heart was awake." Notwithstanding the spiritual dulness and the darkness that had descended on her, she heard and knew his voice in conscience, in the Scriptures, and in Providence, having no doubt that it was her Beloved who knocked and sought admission. The condition, however, is a dangerous one, and happy they who know nothing of it by experience. But it is matter for thankfulness that if asleep, that sleep is not unto death; the heart waketh, and the whole being, by the touch of the Divine Spirit, admits of a speedy resuscitation. People in a drooping condition are at no loss for excuses for the neglect of holy the rivers of waters, washed with milk, and ⁷fittly set:

13 His cheeks are as a bed of spices, as ⁸sweet flowers; ⁹his lips like lilies, dropping sweet-smelling myrrh:

16 His ¹²mouth is ¹³most sweet; yea, he is altogether lovely. This is ¹⁴my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The daughters of Jerusalem purpose to seek Christ; the spouse answers them, and professeth her faith in him. 4 Christ repeats his commendations, declares his fervent love, shews his conduct, and describes her character.

WHITHER is thy beloved gone, O thou fairest among women? whither is thy beloved turned aside? ²that we may seek him with thee.

2 My beloved is ³gone down into his garden, to the beds of spices, to ⁴feed in the gardens, ⁵and to gather lilies.

3 I am ⁶my beloved's, and my beloved is mine; he feedeth among the lilies.

exercises. They will now plead this, and that, and the other thing, as an apology for negligence concerning the preaching of the Word, and the ordinances of the Gospel. Such apologies, however, will be of no avail. God will not be mocked; whatever men sow, that they will certainly reap. Ver. 4-8. Although the Lord Jesus will not cast off his people, if they depart from him he will chasten them; sin must be followed by punishment, either in this world or in the next, unless through penitence it shall have been mercifully pardoned. It is our duty to avail ourselves of the privilege of the prayers of the faithful. It hath pleased God to constitute men mutual intercessors, and thus to bind them together by the tie of mutual obligation. Ver. 9-16. With more faith and love we should have more fervour of expression both in praise and prayer. These are exercises which cannot be devolved on others. Salvation is a personal thing, and it can only be suitably acknowledged by its receivers. The great end for which believers ought to live, is to shew forth his praise, and to magnify his goodness. Silence here is treason. So great is his beauty, that to see is to desire; so great is his bounty, that to receive is to magnify. The variety of aspects in which his glory presents itself is very great. Whoso offereth praise glorifieth him, and to all who order their conversation aright will he shew the salvation of God.

Chap. VI. 1-18. The knowledge of believers is frequently greater than their experience; while the heart languishes, the understanding may be unimpaired. The Christian, although himself deficient in the consolations of the Word, may yet be useful in sending inquirers to the Cross. The gathering of the lilies, while a beautiful expression, as implying severance, is productive of sorrow. The deaths of Christians, ripe for glory, is to be viewed as simply the removal from earth of the chosen, and 1 A further description of the church's graces. 10 The church professeth her faith and desire.

HOW beautiful are ²thy feet with shoes, ³O prince's daughter! ⁴the joints of thy thighs are like jewels, the work of the hands of a cunning workman:

their transfer to paradise. No process will so much conduce to the revival of the drooping affections, as dwelling on the excellence of the Saviour. While believers think on his finished work, and, by faith, gaze on his glorious person, their souls are stirred within them, and they are constrained to exclaim, "I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine!" Such, satisfied that they belong to him, bear his image, and breathe his spirit, and have but little doubt of a personal interest in his love and favour. When the Church shall appear in her beauty, and extensively cover the earth, she will be to the world as an "army terrible with banners." Piety is power; purity is awful! The faithful, spiritually viewed, are both disciplined, and armed, and commanded by their all-wise, all-powerful, and victorious Lord. In his strength they will go forth, conquering and to conquer. Their weapons are not carnal, but spiritual; and although, on that account, they seem to be as nothing, they are yet mighty, through God, to the pulling down of strongholds. Nothing can stand before the true believer, who becomes clothed with the power of Omnipotence. Thus armed, victory is sure; of all glorious things, the beauty of holiness is incomparably the most glorious, although the eye of the world sees it not. Washed in the blood of the Lamb, and sanctified by his Spirit, believers shine as lights in the earth. The Lord Jesus never fails to distinguish between things that differ. He knows when the spirit is willing and yet the flesh is weak, and is prepared with all the allowance of love, wisely exercised, for the defects of his children.

Chap. VII. 1-9. The Son of God is the sole fountain of honour in earth and heaven. It is his province to bestow not merely nobility, but royal dignity. He constitutes the objects of his love the sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty. Such honour have all his 13 The ¹⁶mandrakes give a smell, and ¹⁷at our gates are all manner of pleasant fruits, ¹⁸new and old, which ¹⁹"I have laid up for thee, O my beloved.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The love of the church to Christ. 6 The vehemency of love. 8 The calling of the Gentiles. 14 The church prayeth for Christ's coming.

saints, and none can take it from them. In the world to come, there will be a mighty reverse; multitudes now dignified and powerful will sink into contempt and nothingness, while the countless hosts of God's elect will be raised to title and glory, fitting them for the eternal fellowship of their Almighty Lord. The loving converse of believers is peculiarly pleasing to the Saviour, as well as refreshing and edifying to themselves. In this way they strengthen each others' hands, and comfort each others' hearts. Ver. 10-13. When the soul has come to enjoy the full assurance that it has laid hold of Christ, and is interested in his work and mediation, it has entered into rest: this is the foundation of a hope which nothing can shake, and which, like an anchor, enables it to outlive every storm. But even this happy state does not render unnecessary self-examination, watchfulness, and prayer. It will be often needful to "see when the vines flourish, and the tender grape appears." Believers are subjected to constant temptations, and all the external influences which act upon them tend, not to impel, but to retard. Whatever self-indulgence may deem to the contrary, religion is a warfare; and they who imagine it to be a life of sloth and luxury will find to their sad surprise, when too late, that they were mistaken. The light in which men look on the cause of Christ, serves to test their real character. If they rejoice in the spread of his triumphs, and the extension of his kingdom, it is an evidence in their favour; but if they be indifferent thereto, and concerned only with their own spiritual interests, the presumption is strong that they are still in the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity, even should they speak with tongues and perform miracles.

Chap. VIII. 1-5. The ancient Church looked forward with eager hope to the coming of the Messiah as the event which would supply all their wants, soothe all their sorrows, rectify whatever was wrong, and establish the reign of love. That which they had so long looked for, and which both kings and prophets desired to see, without realising their desire, was in the fulness of time accomplished, when He appeared in human flesh, finishing transgression and making an end of sin. Having done this, he ascended, that he might carry on what remained of his Mediatorial work in heaven; but he left his people a rich legacy of peace, and appointed them those ordinances in which it is their duty to seek, and their privilege to find him. The path to the mercy-seat is ever open, and all who approach are sure of blessing. Ver. 6-10. Of all principles, love is by far the most powerful and active; it received from the Lord Jesus himself its primary and its only perfect exemplification; but, in diminished and various degrees, it is still displayed among his people. True faith always produces love, and love uniformly labours to glorify the Lord. This Song presents an extraordinary resemblance to the apostolic exhibitions of this Divine affection. The supreme desire of the believer's heart is for grace to be faithful, to be established in the truth, and fixed as a "seal on his heart, and on his arm;" thus each will become a pillar in the temple of God, to go no more out for ever. Ver. 11-14. In proportion as men themselves prize the grace of the Gospel, they will pity such as remain in the valley of the shadow of death. That the lost should pity the lost is not to be expected; and, therefore, it is vain to look to them for great, generous, and continued efforts to diffuse the knowledge of salva-

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET ISAIAH.

Isaiah, evangelically considered, occupies a high place among the ancient Prophets. So great was the light vouchsafed to him concerning the Lord Jesus, that he has been designated the Fifth Evangelist. No other Prophet has spoken so explicitly and copiously touching the Saviour's person, sufferings, atonement, righteousness, grace, reign, and glory. No other Prophet enjoyed so splendid a view of the Coming Kingdom.

tion. Every outward blessing is to be received simply as a talent, for which the receiver must give account: men's faith, in the end, will assuredly be tested by their works; and where these abound, no doubt will be entertained as to their sincerity. Every man has, then, in his own heart, a vineyard to cultivate, which it behoves him to tend with care, zeal, and diligence. The more labour he bestows in a right spirit, the greater the success which will attend him. "Those who dwell in the gardens"—that is, who enjoy an abundance of the means of grace—should see to it, that their advantages be not thrown away upon them, remembering, that "to whom much is given of them much will be required."

Chap. I. 1-15. The portrait here drawn of mankind is deeply humbling. They who are puffed up with exalted notions of the dignity of human nature, have only to look into these verses and their parallels to be undeceived. Man loses even by comparison with the ox and the ass, who manifest confidence in him who owns, works, and feeds them, while he, the boastful head of Creation, in this lower world, forgetful of his God, is intent only on self-gratification. He makes nothing of the Gospel, and sets light by the invitations of mercy. Here the utter worthlessness of mere profession is strikingly exemplified. It is to no purpose men call Jesus Lord, when they reject his authority, and trample under foot his commandments. The people whom the prophet addressed abounded in burnt-offerings; they shed the blood of sacrifice most copiously; they were studious of observing new-moons and Sabbaths; they even tied the mint, and the anise, and the cummin, but neglected justice, mercy, and faith; even while they poured out their prayers in an uninterrupted stream, their hands were full of blood. Such statements ought to sink deep into the hearts of Christian professors. Let them carefully examine themselves, and see whether they be in the faith, whether Christ be found in them the hope of glory, whether they hate sin and love holiness, and whether they are now living lives of faith upon the Son of God, who loved them and gave himself for them. If they be in Christ, they are new creatures; old things are passed away, and all things are become new. Ver. 16-31. While the prophet denounces the hypocrite, he opens to him the way of return by repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. There is no amount of sin which may not be forgiven, no defilement which may not be cleansed. The blood of Christ suffices for all the necessities of fallen man. The true Christian will ever pity the fatherless, and plead for the widow. Love to God invariably produces love to his people, and compassion for the suffering portion of the human race.

Chap. II. 1-9. There is here an exalted conception of the kingdom of Christ, and the happy effects it will produce among all nations. When the day arrives to which these verses point, the whole human family will be roused to consider the event which will then present itself. How greatly will things then be changed among every people! War, the present source of what the world calls glory, will have been extinguished. The nations will live in holy amity, and the only rivalry will be one of mutual good offices. Few things are more calculated to remove burdens from the hearts of thoughtful men, than the contemplation of these verses. The lesson here is clearly taught, that darkness is not to remain for ever; that the reign of sin and error is not to be permanent; that a time will come, when truth will triumph, when grace will subdue the rebellion of the world, and love reign triumphantly in every land. Ver. 10-22. Pride and piety cannot co-exist in the same bosom. Pride must be cast out to make room for humility. The grace of Christ never fails to produce resemblance to the character of Christ. Oneness of spirit and purpose produces oneness of walk and conversation. A day draws on, when it will be found a poor thing to be rich, and a little thing to be a king; when nothing will bring peace but righteousness, and inspire hope but faith in the blood of the Lamb.

Chap. III. 1-11. Nations, and even nations called Christian, still rely more on their Statesmen and Rulers, their Armies and their Navies, their Orators and their Philosophers, than upon the living God. Dust reposes on dust, to the forgetfulness of Him by whom all things exist, and are upheld, and for whose glory they were created. Such are not to be despised in their character of instruments for accomplishing the purposes of the Most High; but they must be kept in their place. Great statesmen and wise kings are to be viewed as blessings, and to be made the subjects of thankfulness and praise to the Giver: but the moment they are made to take his place, and receive his homage, the act may be viewed as the knell of their desolation. The Creator will not divide his glory with the creature; and they who are intent on accomplishing such an object should see to it, that they bring not upon themselves swift destruction. In the meantime, there is much seeming opposition in the affairs of men; the wicked often prosper, while the righteous are hungry and hard bested. This state of things, however, will not last always. A day will assuredly come, when it will be seen that it is well with the righteous, and that they shall eat the fruit of their doings; while it is ill with the wicked, since they, too, will receive the reward of their deeds. Ver. 12-15. One of the heaviest judgments that can befall a land is to have children, in the guise of full-grown men, conducting their affairs, and when the female minions of a court possess the power to determine the fate of a people. Few works are more calculated to bring judgment on their authors than the "grinding of the faces of the poor." To an awful extent this has been done through every country, where the many have lived for one—when

CHAPTER V.

1 A parable of a well-cultivated vineyard which bore corrupt fruit. 8 Israel's sins, and the judgments that were coming on them. 26 The invasion of the land by the Assyrians or Chaldeans.

NOW ^a will I sing to my ^b well-beloved a song of my beloved touching his vineyard. My well-beloved hath a vineyard in ^c a very fruitful hill:

2 And ^d he ^e fenced it, and gathered out the stones thereof, and ^f planted it with the choicest vine, ^g and built a tower in the midst of it, and also ^h made a winepress therein: and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

3 And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah, judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard.

4 What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?

5 And now ^a go to; I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard: I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and break down the wall thereof, and it shall be ^b trodden down:

6 And I will lay it waste: it shall not be pruned nor digged; but there shall come up briers and thorns: ^c I will also command the clouds that they rain upon it.

7 For the vineyard of the LORD of hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah ^a his pleasant plant: and ^b he looked for judgment, but behold ^c oppression; for righteousness, but behold a cry.

8 ¶ Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay ^a field to field, till there be there has been mirth and song in the palace, sorrow and lamentation among the people! Ver. 16-26. This is a humbling picture of human vanity, shewing that as men are now, so they were in the days of Isaiah, nearly 800 years before the appearance of the Son of God upon the earth. Nowhere have we a more severe rebuke to the vanity of the world than these verses present. It is easy to plead rank, society, and circumstances as an apology for excess in the article of apparel; but there is a Searcher of hearts who will examine into the matter, and ascertain with perfect accuracy how far the course corresponds with the situation. There is no difficulty in dressing plainly in the midst of the most extravagant displays; no difficulty in being humble under the roof of pride, and of serving the Lord in the sight of those who hate him. The glittering baubles of this world are coveted only by its own children. They who have sacrificed everything to obtain the "pearl of great price," are unmoved by the vanities of earth. They have set their hearts upon the more precious and more enduring riches, and do not envy the trifles of the giddy multitude, who are unconcerned for anything beyond the present moment.

Chap. IV. 1-6. The Branch of the Lord, beautiful and glorious, is the "standard of his people." The fruits of his sacrifice and mediation are excellent above all price in the opinion of such as know the truth, and have experienced the power of it to make them free from the love and practice of sin. These are sons, citizens, temples of his Eternal Spirit, by whom they have been renewed after the image of the Lamb. These by faith have washed away their defilement in the "fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness." Possessing the Spirit of Christ, they walk in the Spirit, crucifying the flesh, with its affections and lusts. The Spirit of judgment, and the Spirit of burning alone can purge a polluted world from the filthiness of flesh and spirit, rendering it a meet offering for the Lord. The two last of the foregoing verses possess signal beauty, as setting forth the rich provision which the God of love has made for the comfort and safety of his people. The simile of the cloud and the flaming fire is clearly taken from the history of Moses, receiving a spiritual application full of comfort to God's elect. God will not abandon his people to the wicked; he will watch over them in all their ways, preserving them by his Almighty power, till they have finished their course, and become meet for the joy of their Lord.

Chap. V. 1-7. The Orientals delight in figures; things embody themselves in pictures, which, while they enlighten the understanding, captivate the fancy. The present parable exhibits the peculiar privileges enjoyed by Israel, and the consequent guilt of their abuse of special mercies. Such advantages involve a corresponding obligation; having received much of the Lord, they no place, that ¹they may be ²placed alone in the midst of the earth!

9 ³In mine ears said the LORD of hosts, ⁴Of a truth many houses shall be ⁵desolate, even great and fair, without inhabitant.

10 Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield ¹¹one bath, and the seed of an homer shall yield an ephah.

11 ¶ Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that continue until night, till wine ¹inflame them!

12 And the harp and the viol, the tabret and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts: but ²they regard not the work of the LORD, neither consider the operation of his hands.

13 Therefore my people are gone into captivity, ⁴because they have no knowledge; and ²their honourable men are famished, and ³their multitude dried up with thirst.

14 Therefore hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure: and their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth, shall descend into it.

15 And ⁴the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled, and ⁵the eyes of the lofty shall be humbled:

16 But the LORD of hosts shall be exalted in judgment, and ³God, that is holy, shall be ⁴sanctified in righteousness.

17 Then shall the lambs feed after their manner, and ²the waste places of the fat ones shall ³strangers eat.

18 ¶ Woe unto them that ²draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart-rope:

19 That say, ¹Let him make speed, and hasten his work, that we may see it: and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it!

20 ¶ Woe unto ²them that ⁴call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!

21 Woe unto them that are ²wise in their own eyes, and prudent ³in their own sight!

CHAPTER VI.

1 Isaiah, in a vision of God's glory, being greatly dismayed, is confirmed for his message. 9 He sheweth the oldenacy and ruin of the people. 13 A remnant shall be saved.

IN ²the year that king Uzziah died ¹I saw also the LORD sitting upon a were bound to yield an appropriate return. Instead of this, however, they proved barren; the vineyard produced wild grapes of hypocrisy, carnality, and iniquity. Of all sins, the abuse of Gospel blessings is the greatest; and it will incur the most awful penalties. It is to no purpose that men have once run well, if they should afterwards deviate from the path of holy obedience; their past profession, so far from mitigating their guilt, will only tend to aggravate it. Ver. 8-17. The Prophet paid no court to the rich men, neither did he connive at iniquity. Prosperity had no power to propitiate his favour; he was only concerned to vindicate the honours of the Divine Government, and to inculcate obedience on the creatures. Intemperance of every kind is a heinous offence against God, and will not fail to be visited with appropriate chastisements. Ver. 18-25. The zeal of the wicked, in their endeavours to realise worldly profit, and to command the means of enjoying sinful pleasures, is very great. This is a prime object with the bulk of human kind. They desire nothing beyond, and are prepared to suffer the loss of all things to accomplish this. One transgression leads to another.

Among young people, more especially, is this the case. Forming wicked associates, they are tempted to perjure, to lie, and even to kill. The depraved heart flies to the camp of Infidelity, feeling that it requires an opiate, which that system alone can supply. Ver. 26-30. These sublime words present an awful conception of the Divine Government when dealing with erring creatures. Everything existing becomes a minister of his pleasure, to punish the despisers of his Son, and the breakers of his commandments. When this object is to be brought about, friends become enemies, prospects are blighted, health gives place to sickness, gain to loss, one disaster follows on the back of another, till the cup of displeasure has been filled, which the transgressor must drink to the dregs thereof.

Chap. VI. 1-4. The discovery of the Divine glory, apart from the Lord Jesus Christ, would be terrible to the holiest man on earth! In him, however, it is veiled, and shaded, becoming the source of peace, joy, and hope. All creatures endowed with reason worship the Lord of hosts, according to their several measures of holiness throne, ^chigh and lifted up, and ¹his train filled the temple.

2 Above it stood the ^dseraphims: each one had six ^ewings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly.

3 And ²one cried unto another, and said, ^fHoly, holy, holy is the LORD of hosts: ^gthe whole earth is full of his glory.

5 ¶ Then ⁱsaid I, Woe is me! for I am ^jundone; because I ^kam a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts.

6 Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, ^lhaving a live coal in his hand, ^mwhich he had taken with the tongs from off the altar:

7 And he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged.

8 ¶ Also I heard the voice of the LORD, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for ⁿus? Then said I, ^oHere am I; send me.

AND it came to pass, ^ain the days of Ahaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, that ^bRezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up toward Jerusalem to war against it, ^cbut could not prevail against it.

2 And it was told ^dthe house of David, saying, Syria ^eis confederate with Ephraim: ^fand his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind.

3 Then said the LORD unto Isaiah, ^gGo forth now to meet Ahaz, thou, and ^hShear-jashub thy son, at ⁱthe end of the conduit of the upper pool, in the ^jhighway of the fuller's field;

4 And say unto him, ^kTake heed, and be quiet; ^lfear not, ^mneither be faint-hearted for ⁿthe two tails of these smoking firebrands, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah.

5 Because ^oSyria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying,

6 Let us go up against Judah, and ^pvex it, and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeal:

7 Thus saith the Lord God, ^qIt shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass.

8 For ^rthe head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and and wisdom, with fervent love, zeal, and gratitude. Created by his power, and redeemed by the blood of the Lamb, regenerated by the Holy Spirit, and bearing the image of the first-born among many brethren, they are only concerned to please him; and while they live in loving fellowship, and love him in each other, there is, on the one hand, no idolatry, and on the other, no injury. As members of the same family, destined inhabitants of the same heavenly home, they walk as brethren in the hope of the rest which remains for all his people. Ver. 6-13. That which maketh manifest is light, and nothing is wanted but the Lord shining into the hearts of men to reveal to them their true character, which will constrain them to abhor themselves in dust and ashes. The creature, in his present state, although regenerated and reconciled, is incapable of bearing a full view of the justice, holiness, and glory of the Most High. He can only draw nigh to God through the Lord Jesus Christ, by whom he has received the Atonement; while the iniquity of even his holy things is removed, and the Eternal Spirit shed abroad in his heart as an earnest of the felicity which awaits him. They only are fitted for the service of the Lord, whose lips he has touched, taking away their iniquity, and purging their sin. None other will ever successfully testify to the Gospel of the grace of God, and win the wicked back again to Him from whom they have revolted. There may, however, be much preaching of the truth as it is in Christ, and in his own Spirit, with but little success. In spite of prayers and tears, the wicked may continue to do wickedly, and even augment their wickedness by their contempt of the message of salvation. But even in that case the labour is not lost; the Gospel will be "a savour of death unto death" to all those who despise and reject it. May the reader of these lines make no part of the miserable multitude!

Chap. VII. 1-12. The wicked are frequently employed to punish their fellow-transgressors, and they generally perform that service from motives of pride, revenge, or ambition; so that their deed is simply so much sin, to be punished in turn by others, or directly by the Lord himself. Human devices are vain, since the counsel of the Lord will stand, and the wisdom of the wise will be confounded. It is but rare that the wicked, when overtaken by judgments, think of their source and object. They resort to every method of deliverance before they think of Him from whom they have revolted. Sincere inquirers will never be rejected. The Lord is ever ready to satisfy the reasonable anxieties of his children; but they who hate light, and love darkness, will be left to their folly, and dealt with after their own devices. Ver. 13-25. Godly people are often wearied by the wicked, and their heavenly Father shares in the affliction: none can tell the sorrow of heart which has been endured by pious parents, loving teachers, and

CHAPTER VIII.

1 A prophecy against Syria and Israel, 5 and Judah. 9 God's judgments irresistible. 11 Comfort to them that fear God. 19 Great afflictions to idolaters.

MOREOVER, the LORD said unto me, °Take thee a great roll, and °write in it with °a man's pen concerning Mahar-shalal-hash-baz.

2 And °I took unto me faithful witnesses to record, °Uriah the priest, and Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah.

3 And I went unto °the prophetess; and °she conceived, and bare a son: then said the LORD to me, °Call his name °Mahar-shalal-hash-baz:

4 For °before the child shall have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother, the riches of Damascus, and the spoil of Samaria, shall be taken away before the king of Assyria.

5 ¶ The LORD °spake also unto me again, saying,

6 Forasmuch as this people °refuseth the waters of °Shiloah °that go softly, and °rejoice in Bezin and Remaliah's son;

7 Now therefore, behold, the Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, even the king of faithful ministers. Ver. 14-22. The spiritual portion of the ancient Church comforted themselves in the hope of the coming Saviour. Though our light they possessed not, nor our enjoyment, arising from the great fact that a Virgin conceived, and bare a son, whose name was Emmanuel, yet they had light sufficient to cheer their hearts, and to impart a ray of hope relative to the future. What was then prophecy is now history; it is our privilege to rejoice in a finished work, and to place implicit confidence in the mercy of our heavenly Father, through his Divine Son. Ancient history, both Inspired and Pagan, is full of lessons to mankind. Nations once mighty and prosperous, are now nothing more than vague and awful names. Full of power, and enriched by conquest, they looked for a perpetuity of dominion; but they passed away, to appear no more for ever. In these facts there is a lesson supplied both to nations and to individuals, which they will do well not to despise.

Chap. VIII. 1-10. Writing ranks with the most valuable inventions of human wit, or rather, it should be said, the best blessings of Heaven. It is an invaluable means of communication between minds the most remote from each other, and of transmitting knowledge from one generation to another. The fulfilment of prophecy constitutes an all-important element in the evidence of the Divine origin of the scheme of salvation. Nothing is more certain than that these predictions were written on the occasions to which they refer. The Jews, in this great matter, are witnesses against themselves; for the books are theirs, not ours, from which we produce the prophetic proofs, that God hath spoken, and that Christ the Lord has been revealed. Concerning the Divine origin of the Old Testament, there is no dispute between them and us; that turns solely upon the import of the written words. That a great personage, the Messiah, was to visit the earth, they hold as well as we; and the difference between them and the Christians is simply this; the one affirms that he has come and finished his work, and the other contends that his advent is still future. The subjects of Emmanuel have reason to rejoice in their King, who will watch over them, securing to them their privileges, and protecting them against all their foes. Ver. 11-14. It requires great faith in God's people not to walk in the ways of the world. Having to deal with the unseen, nothing can avail them but faith in the Divine testimony. In proportion as they walk by sight, they will be subject to the confusion and terrors of Assyria, and all his glory; and he shall come up over all his channels, and go over all his banks.

8 And he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over; he shall reach even to the neck: and ^{the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land,} ⁴O Immanuel.

9 ^T Associate yourselves, O ye people, ^{and ye shall be broken in pieces;} and give ear, all ye of far countries: gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces; gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces.

10 Take counsel together, and it shall come to nought; speak the word, and it shall not stand: ^{for God is with us.}

11 ^T For the LORD spake thus to me ^{with a strong hand, and instructed me,} that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying, 12 Say ye not, A confederacy, to all them to whom this people shall say, A confederacy; neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid.

13 Sanctify the LORD of hosts himself; ^{and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread.}

14 And ^{he shall be for a sanctuary;} but for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence, to both the houses of Israel; for a gin and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

15 And many among them shall ^{stumble, and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken.}

16 ^{Bind up the testimony, seal the law among my disciples.}

17 And ^{I will wait upon the LORD,} that hideth his face from the house of Jacob, and I will look for him.

the children of this world. Weak believers cannot by possibility have strong consolation. When the floods of ungodly men come against them, they will not glorify their Divine Master, but rather bring discredit upon his holy religion, by shewing that his promise has no longer power to render them superior to danger, and to bid defiance to a wicked world. They who fear the Lord and hope in his mercy will, with David, not be afraid though a host encamp against them. Ver. 15-18. Our glorious Lord was a stumbling-stone and a rock of offence to his own people, as he continues to be to countless multitudes who profess to be his followers. The Cross is still contemptible to the pride of worldly wisdom. Its doctrines cannot be endured; and the character it forms, notwithstanding its purity and comeliness, is nearly as offensive as itself. To a fearful extent the Gospel of Christ is still sealed amongst mankind, and even in nations that call themselves Christians. They only who are taught by his Spirit know the mysteries of his kingdom, and believe with the heart unto righteousness. Without this teaching, none receive the truth, and enjoy the blessing; but it is abundantly provided for all his people. None who repent of their sins, and believe in him, go without the heavenly unction. No servant of Christ has been more contradicted and execrated than he was himself; he first drank the cup which has so generally been placed in the hands of his most devoted servants. Happy the parents who can present a saved and sanctified family to the Lord! Happy the teachers who have to rejoice over converted classes of young people! Happy the pastor, surrounded by adoring multitudes, who acknowledge him as the instrument of their salvation! Ver. 19-22. The wisdom of God's people is, to fix their eye steadily upon the Scriptures. They who do so will never err in the matter of salvation. The inspired word and the teaching of Scripture sufficiently provides for their necessities. In all matters of a secondary character, it is proper to keep close to the law and the testimony, trying everything by the unerring rule. The avowed opponents of Scripture are less to be feared than they who profess a reverence for it, while they labour to extinguish its light, and to extract from it everything vital and saving. Against these let every reader watch, and, from their evil ways, the Lord preserve his people!

Chap. IX. 1-5. There is difficulty about the precise import of ver. 3. Some expositors have thought the words ought to be rendered affirmatively—"Thou hast increased their joy," by the multiplication of their numbers; but this view does not harmonise with the context. The coming of the Saviour could not be said to increase the joy of Israel, seeing that they rejected him, and brought upon themselves destruction: The advent of Christ ought to have been matter of joy to all, as it really was to those who waited for the consolation of Israel; but the misguided multitude saw no beauty in the heavenly Visitor. Ver. 5 would seem to indicate an era which should be distinguished by universal and permanent peace. A more accurate translation would render comment useless. The exact import of the words amount to this: "Every weapon that warreth, and the garment rolled in blood, shall be for burning-fuel for the fire,"—that is, war having come to an end, the instruments of mutual destruction, as being no longer required, will be destroyed. Amongst the ancients it was common at the close of war to burn the weapons taken from the enemy. The burning of armour collected on the battlefield was often made an offering to the god that was ac-his burden, and 'the staff of his shoulder, the rod of his oppressor, as in the day of Midian.

5 'For every battle of the warrior is with confused noise, and garments rolled in blood; 'but this shall be with burning and 'fuel of fire.

6 For 'unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and 'his name shall be called Wonderful, 'Counsellor, 'The mighty God, 'The everlasting Father, The Prince of 'Peace.

7 Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this.

8 ¶ The LORD sent a word into Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel.

9 And 'all the people shall know, 'even Ephraim, and the inhabitants of Samaria, that say in the pride and stoutness of heart, knowledge as the giver of the victory. Even the Romans adopted this course. Vespasian having finished his wars, both at home and abroad, struck a medal representing the goddess of Peace holding an olive branch in one hand, and with a lighted torch in the other setting fire to a heap of armour. The act was intensely significant, and it will find a beautiful accomplishment in the language of the Prophet, when the enemies of the Lord and his Church shall have disappeared, and all their power of mischief shall for ever have been annihilated, and the instruments of Satan consumed. Ver. 6, 7. We have here one of the most glorious predictions of the Sacred Scriptures. The incarnation of the Lord Jesus is most significantly set forth—"Unto us a Child is born." The child so born exhibits humanity; while in his Divine nature he was the Son of the Blessed. "A Son is given." The Lord Jesus is often represented as a gift proceeding from the Father's love. It could not be otherwise, since man had no claim either to him or to his work. From first to last it was a matter of sovereign grace. The Lord Jesus is wonderful alike in his person, preaching, miracles, grace, government, and glory. "The mighty God," is an expression which at once settles the question of the Divinity of the Lord Jesus. The person spoken of is "the Child born," "the Son given," the Governor of the universe. There is no getting rid of the high import and the decisive force of these words but by a direct violation of all the laws of language. The text, however, acquires additional importance from the frequency with which the term "God" in the New Testament is applied to the Lord Jesus. In this case no key is required as to the fact; but confirmation is in the highest degree satisfactory and assuring. In this we have an identical expression with "Immanuel, God with us." The Lord Jesus is here represented as "the Everlasting Father," or "the Father of Eternity," as if everlasting duration, with all that it comprises, flowed from him. It is impossible to conceive of language more emphatically expressive of one of the attributes of the Godhead—immortality. "The Prince of Peace" is a glorious distinction, lifting up the Lord Jesus above all kings and princes. He will give peace to the earth by establishing peace between God and his creatures. It is his exclusive province to give peace to the conscience by removing guilt, imputing righteousness, and reconciling sinners to God. The Prophetic empires which were the greatest that existed since the world began, had severally a limit and an end; but the increase of the government of Christ, and the peace thence arising, shall be co-extensive with the globe, and last for ever. Ver. 8-21. When God requires to punish the disobedient man, or the rebel nation, he has but to withdraw his protection, to stir up an adversary, and the work is done. When evil-doers turn not to Him that smiteth, and refuse to seek the Lord, nothing remains but an increase of judgment; and so long as every one is a hypocrite and an evil-doer, and every mouth pours out foolishness, nothing is to be expected but increased chastisements.

Chap. X. 1-34. A day will come when the proceedings of our world, from the first age to the last, will be reviewed, and when every individual, of all flesh, will receive according to the deeds done in the body. The kings and conquerors of the world are, after all, but instruments of Providence; they are a sword in the hand of God with which he slays the wicked; and when the work is done, he casts it aside. He has frequently em-

4 Without me they shall bow down under the prisoners, and they shall fall under the slain. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

5 ¶ ²O ³Assyrian, the rod of mine anger, ⁴and the staff in their hand is mine indignation.

6 I will send him against an ⁵hypocritical nation, and against the people of my wrath ⁶will I give him a charge, to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to ⁷tread them down like the mire of the streets.

16 Therefore shall the LORD, the LORD of hosts, send among his fat ones leanness; ³and under his glory he shall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire.

17 And ⁴the light of Israel shall be for a fire, and his Holy One for a flame: and it shall burn and devour his thorns and his briers in one day;

18 And shall consume the glory of his forest, and of his fruitful field, ⁵both soul and body: and they shall be as when a standard-bearer fainteth.

19 And the rest of the trees of his forest shall be ⁶few, that a child may write them.

20 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob, shall no more again stay upon him that smote them; ⁷but shall stay upon the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.

21 The remnant shall return, even the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God.

22 For though thy people Israel be as the sand of the sea, ⁸yet a remnant ⁹of them shall return: the consumption decreed shall overflow ¹⁰with righteousness.

23 For the LORD God of hosts shall make a consumption, even determined, in the midst of all the land.

24 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, ¹¹O my people that dwellest in Zion, ¹²be not afraid of the Assyrian: he shall smite thee with a rod, ¹³and shall lift up his staff against thee, after the manner of Egypt.

25 For ¹⁴yet a very little while, and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger, in their destruction.

26 And the LORD of hosts shall ¹⁵stir up a scourge for him, ¹⁶according to the slaughter of Midian at the rock of Oreb: and as his rod was upon the sea, so shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt.

27 And it shall come to pass in that day, that ¹⁷his burden shall ¹⁸be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck, and the yoke shall be destroyed ¹⁹because of the anointing.

28 ¶ He is come to ²⁰Aiath, he is passed to ²¹Migron; at ²²Michmash he hath laid up his carriages:

ployed idolatrous nations as a scourge to his own erring people. In ancient times the Assyrian was one of his principal rods with which he chastised rebellious Israel; and when the correction was accomplished, the rod was broken. The affairs of nations wonderfully exemplify the Divine wisdom. While this was manifold everywhere, it was more especially so in the Jewish history. The brethren of Joseph wished to get rid of him, but the Lord protected the injured youth, and ultimately made him their preserver. While full scope is given to the exercise of the understanding, and the operation of the passions of men, there is a wisdom that overrules the whole, so that where men are intent only on the accomplishment of their own ends, they are made subservient to those of the Most High. It is matter of comfort to the people of God that their enemies have a limit set to them, beyond which they cannot pass. When the chastisement has been completed, and by its means the heart has been made tender, so that they are prepared to return, he will receive them graciously, and love them freely. The dwellers in Zion, therefore, need not be afraid; their rock none can ascend, and their refuge none can enter. He that has begun a good work in them, will carry it on till the day of Christ. They have 32 As yet shall he remain at ¹Nob that day: he shall shake his hand against the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jerusalem.

33 Behold, the Lord, the LORD of hosts, shall lop the bough with terror; and the high ones of stature shall be hewn down, and the haughty shall be humbled.

34 And he shall cut down the thickets of the forests with iron, and Lebanon shall fall ¹by a mighty one.

AND ¹there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and ²a Branch shall grow out of his roots:

4 But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and ²reprove with equity ³for the meek of the earth: ⁴and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and ⁵with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

only to continue living faithfully, and none can sever between them and their God, who will be a very present help in trouble.

Chap. XI. 1-3. There can be no mistake as to the import of the first verse; it is a prophecy of the Lord Jesus, and of none other. He sprang from the root of Jesse, rather than from the root of David; for Jesse lived and died in a private station, whereas David was a mighty prince; but even the glory of his house had an end, and his descendants were reduced to the humblest circumstances. But although poor, they were in the covenant, so that a rod sprang forth from what might be likened to the stump of a tree, in which the glory of the family revived, and increased, and received permanent stability as a "plant of renown." The Holy Spirit, by whose power he was formed, after his birth rested upon him without measure, endowing him, in his human character, with every gift and every grace necessary to his mighty undertaking. Ver. 2 and 3 shew the marvellous extent to which the Divine Spirit wrought in the man Christ Jesus. Ver. 4-9. The effects of the Gospel are here set forth with great precision. "The rod of his mouth" means the word of the truth of the Gospel, the emblem of which is a rod of iron breaking in pieces potters' vessels. The "girdle of righteousness" is a phrase which very aptly illustrates the character of the Saviour in all his perfections as the Son of man. The results of the universal diffusion of the glad tidings in reconciling hostile parties, are depicted with a beauty which cannot be surpassed. The passage, viewed figuratively, would represent the harmony of the entire bestial creation, a thing in itself by no means impossible, or even improbable; but it certainly indicates that the passions of mankind shall be subdued, their animosities quenched, and a spiritual brotherhood everywhere established. This wondrous transformation is to be exclusively achieved by the diffusion of the knowledge of the Lord, in abundance, through every clime. This alone can produce it, and the truth and love of the Most High are pledged that it shall. Ver. 10-16. "An ensign to the people," around which the Gentile nations shall rally, and find glorious rest, is an idea full of magnificent beauty. Military standards are of two sorts—one accompanying the army on its march, and the other reared on towers or mountains, where they could be seen from a distance. The latter is clearly pointed to by the Prophet. The ministers of the Word are Standard-bearers, whose business it is to unfurl the banner of love, thus attracting to the Saviour the nations. At no previous period since the Reformation from Popery, did the state of the world so pleasantly exemplify the times of this prophecy. The stronger nations of the earth are now generally employed in transmitting the knowledge of the truth to it in the seven streams, and make men go over ⁹dry-shod.

16 And there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria; ^alike as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

CHAPTER XII.

the weaker; and while the missionaries of the Cross are calling on the Gentiles to behold their God, Christian communities are imploring on their behalf the descent of the Divine benediction.

Chap. XII. 1-6. These words predict a glorious day for Israel; when the veil shall have been removed from their eyes, they shall look on Him whom they have pierced, and mourn; but their mourning will be turned into joy. The wondrous display of sovereign mercy and Gospel grace then to be made, will constrain them to cry out, "God is my salvation." The Lord Jesus is, in every view, the salvation of his Church. For her he shed his blood, he rose from the dead, he ascended on high, he dispensed the gifts of his love, in the Holy Spirit, to his people. The ordinances of grace will then become wells of salvation—the Lord's-day will be a day of joy. All the forms of godliness will be charged to the full with Divine power, and piety in everything will become a glorious reality. We have nowhere a more beautiful picture of the pleasures of religion than these verses present. Delights, pure, elevating, and everlasting, run at their feet as a river, while the glad heart is incessantly prompted to speak of the glory of his power, and to celebrate the excellence of his majesty. The people of God should now aspire to the enjoyment of at least some measure of the felicity of that happy day. His presence is now pledged in the assemblies of his people; and the power of his Spirit will render his promises all yea and amen, through the blood of the Lamb.

Chap. XIII. 1-18. The greatest empires of the world have severally constituted parts of the Divine system. Babylon was famous beyond all others for its splendour, magnitude, power, and pride; but it was, in due season, brought low. When Isaiah directed his voice against it, it had not reached the climax of its power; and yet he foretold its certain destruction, of which at that time there was no appearance. After the invasion of Cyrus, however, it began to decline, and at length ceased to be the seat of empire. Population decreased, wealth passed away, and commerce perished, till at last it became one wide-spread ruin, the dwelling-place of wild beasts and venomous reptiles, which rendered it perilous even to approach the city. Ver. 19-22. The picture here presented is one of desolation perfected. The lesson to mankind is fraught with solemn admonition; pride 18 Their bows also ^ashall dash the young men to pieces; and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; ^btheir eye shall not spare children.

19 ¶ And ^cBabylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, shall be as ^dwhen God ^eoverthrew Sodom and Gomorrah.

20 It ^fshall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there; neither shall the shepherds make their fold there:

21 But ^gwild beasts of the desert shall lie there; and their houses shall be full of ^hdoleful creatures; and ⁱowls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there.

22 And ^jthe wild beasts of the islands shall cry in their ^kdesolate houses, and ^ldragons in their pleasant palaces; and ^mher time is near to come, and her days shall not be prolonged.

FOR the LORD will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet ^achoose Israel, and ^bset them in their own land: and the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob.

2 And the people shall take them, and bring them to their place; and the house of Israel shall possess them in the land of the LORD for servants and handmaids: and they shall take them captives, ^cwhose captives they were; and they shall rule over their oppressors.

3 ¶ And it shall come to pass, ^din the day that the LORD shall give thee rest from thy sorrow, and from thy fear, and from the hard bondage wherein thou wast made to serve,

18 All the kings of the nations, ^{ac}even all of them, lie in glory, every one in his own house:

19 But thou art cast out of thy grave like an abominable branch, ^{ad}and as the raiment of those that are slain, thrust came before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall. The pride of the Babylonians had reached the heavens, and its prostration was the most complete and humiliating known to history. With men, with families, and with kingdoms, all is uncertainty and change, tending to ultimate decay and death. The world is a mirror by which its own vanity is reflected; there is only one kingdom which cannot be moved—one city which has foundations not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Happy they who shall be counted worthy to enter its gates and share its felicity!

Chap. XIV. 1, 2. The ruin of Babylon stands associated with the extension of mercy to the children of Israel, since the victorious arms of Cyrus opened up the path for their return to their own land. Seeing that the Jews never literally ruled over the Chaldeans, it is considered, with good reason, that in general these predictions, and others of a like kind, have typical reference to the destruction of Rome, and the Papal rule which succeeded the overthrow of the Western Empire. The deliverance of Judah is a suitable introduction to the song of triumph which immediately follows. Ver. 3-32. Language here is highly poetic, presenting great political events under magnificent figures. The address delivered to a prostrate foe is sublime and awful in the extreme. The dead were often buried in caves, the descent to which was dark and dismal. The sides of the pit are set in opposition to the sides of the North; the cruel tyrant aspired to ascend the one, and, in recompense of his iniquity, was precipitated into the other. On the death of Belshazzar, a revolution was immediately effected. It seems probable that the rites of decent sepulture were withheld from him; his predecessors had received funeral honours befitting their dignity; but he was cast out as an "abominable branch," as the blood-stained raiment of the slain, which is not worth preserving. The cruelty of this man had exceeded all precedent, and his reward corresponded with his character; his person and his memory were consigned to contempt. At the time here predicted, even the poor among the Jews were to enjoy abundance, and to live in peace; while the Lord was pouring out the vials of his displeasure upon the Philistines, the hereditary enemies of Israel. God never wants a scourge for the disobedient and the wicked always adapted to his purpose; his people have, therefore, nothing to fear but sin—that alone can hurt them. In his city, that is, his Church, there is through with a sword, that go down to the stones of the pit; as a carcase trodden under feet.

20 Thou shalt not be joined with them in burial, because thou hast destroyed thy land, and slain thy people: the seed of evil doers shall never be renowned.

21 Prepare slaughter for his children for the iniquity of their fathers; that they do not rise, nor possess the land, nor fill the face of the world with cities.

22 For I will rise up against them, saith the LORD of hosts, and cut off from Babylon the name, and remnant, and son, and nephew, saith the LORD.

23 I will also make it a possession for the bitter, and pools of water; and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the LORD of hosts.

24 The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand;

25 That I will break the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot: then shall his yoke depart from off them, and his burden depart from off their shoulders.

26 This is the purpose that is purposed upon the whole earth; and this is the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations.

27 For the LORD of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it? and his hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back?

28 In the year that king Ahaz died was this burden.

29 Rejoice not thou, whole Palestina, because the rod of him that smote thee is broken: for out of the serpent's root shall come forth a cockatrice, and his fruit shall be a fiery flying serpent.

30 And the first-born of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lie down in safety; and I will kill thy root with famine, and he shall slay thy remnant.

31 Howl, O gate; cry, O city; thou, whole Palestina, art dissolved: for there shall come from the north a smoke, and none shall be alone in his appointed times.

32 What shall one then answer the messengers of the nation? That the

CHAPTER XV.

The lamentable state of Moab.

THE burden of Moab. Because in the night Ar of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence; because in the night Kir of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence:

2 He is gone up to Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places, to weep: Moab shall howl over Nebo, and over Medeba: on all their heads shall be baldness, and every beard cut off.

3 In their streets they shall gird themselves with sackcloth: on the tops of their houses, and in their streets, every one shall howl, weeping abundantly.

4 And Heshbon shall cry, and Elealeh; their voice shall be heard even unto Jahaz: therefore the armed soldiers of Moab shall cry out; his life shall be grievous unto him.

5 My heart shall cry out for Moab; his fugitives shall flee unto Zoar, an heifer of three years old: for by the mounting up of Luhith with weeping shall they go it up; for in the way of Horonaim they shall raise up a cry of destruction.

6 For the waters of Nimrim shall be desolate: for the hay is withered away, the grass faileth, there is no green thing.

7 Therefore the abundance they have gotten, and that which they have laid up, shall they carry away to the brook of the willows.

8 For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab; the howling thereof unto Eglaim, and the howling thereof unto Beer-elim.

9 For the waters of Dimon shall be full of blood: for I will bring more upon Dimon, lions upon him that escapeth of Moab, and upon the remnant of the land.

CHAPTER XVI.

Moab is exhorted to yield obedience to Christ's kingdom, and threatened for pride.

SEND ye the lamb to the ruler of the land from Sela to the wilderness, unto the mount of the daughter of Zion.

2 For it shall be, that as a wandering safety. No enemy can enter there; the gates are alike barred against evil men and evil spirits.

Chap. XV. 1-9. The sackcloth here mentioned was commonly made of hair, used for sacks, and also for garments in periods of special humiliation. The flat roofs of the houses were peculiarly suited to seclusion, and to the exercises of penitential devotion. It was customary also to assemble multitudes in the streets, where emotion gathered intensity from sympathy. Zoar was a small town at the mouth of the Dead Sea, to which Lot fled when Sodom was overthrown. The burden of the Prophet on the present occasion is one of pure evil: it is a most affecting picture of desolation: the cities are seized in the night; the idolaters flee to their idols, pouring out unavailing tears; the grief is universal, deep, and desperate; even the men of war lose their courage, sinking into desponding impotence. The heart of the Prophet, while delivering himself of his awful burden, was melted within him by the prospect—"My heart shall cry out for Moab." Good men will approve the punishment of sin, yet pity the sinner. If such was the affliction of the Prophet in addressing Moab, what ought to be the feelings of the teachers of truth and the preachers of righteousness, who must be either "a savour of life unto life, or death unto death?" The example of Paul answers the question, and illustrates the feelings with which souls should be addressed. He mingled tears and prayers with his warnings, rebukes, and persuasions. He travailed as in birth until Christ was formed within the breasts of his hearers the hope of glory.

Chap. XVI. 1-5. The lamb was to be presented to the daughter of Zion as a fruit of faith, and a token of love, embodying the notion of sacrifice for sin. Ver. 6-14. The sure and speedy method of desolating a grape country was to cut down the vines. The Turks have always pracbird ²cast out of the nest, so the daughters of Moab shall be at the fords of Arnon.

3 ³Take counsel, ⁴execute judgment; ⁵make thy shadow as the night in the midst of the noon-day; ⁶hide the outcasts; bewray not him that wandereth.

4 Let ⁴mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab; be thou a covert to them from the face of the spoiler: ⁵for the ⁶extortioner is at an end, the spoiler ceaseth, the ⁶oppressors are consumed out of the land.

5 And ⁶in mercy shall the throne be ⁶established; and he shall sit upon it in truth ⁶in the tabernacle of David, ⁶judging, and seeking judgment, and ⁶hasting righteousness.

6 ¶ We have heard of the pride of Moab, (he is very proud,) even of his haughtiness, and his pride, and his wrath: but his lies shall not be so.

7 Therefore shall Moab howl for Moab, every one shall howl: for the foundations of ⁸Kir-hareseth shall ye ⁹mourn; surely they are stricken.

8 For the fields of Heshbon languish, and ⁹the vine of Sibmah: the lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof; they are come even unto ¹⁰Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness: her branches are ¹¹stretched out, they are gone over the sea:

9 Therefore I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah: I will water thee with my tears, ¹⁰O Heshbon, and Elealeh; ¹¹for ¹²the shouting for thy summer-fruits, and for thy harvest, is fallen.

10 And gladness is taken away, and joy out of the plentiful field; and in the vineyards there shall be no singing, neither shall there be shouting: the treaders shall tread out no wine in their presses; I have made their vintage-shouting to cease.

11 Wherefore my bowels shall sound like an harp for Moab, and mine inward parts for ¹²Kir-hareseth.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass, ¹³when it is seen that Moab is weary on the high place, that he shall come to his sanctuary to pray; but he shall not prevail.

13 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning Moab ¹⁴since that time.

14 But now the LORD hath spoken, saying, Within ¹⁵three years, as the years of an hireling, and ¹⁶the glory of Moab shall be contemned, with all that great multitude; ¹⁷and the remnant shall be very small and ¹⁸feeble.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Syria and Israel threatened. 6 A remnant shall forsake idolatry; 9 the rest shall be plagued for their iniquity.

THE ¹burden of ²Damascus. Behold, ³Damascus is taken away from being a city, and it shall be ⁴a ruinous heap.

2 The cities of ³Arzer are forsaken; ⁴they shall be for flocks, which shall lie down, and ⁵none shall make them afraid.

3 The ⁴fortress also shall cease from Ephraim, and the kingdom from Damascus, and the remnant of Syria: ⁵they shall be as the glory of the children of Israel, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 And in that day it shall come to pass, that the glory of ⁶Jacob shall be made thin, and ⁷the fatness of his flesh shall wax lean.

5 And it shall be ⁸as when the harvest-man gathereth the corn, and reapeth the ears with his arm; and it shall be as he that gathereth ears in ⁹the valley of Rephaim.

6 ¶ Yet gleanings shall be left in it, as the shaking of an olive-tree, two or three berries in the top of the uppermost bough, four or five in the outmost fruitful branches thereof, saith the LORD God of Israel.

7 At that day ⁸shall a man look to his Maker, and his eyes shall have respect to the Holy One of Israel.

8 And he shall not look to the altars, the work of his hands, neither shall respect that which his fingers have made, either the groves or the ⁹images.

9 ¶ In ¹⁰that day shall his strong cities be as a forsaken bough, and an uppermost tised this method. The vines of Sibmah were in high repute; but the hour of their destruction was at hand, when the shout and song, which attended the vintage and harvest, would come to an end. The testimony of travellers is unanimous to the desolation of the land of Moab, once so populous, powerful, and wealthy. Ruins alone now remain to tell the tale of its ancient splendour. The history of Moab is full of instruction to after generations; it illustrates the sad consequences of pride and impiety, and of a departure from the love of God. Sin, unrepented of, must be followed by judgment. They who despise the mercy, must submit to the justice of Heaven, when bringing upon them swift destruction. This prophecy is one of the most important in ancient Scripture. All that was foretold has been brought to pass in the course of irresistible events, without the interposition of any human hand for the purpose of realising it.

Chap. XVII. 1-8. This prophecy was fulfilled by the taking of Damascus, and the removal of its people into slavery by Tiglath-pileser. The city was afterwards rebuilt, and, although in a state of contemptible insignificance, it remains to the present time. It was, nevertheless, taken from being a city, and made a ruinous heap for a period, although its restoration was not interdicted. Syria was the subject of varied fortune, belonging successively to the Assyrians, the Chaldeans, the Persians, the Macedonians, the Romans, and now remaining in the hands of the Ottoman Turk—so exact has been the fulfilment of the prophecy! Israel was marked out for gradual decay, in the course of which its glory would fade, and its enemies triumph over it; still, it would not be wholly forgotten. As a few grapes, or olive berries, a portion of its people would remain, renouncing the worship of idols, and returning to the service of the living and true God. Ver. 9-14. These verses indicate great commotion and convulsion. Departure from Jehovah for the service of idols brought along with it desolation. "Pleasant plants," as opposed to the true God, signify those idols which the Israelites had brought from Syria, and the polluting alliances and gratifications that originated in their worship. The terms referring to the army of Sennacherib imply a mixture of terror and sudden destruction deeply affecting. The impious outrage and overwhelming force of his army is likened to the sound of mighty waters; but on the descent of the Angel of Destruction they would vanish as chaff before branch, which they left because of the children of Israel: and there shall be desolation.

10 Because ¹thou hast forgotten ¹the God of thy salvation, and hast not been mindful of ¹the Rock of thy strength, therefore ¹shalt thou plant pleasant plants, and shalt set it with strange slips:

11 In the day shalt thou make thy plant to grow, and in the morning shalt thou make thy seed to flourish; but ¹the harvest shall be ²a heap in the day of grief and of desperate sorrow.

12 ¹Woe to the ²multitude of many people, which ¹make a noise like the noise of the seas; and to the rushing of nations, that make a rushing like the rushing of ¹mighty waters!

13 The nations shall rush like the rushing of many waters: ¹but God shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far off, and ¹shall be chased as the chaff of the mountains before the wind; and like ¹a rolling thing before the whirlwind.

14 And behold at evening-tide trouble; and before the morning he is not. This is ¹the portion of them that spoil us, and the lot of them that rob us.

CHAPTER XIX.

¹ The confusion of Egypt. 11 The foolishness of their princes. 18 The calling of Egypt to the church. 23 The covenant of Egypt, Assyria, and Israel.

THE burden of ¹Egypt. Behold, the LORD ²rideth upon a swift cloud, and shall come into Egypt: and ¹the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and ²the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it.

2 And ¹I will ¹set the Egyptians against the Egyptians: and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour; city against city, and kingdom against kingdom.

3 And ¹the spirit of Egypt shall ²fail in the midst thereof; and I will ³destroy the whirlwind. The deliverance of Jerusalem was the most wonderful thing conceivable. In the evening they had before them nothing but impending destruction—in the morning not an enemy remained. While God is for his people, it matters not who be against them; it is all one for him to save by many, by few, or by none—by a man or an angel. When saints are encompassed by adversaries, let them think of the fact here recorded, and strengthen themselves by prayerful confidence in the God of their salvation.

Chap. XVIII. 1-3. There is some difficulty in ascertaining the precise import of these verses. It is generally granted, however, that Egypt is connected with Ethiopia as the country pointed to, since the Egyptians may be said to shadow the Jews under their protection as with wings against the invasion of the Assyrians. The expression, "scattered and peeled," which may also be rendered, "stretched out and smoothed," may have a reference to the geological aspect of Egypt from North to South, seeing it constitutes a vale on each side of the Nile, extending upwards of 700 miles, the whole of which was smooth and made level by the periodical inundations of that mighty river. The expression, "a nation meted out and trodden down," cannot apply to any other with the same propriety as to Egypt, since constant admeasurement of the land was necessary with a view to determine property, seeing that the inundations continually destroyed the landmarks. Again, their mode of casting the seed upon the mud when the waters subsided, and treading it in by turning their cattle into the fields, further gives meaning to the expression, "trodden down." Ver. 4-7. Eminent interpreters have differed from the previously received opinion concerning these verses, supposing future events to be intended bearing on the destruction of Antichrist, and the restoration of the Jews to their own land by some Christian country of great maritime power and influence—of course, directly pointing to England. One of the last and best translators (Dr Henderson), while granting the difficulty, considers several points sufficiently plain. First, it is not introduced as a distinct prophecy, as is the case with all the other prophecies comprised in chaps. xii.-xxiii.; secondly, it is not denunciatory of judgment on the nation to which it refers, like the other oracles; and thirdly, ver. 4-6 are so obviously parallel with chap. xvii. 13, 14 that they can only be viewed as referring to the same event; and accordingly, there is no country, the translator contends, to which it can be consistently applied but Ethiopia. The fact of this difference between men so eminent as Horsley and Henderson shews the impossibility of determining with precision the import of the prophecy. But whatever doubt may rest on the interpretation, there can be none as to the principle, that they are safe who have made the Most High their refuge. Whatever foes may surround, or fears for the moment agitate them, He will prove a present help, and a strong deliverer.

Chap. XIX. 1-10. This chapter betides sore evils for Egypt, which commenced with the invasion of Sennacherib, and was completed by the successors of Alexander the the counsel thereof: and they shall seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards.

4 And the Egyptians will I ⁴give over into the hand of a cruel lord; and a fierce king shall rule over them, saith the Lord, the LORD of hosts.

5 And the waters shall fail from the sea, and the river shall be wasted and dried up.

6 And they shall turn the rivers far away; ⁶and the brooks of defence shall be emptied and dried up: ⁶the reeds and flags shall wither.

7 The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and ⁷every thing sown by the brooks, shall wither, be driven away, and ⁷be no more.

8 The fishers also shall mourn, and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament, and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish.

9 Moreover, they that ⁹work in fine flax, and they that weave ⁹net-works, shall be confounded.

10 And they shall be broken in the ¹⁰purposes thereof, all that make sluices and ponds ¹⁰for fish.

11 ¶ Surely the princes of ¹¹Zoan are fools, the counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become ¹¹brutish: how say ye unto Pharaoh, ¹¹"I am the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings?"

fools, the princes of ¹Noph are deceived; they have also seduced Egypt, even they that are ²the stay of the tribes thereof.

14 The LORD ⁴hath mingled ¹a perverse spirit in the midst thereof; and they have caused Egypt to err in every work thereof, ⁴as a drunken man staggereth in his vomit.

15 Neither shall there be any work for Egypt, which the head or tail, branch of rush, may do.

16 In that day shall Egypt be ¹like unto women; and it shall be afraid and fear because of ⁴the shaking of the hand of the LORD of hosts, which he shaketh over it.

17 And ¹the land of Judah shall be a terror unto Egypt; every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself, because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts, which he hath determined against it.

18 ¶ In that day shall five cities in the land of Egypt ²speak the ²language of Canaan, ²and swear to the LORD of hosts: one shall be called, The city of ³destruction.

19 In that day ²shall there be an altar to the LORD in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the LORD.

20 And it shall be ²for a sign and for a witness unto the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt: for they shall cry unto the LORD because of the oppressors, and ¹he shall send them a saviour, and a great one, and he shall deliver them.

Great. What had been begun by foreign invasion was perfected by internal broils, and civil wars in every part of the kingdom, which ended in the tyranny of twelve princes, who, for a season, divided the country among them, till at length they were all overthrown, and the power once more concentrated in a single individual, Psammetichus, whose reign extended throughout a period of fifty-four years, which materially contributed to consolidate the country; but its rest was not prolonged, for Nebuchadnezzar subsequently overran and subdued it. After this, the Persian kings held it in bondage till the days of Alexander. Ver. 11-18. The superior antiquity of Egypt is indisputable; it was famous for wisdom and science before any other country of which we have any record was known; but the lessons of experience were lost upon them. Their wisdom was folly, and their idolatry proved their destruction. Their rulers became as children, and their warriors as babes; their courage expired; and a thousand fled at the rebuke of one! The term "day," signified the whole time embraced in the scope of the prediction. The "City of Destruction" is rendered by Henderson "The City of the Sun;" since the specification of Heliopolis as one of the five cities in which the worship of the true God should be performed, seems to have been occasioned by its being one of the principal seats of Egyptian idolatry. Ver. 19. The establishment of the worship of the Most High in Egypt is here clearly indicated. Holy men of ancient times, wherever they sojourned, as a first duty reared an altar, and offered sacrifice. Under the Macedonian kings, the successors of Alexander in Egypt, the Jews received peculiar privileges, which induced numbers of them to settle in that country, where they worshipped the true God in synagogues of their own rearing. Subsequently the Scriptures were translated into Greek, which was then understood by multitudes in Egypt, and that translation is now called the Septuagint—a name derived from the number of persons engaged in it. The sojourn of the Jews there materially contributed to the enlightenment of the country, and the diffusion of just notions concerning Jehovah. A temple was subsequently built at Heliopolis by Onias. Few of the Egyptian Jews could possibly repair to Jerusalem three times a-year to attend the festivals; and no encouragement was given to private sacrifice. However irregular the worship at the Temple of Onias might have been, its results were beneficial, as it constituted a central place of worship for the Jews in Egypt, while it tended to wean them from an undue attachment to Jerusalem, and to attract the natives to the worship of Jehovah. Ver. 20-22. Diversity of opinion has obtained touching the Deliverer here mentioned as the "Great One." One class of writers have held that it was Alexander the Great, who, having first visited Jerusalem, passed on to Egypt, where he was received with great joy by the inhabitants. The Persian oppressors, under whose despotism they then groaned, surrendered to Alexander without a blow, which brought liberty from their degrading thralldom. This, however, has, by another class, been considered a view coming far short of the truth, holding that, if it apply to Alexander at all, it can only be in a very subordinate sense. Christ himself, they think, and his spiritual redemption, are principally intended. That the passage, however, had a certain measure of fulfilment in the case of Alexander, is beyond doubt; but that it receives, in the Lord Jesus, a far more ample, glorious, and permanent fulfilment, is equally certain. Ver. 23-25. These verses received their accomplishment under Alexander the Great, who united Assyria and Egypt as one empire. It is doubtful whether the last verse of the prophecy be yet fulfilled. The events of Providence, at a future period, will probably render it

22 And the LORD shall smite Egypt; he shall smite and heal it: and they shall return even to the LORD, and he shall be entreated of them, and shall heal them.

23 ¶ In that day shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria; and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians.

24 In that day °shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, even °a blessing in the midst of the land:

THE °burden of °the desert of the sea. As °whirlwinds in the south pass through; so it cometh from the desert, from a terrible land.

3 Therefore °are my loins filled with pain: °pangs have taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travaileth: I was bowed down at the hearing of it; I was dismayed at the seeing of it.

5 Prepare the table, watch in the watch-tower, eat, drink: °arise, ye princes, and anoint the shield.

6 For thus hath the LORD said unto me, Go, set a watchman, let him declare what he seeth.

7 And °he saw a chariot with a couple of horsemen, a chariot of asses, and a plain. One thing is certain—the hostility of the nations will altogether cease; the commerce of the world will materially contribute to the spread of the Gospel, and under its influence to cement mankind into one happy family. A universal human language is probably a chimera, but a universal religion is a glorious certainty. The spiritual language of Canaan will one day be co-extensive with the human race, when all believing the same truth will be the subjects of the same experience, loving the same Lord, and walking by the same law; each loving all, and all loving each, for the sake of Him who shall be formed in every one of them “the hope of glory.”

Chap. XX. 1-6. Tartan was one of Sennacherib's generals, and Tirhakah, king of Ethiopia, was in alliance with the king of Egypt against Sennacherib; it is therefore probable that by Sargon is meant Sennacherib. When the prophets denounced judgments they commonly wore sackcloth—an expression of mourning which became their office. The term “naked,” signifies being without the upper garment, or the putting off the habit which was proper to one's station or quality. The course of the prophet indicated the approach of a three years' calamity upon Egypt and Ethiopia. The expression, “Captives, young and old, naked and barefoot,” is one of sorrowful significance. Belzoni the traveller states, that in the figures on the remains of their temples, prisoners are often represented as naked, or only with aprons, with dishevelled hair, and their hands chained together. On a bas-relief on the recently discovered graves of the Theban kings a multitude of Egyptian and Ethiopian prisoners are represented, shewing that Egypt and Ethiopia were occasionally allied alike in mutual defence, and in bondage. Thus the grave testifies to great political events beyond the reach of authentic history. The Orientals delighted in figure, and hence the frequent recourse which was had to it in the Prophetic teaching. Isaiah shadowed forth the coming nakedness and destitution of the nations to whom he prophesied, as the punishment of their transgressions. So, too, the seething pot, the linen girdle, the potter's vessel, the basket of figs, the yoke of iron, in Jeremiah—all speak to the eye as well as to the ear.

Chap. XXI. 1-10. Isaiah seems in ver. 3-5, about 200 years before the time, to personate Belshazzar on the dreadful night of his death, when Babylon was taken. It would seem as if we were introduced into the banquetting room, where we listened to the king, while, with dismay unutterable, he witnesses the handwriting on the wall. The historians of Greece tell us that while he had given orders to prepare the feast, and to set the watch, as he and his princes rejoiced in their festivities, Cyrus had commanded his captains to burnish their arms, and to prepare for the assault, which naturally led to the call of Belshazzar's princes to arms, although they resisted only to be cut in pieces. Cyrus, according to his historian, having ascertained that the banquet was about to be held, said to his soldiers, “Now, let us go against them; many of them are asleep; many of them are intoxicated; and all of them are unfit for battle.” The assumptions were well founded, and the result corresponded with them. The shields were usually made of a rim of brass or wood, over which was drawn a covering of the skin of an ox, or other animal, in the manner of a drum-head; it was necessary to rub it over with oil occasionally, lest it should become hard and crack, or become so rigid that an arrow or a sword could easily pierce it, which explains the expression, “Arise, ye princes, and anoint the shield.” The destroyers of Babylon, in their fierce approach, are likened to a furious chariot of camels; and ^khe hearkened diligently with much heed.

8 And ⁴he cried, ¹A lion: My lord, I stand continually upon the watch-tower in the day-time, and I am set in my ward ⁶whole nights;

9 And, behold, here cometh a chariot of men, ^{with} a couple of horsemen. And he answered and said, ^mBabylon is fallen, is fallen; and all the graven images of her gods he hath broken unto the ground.

14 The inhabitants of the land of ^sTema ^tbrought water to him that was thirsty, they prevented with their bread him that fled.

15 For they fled ^ufrom the swords, from the drawn sword, and from the bent bow, and from the grievousness of war.

16 For thus hath the Lord said unto me, Within a year, ^vaccording to the years of an hiring, and all the glory of Kedar shall fail;

17 And the residue of the number of ^warchers, the mighty men of the children of Kedar, shall be diminished: ^xfor the LORD God of Israel hath spoken it.

THE burden of the valley ^yof vision. What aileth thee now, ^zthat thou art wholly gone up to the house-tops?

lion in quest of prey. Ver. 7 is explained by the fact that asses were formerly used in war, when horses could not be obtained. Camels were generally employed to carry the baggage: they are still used as beasts of burden in the East, particularly in Arabia, where their speed renders them of great service in warlike excursions. By this means the Arabs make an unexpected descent on their neighbours, and carry off the spoil before any attempts can be made to overtake them. Ver. 11-17. It is important that the watchmen of Zion should never sleep, and should faithfully report whatever meets the eye connected with the welfare of the people. The enemies of the Cross, with all the instruments of their folly, are as sure to be destroyed as Babylon with her graven images. The righteous, from their vicinity to the wicked, and often as the punishment of their own transgressions, may suffer much; but their afflictions will only tend to promote their sanctity, while their eternal welfare is secured. It is natural for the student of prophecy to desire to know where we now are in the great chart of time; such inquiries, conducted in a proper spirit, are laudable, but they must in no case be allowed to absorb the attention which is due to personal religion and uniform obedience. The saints may reach their heavenly home with very imperfect views on the subject of prophecy, but there is no getting thither without the faith which works by love, and that holiness of heart and life by which love is tested.

Chap. XXII. 1-11. Jerusalem is here meant by the valley of vision; that city was placed in the midst of surrounding hills. The prophet beheld in vision the future consternation of the inhabitants when they discovered the approach of their invading foes—famine and pestilence. These enemies were more difficult to deal with than an army with drawn swords and waving banners, since they had then to fight, not with men, but with God. It was therefore no wonder if their hearts were filled with fear and dismay. Jerusalem was called the City of David, as being the royal residence of the most distinguished of kings. Ver. 12-16. "That day," signifies the period during which these iniquities, with their corresponding chastisements, prevailed. The people were called to "weeping and mourning," that is, to the duty and the expression of sincere and deep repentance for their wickedness, as a preparation for obtaining mercy. No state could be more opposite than this to the hardened and impious condition of the people, who had learned to abuse their blessings and to despise their Almighty Author. The deepest guilt called for the deepest humiliation, and where the iniquity had been so great, it was proper that the confession should correspond with it. Ver. 17-25. The intimation here given is fearfully significant of coming events. Shebna, while he erroneously counted upon the perpetuity of his high office as treasurer to Hezekiah, did not forget that his glory would have an end; and accordingly he prepared and drinking wine: ^alet us eat and drink, for to-morrow we shall die.

14 And ^ait was revealed in mine ears by the LORD of hosts. ^aSurely this iniquity shall not be purged from you till ye die, saith the LORD God of hosts.

19 And ^aI will drive thee from thy station, and from thy state shall he pull thee down.

20 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will call my servant ^aEliakim the son of Hilkiah;

21 And I will clothe him with thy robe, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy government into his hand; and he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah.

22 And ^athe key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder: so he shall open, and none shall shut; and he shall shut, and none shall open.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 The miserable overthrow of Tyre. 17 Her restoration after seventy years, &c.

THE burden of Tyre. Howl, ^aye ships of Tarshish; for it is laid waste, so that there is no house, no entering in: from ^athe land of Chittim it is revealed to them.

2 Be ^astill, ye inhabitants of ^athe isle; thou whom ^athe merchants of Zidon, that pass over the sea, have replenished.

3 And by great waters the seed of ^aSi-hor, ^athe harvest of the river, is her revenue; and she is a mart of nations.

4 Be thou ashamed, O Zidon; for the sea hath spoken, even the strength of the sea, saying, ^aI travail not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nourish up young men, nor bring up virgins.

5 As at the report concerning Egypt, ^aso shall they be sorely pained at the report of Tyre.

6 ^aPass ye over to Tarshish; ^ahowl, ye inhabitants of the isle.

7 Is this ^ayour joyous city, ^awhose antiquity is of ancient days? her own feet shall carry her ^aafar off to sojourn.

8 Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose ^amerchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth?

9 The LORD of hosts hath purposed it, to ^astain the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth.

10 Pass through thy land as a river, ^aO daughter of Tarshish: there is ^ano more ^astrength.

11 He stretched out his hand over the sea; he shook the kingdoms: ^athe LORD hath given a commandment ^aagainst ^athe merchant-city, to destroy the ^astrong holds thereof.

12 And he said, Thou shalt no more refor his dust a sepulchre on high, carving for himself a habitation in a rock—thus verifying the adage, that men know not what a day may bring forth. Eliakim was appointed to succeed him in his office and glory. The key was a token of authority in those days, as the seals are now, being an emblem that great and important matters were intrusted to a man's care, and at his disposal. For Oriental countries, the key is still an emblem of authority. Roberts the traveller states that he found it so among the Moors. The four corners of a handkerchief are tied to a ring, the key is then placed on the shoulders, and the handkerchief hangs in front. Sometimes they have a bunch of large keys, which hang two on one shoulder and two on the other. Since the Lord Jesus applies this part of the emblem to himself, it may be inferred that Eliakim was in some respects a type of him. The advancement of Eliakim was the elevation of his father's house; the interests of all his relatives would be secure in his hands, since he was invested with a power of conferring on them great and lasting good. Jesus exalts his faithful followers to the highest dignity, and on him they depend for the continuance of their privileges. All are heirs and joint heirs with him, and through him, and for his sake they inherit eternal blessings.

Chap. XXIII. 1-16. Chittim was a term which signified all the countries bordering upon the Mediterranean, and it is here implied that tidings of the ruin of Tyre would be brought to Tarsus by Greece, Italy, and others. The entire chapter portends the heaviest calamity to the countries referred to. The city, once teeming with numbers, overflowing with wealth, and distinguished by mirth and revelry, would be plunged in the deepest sorrow. Forgetful of the Most High in the days of her prosperity, she would now be taught the unsatisfactory as well as the fleeting character of all earthly good. Ver. 17, 18. The change, after seventy years of desolation, was to be attended by a return of high prosperity. The day in question would witness reformation, and the consecration of wealth, not to personal indulgence and idolatrous orgies, but the service of the living and true God. There is some doubt as to the precise import of the prophet's words. If the language refer to the return of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon, which seems probable, it will, to some extent, find an explanation in the fact that they spread extensively into the surrounding countries, where their presence and their ordinances had the effect of arresting the attention of idolaters and making proselytes. It is matter of fact also, that the joice, O thou oppressed virgin, ¹daughter of Zidon: arise, ²pass over to Chittim; ³there also shalt thou have no rest.

13 Behold the ⁴land of the Chaldeans: this people was not, ⁵till the Assyrian founded it for them that dwell in the wilderness: they set up the towers thereof, they raised up the palaces thereof; ⁶and he brought it to ruin.

14 Howl, ye ships of Tarshish: for your strength is laid waste.

15 And it shall come to pass in that day, that ⁷Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years, according to the days of one king: after the end of seventy years ⁸shall Tyre sing as an harlot.

16 Take an harp, go about the city, thou harlot that hast been forgotten; make sweet melody, sing many songs, that thou mayest be remembered.

17 ⁹And it shall come to pass, after the end of seventy years, that the LORD will ¹⁰visit Tyre, and she shall turn to her hire, and ¹¹shall commit fornication with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth.

18 And her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the LORD: it shall not be treasured nor laid up: for her merchandise shall be for them that dwell before the LORD, to eat sufficiently, and for ¹²durable clothing.

with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him.

3 The land ¹shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for ²the LORD hath spoken this word.

4 The earth ³mourneth and fadeth away; the world languisheth and fadeth away; the ⁴haughty people of the earth do languish.

5 The earth also is ⁵defiled under the inhabitants thereof; ⁶because they have transgressed the laws, ⁷changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant.

6 Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left.

7 The new wine mourneth, the vine languisheth, all the merry-hearted do sigh.

8 The mirth of tabrets ceaseth, the noise of them that rejoice endeth, the joy of the harp ceaseth.

9 They shall not ¹drink wine with a song; strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it.

10 The ²city of confusion is broken down; every house is shut up, that no man may come in.

11 There is a crying for wine in the streets; ³all joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone.

12 In ⁴the city is left desolation, and the gate is smitten with destruction.

13 ⁵When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, ⁶there shall be as the shaking of an olive-tree, and as the gleaning-grapes when the vintage is done.

14 They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the LORD, they shall cry aloud from the sea.

15 Wherefore glorify ye the LORD in the ⁷fires, even the name of the LORD God of Israel ⁸in the isles of the sea.

Christian religion, at a very early day, obtained an establishment at Tyre, where Paul found disciples on his way to Jerusalem. It is further testified by the great historian Eusebius, that Tyre became distinguished by its wealth as well as its piety. Jerome, too, affirms that the men of his time had seen churches built to the Lord in Tyre: they "beheld the wealth of all, which was not treasured up, nor hid, but which was given to those who dwelt before the Lord"—terms which undoubtedly go far to explain the text of the prophet. Tyre remained distinguished for its piety till the year 639, when taken by the Saracens. It underwent a variety of fortunes, till 1516, when the Turks became masters of it; and from that time its desolation has continued, so exact has been the fulfilment of the prediction. Since "money answereth all things," it is to be viewed as amongst the most valuable talents intrusted by God to man. When it brings along with it a large heart and an enlightened discretion, its possessor may be instrumental in producing unspeakable good. When the day shall have arrived that shall witness the universal Church of God acting upon the principle set forth in ver. 18, it will be a token that the kingdom of God has come, and that his will is being done upon earth as it is in heaven.

Chap. XXIV. 1-15. The destruction of Jerusalem, and the dispersion of the Jews, seem chiefly intended by the figurative language here employed. In that terrible catastrophe, all distinctions of priests and people, ranks and orders, were speedily lost amid the universal ruin. Figures the most fearful are employed to illustrate the horrors of the scene. It is testified by the great historian of the Jews, that the city became a scene of unutterable confusion and horrible discord, enflamed and embittered by famine and pestilence. The desolation which followed the destruction and the captivity was frightful beyond conception. Jerusalem razed, the people slain or enslaved, cities, towns, villages, the whole land abandoned, presented such a picture as the world had never seen. Yet this unparalleled dispensation of justice was attended with consequences of the happiest character in other countries. The children of Israel fled to Egypt and other lands, where they were found in great numbers in most of the cities, more especially in Alexandria, where they formed the bulk of the population. They everywhere erected synagogues, and established their peculiar worship, which was not merely a testimony against surrounding idolatry, but a means of instruction in the fundamental doctrine of the living and true God. Ver. 15. The term "fires" is one of very doubtful import. One of our best translators thought it signified "the regions of fire"—that is, Sicily, the South of Italy, and other parts frequently visited by volcanic eruptions, as Etna, Vesuvius, and other places. The explanation is striking, and it may be the correct one; it is at any rate more satisfactory than referring it to Oriental regions, as the sphere of the rising sun. Ver. 16-23. The "songs" which are to be heard from the uttermost parts of the earth, clearly point to the spread of Chris-

16 ¶ From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous. ^aBut I said, ^bMy leanness, my leanness, woe unto me! ^cThe treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously; yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously.

17 Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

18 And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: ^dfor the windows from on high are open, and ^ethe foundations of the earth do shake.

23 Then ^othe moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, ^pwhen the LORD of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and ^qbefore his ancients gloriously.

tianity and the conversion of the heathen, the voice of whose joyful worship is supposed to be wafted to Judea. While these songs were heard, the Jewish Church cried out of her "leanness," and of the treachery to which she was subjected. These words will find their full import only when the eyes of the Jews shall have been opened, and their ears unstopped, and they shall behold the wondrous effects which have been produced by the reception among the Gentiles of their rejected King and Saviour. The last verse of the chapter has excited much controversy amongst expositors. There seems, however, no doubt that the Millennium is the period referred to; but much will have to be done before the arrival of that wondrous event; there must be a fearful overturning until He come, whose right it is to reign over universal nature.

Chap. XXV. 1-5. Babylon is doubtless the city meant in the second verse. It was large, strong, and full of ungodly inhabitants, who placed their confidence in their battlements. This wonderful city, then the metropolis of the globe, was to be reduced to one stupendous mass of ruins; nor was it ever to be rebuilt—facts that have all been realised in the case of Babylon. The "powerful people" signified the Medes and the Persians, God's instruments for the accomplishment of his purposes. Babylon had been full of strength and of cruelty, shewing no mercy to the children of Israel, whom they endeavoured to annihilate as a nation. The day of vengeance, however, was at hand, when her glory would be trampled in the dust. The term "branch," mentioned in ver. 5, should have been translated "song," signifying that the shouts of victory and the songs of revelry would cease when the deluge of calamity should overflow Babylon. Ver. 6-12. This is one of the richest passages of Isaiah, predicting glorious things to be done through all the earth. Here the prophet rises from the less to the greater. Having predicted the restoration of the Jews, he breaks forth proclaiming the liberation of an enthralled world. The days of the Messiah was the destined period of the fulfilment of these marvellous prophecies. The conceptions are so magnificent, that any attempt at explanation would be to divest them of their splendour and glory; nor is it necessary. Nothing is more certain than that he points to the redemption of the world by the atoning sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ, the wonderful results which would flow from his mediation and the descent of the Holy Spirit. The Messiah by death would destroy death, bringing life and immortality to light by the Gospel. The covering which wrapped the nations in darkness was to be entirely removed. - All the dead were to be raised to life; a weeping world was to be comforted; a free and full salvation was to fill the earth with gladness. Notwithstanding the great things which still remain to be accomplished, yet the events which have transpired since this prophecy was originally penned are of such a nature as at once to confirm the prediction and to illustrate the grace by which it is to be realised, and the happy results that are to flow from it.

12 And the fortress of the high fort of thy walls shall he bring down, lay low, and bring to the ground, even to the dust.

CHAPTER XXVI.

5 ^lFor he ^mbringeth down them that dwell on high; ⁿthe lofty city, he layeth it low: he layeth it low, even to the ground; he bringeth it even to the dust.

6 The foot shall tread it down, even the feet of the poor, and the steps of the needy.

7 The ^oway of the just is uprightness: thou, most upright, dost weigh the path of the just.

8 Yea, ^pin the way of thy judgments, O LORD, have we waited for thee; ^qthe desire of our soul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee.

9 With my soul ^rhave I desired thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me will I seek thee early: ^sfor when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.

10 Let favour be shewed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness: in the land of uprightness will he deal unjustly, ^tand will not behold the majesty of the LORD.

11 LORD, ^uwhen thy hand is lifted up, they will not see: but they shall see, and be ashamed for their envy ^vat the people; yea, the fire of thine enemies shall devour them.

Chap. XXVI. 1-11. The expression "that day," of frequent occurrence in the prophets, signifies the period of the events referred to, and, more precisely, future times, when the modern Babylon—the Church of Rome—should be laid low. Then this song shall be sung in the land of Judah, that is, in the Church of God: "We have a strong city." Resting on "the arm" of her Divine Lord, she will enjoy a confidence and a security which will bring peace, inspiring joy and hope. If the result shall be the literal restoration of the children of Israel to their own land, and to the favour of the Most High, which they have so long forfeited, the fulfilment will be all the more striking. The language is full of Gospel truth and grace, shadowing forth the common salvation which is ultimately to be enjoyed by both Jew and Gentile. They are righteous that do righteousness; and to all such, whether individuals or peoples, the gates of the Celestial City will be opened. Ver. 12-21. Truth and peace are inseparable, as well as wickedness and misery. The oppressors of God's people have in quick succession passed away; but that people still lives and multiplies. As the ancient Israel had nothing to fear from the successive kings by whom they had been oppressed, so the faithful in Christ Jesus have nothing to dread from the broken law, which he himself has magnified and made honourable. During the captivity, the Jewish nation seemed to be dead, but a blessed resurrection awaited it. A king would again ascend the throne, the priests appear in the temple, the princes and the people rejoice in making holiday, and the voice of gladness be heard throughout the country. Under these brilliant figures were contained great Gospel facts and doctrines. The expression, "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise," admits of a twofold explanation. The resurrection of Christ is at once the pledge and pattern of the resurrection of his people; the spiritual resurrection of their souls will inevitably be followed by the resurrection of their bodies.

Chap. XXVII. 1-6. The power of the old serpent, the devil, is limited, and his reign will draw to a close. So sure as he now goes about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour, he will be chained and cast into perdition. Expositors have here indulged in compari-

3 I the LORD 'do keep it; I will water it every moment: lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day.

4 'Fury is not in me: who would set the briars and thorns against me in battle? I would 'go through them, I would burn them together.

5 Or let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; and he shall make peace with me.

6 He shall 'cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit.

7 ¶ Hath 'he smitten him, 'as he smote those that smote him? or is he slain according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him?

8 In measure, when 'it shooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it: 'he stayeth his rough wind in the day of the east wind.

9 By this therefore shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is all the fruit to take away his sin; when he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalk-stones that are beaten in sunder, the groves and 'images shall not stand up.

10 Yet 'the defenced city shall be desolate, and the habitation forsaken, and left like a wilderness: there shall the calf feed, and there shall he lie down, and consume the branches thereof.

11 When the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off: the women come, and set them on fire; 'for it is a people of no understanding: 'therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will shew them no favour.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall beat off from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, that 'the great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, 'and shall worship the LORD in the holy mount at Jerusalem.

Job 15. 26-27.

Ex. 8. 12.

on the head of the fat valleys of them that are 'overcome with wine!

2 Behold, 'the Lord hath a mighty and strong one, which, as a tempest of hail, and a destroying storm, as a flood of mighty waters overflowing, shall cast down to the earth with the hand.

3 The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim, shall be trodden 'under feet:

4 And the glorious beauty, which is on the head of the fat valley, 'shall be a fading flower, and as the hasty fruit before the summer; which when he that looketh upon it seeth, while it is yet in his hand he 'eateth it up.

5 ¶ In that day 'shall the LORD of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people,

6 And 'for a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment, and for strength to them that turn the battle to the gate.

7 ¶ But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way: the priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble in judgment.

8 For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean.

9 ¶ Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand 'doctrine? them that are 'weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts.

10 For precept 'must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little:

11 For with 'stammering lips, and another tongue, 'will he speak to this people.

12 To whom he said, 'This is the rest wherewith ye may cause the weary to rest; and this is the refreshing: 'yet they would not hear.

13 But the word of the LORD was unto them 'precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; that they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.

14 ¶ Wherefore hear the word of the LORD, ye scornful men, that rule this people which is in Jerusalem:

15 Because ye have said, 'We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement; when the over-sons between the serpent and other creatures, and between both and certain countries, more especially Babylon; but the whole are fanciful. It is, however, true, that Babylon may properly be likened to a combination of the hugest and most terrible monsters, for nothing could exceed her rapacity, ravages, and cruelty; and in this respect she was a meet and fearful emblem of the Church of Rome. Ver. 7-13. The bearing of these verses is towards the future spread and establishment of Christianity, which would proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that were bound. At the happy result of the publication of the "glad tidings," idolatry would be abolished, despotism overthrown, war and slavery brought to an end, and the earth filled with the children of peace, when the redeemed of the Lord would live to his glory, and consecrate themselves to the celebration of his praise.

Chap. XXVIII. 1-8. "Turning the battle to the gate," was a phrase which signified to repulse an invader, and to pursue him to his own city, and to besiege him there. As the result of courage and the exercise of power, it serves to illustrate the victories which believers are enabled to achieve through the Son of God. The picture set forth in ver. 7 and 8 is particularly humbling, as it presents a deplorable view of impiety and profligacy among those who, as teachers, ought to have been examples to the people. Nothing more revolting could 1 A song inciting to confidence in God. 20 An exhortation to wait on him.

IN that day shall ^athis song be sung in the land of Judah; We have a strong city: ^bsalvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks.

2 ^cOpen ye the gates, that the ^drighteous nation which keepeth the ^etruth may enter in.

3 Thou wilt keep ^fhim ^gin perfect peace, whose ^hmind is ⁱstayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee.

4 ^jTrust ye in the LORD for ever: for ^kin the LORD JEHOVAH is ^leverlasting strength.

5 ^mFor he ⁿbringeth down them that dwell on high; ^othe lofty city, he layeth it low: he layeth it low, ^peven to the ground; he bringeth it ^qeven to the dust.

8 Yea, ^uin the way of thy judgments, O LORD, have we waited for thee; ^vthe desire of our soul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee.

9 With my soul ^whave I desired thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me will I seek thee early: ^xfor when thy judgments ^yare in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.

10 Let favour be shewed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness: in the land of uprightness will he deal unjustly, ^zand will not behold the majesty of the LORD.

11 LORD, ^{aa}when thy hand is lifted up, they will not see: ^{ab}but they shall see, and be ashamed for ^{ac}their envy ^{ad}at the people; yea, the fire of thine enemies shall devour them.

12 ^{ae}For LORD, thou wilt ^{af}ordain peace for us: for thou also hast wrought all our works ^{ag}in us.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 The care of God over his vineyard. 7 His chastisements differ from judgments. 12 The church of Jews and Gentiles.

IN ^{da}that day the LORD, ^{db}with his sore, and great, and strong sword, shall punish ^{dc}leviathan the ^{dd}piercing serpent, even leviathan that crooked serpent; and he shall slay the dragon that is in the sea.

2 ^{de}For In that day ^{df}sing ye unto her, ^{dg}A vineyard of red wine.

Chap. XXVI. 1-11. The expression "that day," of frequent occurrence in the prophets, signifies the period of the events referred to, and, more precisely, future times, when the modern Babylon—the Church of Rome—should be laid low. Then this song shall be sung in the land of Judah, that is, in the Church of God: "We have a strong city." Resting on "the arm" of her Divine Lord, she will enjoy a confidence and a security which will bring peace, inspiring joy and hope. If the result shall be the literal restoration of the children of Israel to their own land, and to the favour of the Most High, which they have so long forfeited, the fulfilment will be all the more striking. The language is full of Gospel truth and grace, shadowing forth the common salvation which is ultimately to be enjoyed by both Jew and Gentile. They are righteous that do righteousness; and to all such, whether individuals or peoples, the gates of the Celestial City will be opened. Ver. 12-21. Truth and peace are inseparable, as well as wickedness and misery. The oppressors of God's people have in quick succession passed away; but that people still lives and multiplies. As the ancient Israel had nothing to fear from the successive kings by whom they had been oppressed, so the faithful in Christ Jesus have nothing to dread from the broken law, which he himself has magnified and made honourable. During the captivity, the Jewish nation seemed to be dead, but a blessed resurrection awaited it. A king would again ascend the throne, the priests appear in the temple, the princes and the people rejoice in making holiday, and the voice of gladness be heard throughout the country. Under these brilliant figures were contained great Gospel facts and doctrines. The expression, "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise," admits of a twofold explanation. The resurrection of Christ is at once the pledge and pattern of the resurrection of his people; the spiritual resurrection of their souls will inevitably be followed by the resurrection of their bodies.

Chap. XXVII. 1-6. The power of the old serpent, the devil, is limited, and his reign will draw to a close. So sure as he now goes about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour, he will be chained and cast into perdition. Expositors have here indulged in compari-

3 I the LORD 'do keep it; I will water it every moment: lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day.

4 'Fury is not in me: who would set the briers and thorns against me in battle? I would 'go through them, I would burn them together.

5 Or let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; and he shall make peace with me.

6 He shall 'cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit.

7 ¶ Hath 'he smitten him, 'as he smote those that smote him? or is he slain according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him?

8 In measure, when 'it shooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it: 'he stayeth his rough wind in the day of the east wind.

9 By this therefore shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is all the fruit to take away his sin; when he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalk-stones that are beaten in sunder, the groves and 'images shall not stand up.

10 Yet 'the defenced city shall be desolate, and the habitation forsaken, and left like a wilderness: there shall the calf feed, and there shall he lie down, and consume the branches thereof.

11 When the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off: the women come, and set them on fire; 'for it is a people of no understanding: 'therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will shew them no favour.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall beat off from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, that 'the great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, 'and shall worship the LORD in the holy mount at Jerusalem.

flowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us: for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves.

16 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste.

17 ¶ Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet; and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding-place.

18 And your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 God's judgment upon Jerusalem. 9 The insensibility. 13 and deep hypocrisy of the Jews. 17 A promise of sanctification.

WOE to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices.

2 Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow: and it shall be unto me as Ariel.

3 And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee.

4 And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust.

5 Moreover, the multitude of thy strangers shall be like small dust, and the multitude of the terrible ones shall be as chaff that passeth away; yea, it shall be at an instant suddenly.

6 Thou shalt be visited of the LORD of hosts with thunder, and with earthquake, and great noise, with storm and tempest, and the flame of devouring fire.

7 And the multitude of all the nations that fight against Ariel, even all that fight against her and her munition, and that distress her, shall be as a dream of a night-vision.

8 It shall even be as when an hungry man dreameth, and behold, he eateth; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty: or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and behold, he drinketh; but he awaketh, and behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite: so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against mount Zion.

9 ¶ Stay yourselves, and wonder; cry ye out, and cry: they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.

10 For the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath have been supplied by the orgies of nations plunged in the darkness of idolatry. Ver. 9-29. The well known expression, "Precept upon precept, line upon line," would seem to have originated in contempt of the true prophets, whose concise and emphatic language was turned into ridicule. The prophets, like all true teachers, never forgot first principles: for they knew that amongst their hearers there were always numbers who required them. The day will never come when ministers of the Gospel, with a view to build up the more advanced disciples, can safely omit a frequent recurrence to the subjects of repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. The school of Christianity comprises people of all ages, from those lisping their first lessons to those going on to perfection. Ver. 16 is one of the most glorious in Scripture, as setting forth the ground of human hope—Christ the Lord, as the foundation stone, tried, precious, and sure. From the glorious perfections of his Divine nature, he is able to support the weight of the superstructure. None who believe in him shall ever be confounded. The Most High is not less wonderful in counsel than excellent in working. He orders all things for the advancement of his people's welfare, and the spread of his own kingdom. All his purposes will be accomplished, and all his enemies will be overthrown.

Chap. XXIX. 1-12. "Ariel" clearly signifies Jerusalem, but the reason of the name it is impossible to ascertain. The term, in some cases, as in Ezekiel, is applied to an altar; and it may have been given to Jerusalem as the place of sacrifice and public worship. This is, at least, the best explanation that has been given.

closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered.

11 And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed:

12 And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned.

13 ¶ Wherefore the LORD said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men:

14 Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.

15 Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the LORD, and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us?

16 Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay: for shall the work say of him that made it, He made me not? or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?

17 ¶ Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?

18 And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.

19 The meek also shall increase their joy in the LORD, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.

20 For the terrible one is brought to nought, and the scorner is consumed, and all that watch for iniquity are cut off:

21 That make a man an offender for a word, and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just for a thing of nought.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 The people threatened for their confidence in Egypt, and contempt of God's word.

WOE to the rebellious children, saith the LORD, that take counsel, but not of me; and that cover with a covering, but not of my Spirit, that they may add sin to sin:

2 That walk to go down into Egypt, and have not asked at my mouth; to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt!

3 Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame, and the trust in the shadow of Egypt your confusion.

4 For his princes were at Zoan, and his ambassadors came to Hanes.

5 They were all ashamed of a people that could not profit them, nor be an help nor profit, but a shame, and also a reproach.

6 The burden of the beasts of the south: Into the land of trouble and anguish, from whence come the young and old lion, the viper and fiery flying serpent, they will carry their riches upon the shoulders of young asses, and their treasures upon the bunches of camels, to a people that shall not profit them.

7 For the Egyptians shall help in vain, and to no purpose: therefore have I cried concerning this, Their strength is to sit still.

8 ¶ Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and ever;

9 That this is a rebellious people,

The exhortation, "Add ye year to year; let them kill the sacrifice," is solemn irony, as if the prophet had said, "Fill up the measure of your dead formality, while desecration of the power of godliness; but it will not avail." As you sow, you shall reap; the harvest follows hard on the heels of the seedtime. Ver. 13-17. The first of these verses presents a terrible warning to false professors; it ranks with the greatest iniquities, and is consequently followed by the severest punishments. The points of comparison here presented are the forest district, abounding in cedars and other trees, and the express indications of great revolutions to take place on the appearance of the Messiah. The Gentile world, which had produced no fruits of righteousness, resembled the wild regions of Lebanon, displaying fertility and beauty in a very high degree; while Israel, which had formerly been as the garden of the Lord, would be reduced to a state of nature. Ver. 18-24. These words apply to the Gentiles, to whom the Scriptures were to be delivered in their own tongue. While, to be taken spiritually, they have still a large amount of literal fulfilment in the miracles of the Saviour and his apostles, when the blind were made to see, the deaf to hear, and the lame man to leap as the hart; yet the higher acception points to the wondrous effect of Divine power on the souls of the faithful. True penitents had the eyes of their understanding opened, and their ears listened with joy to the glad tidings.

Chap. XXX. 1-17. From the first, the danger of Judah and Israel lay in forming alliances with Egypt, which had been expressly forbidden. It is not a little remarkable, that they should have looked to a country which had been to them a house of bondage, a source of intolerable misery. If it be remembered, also, that their departure was signalled by the destruction of the Egyptian army, and its sovereign, the wonder will be increased: that either should have looked to the other is, indeed, astonishing. The closing expression of ver. 7 comprises a principle of which God's people can scarcely make too much: "Your strength is to sit still," has often a volume of meaning to godly men, under peculiar circumstances. To trust in themselves is folly; to trust in their fellow-creatures may be iniquity, for as much ¹lying children, children that ²will not hear the law of the LORD:

10 Which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophecy not unto us right things, ¹ speak unto us smooth things, prophecy deceits:

11 Get you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us.

12 Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye despise this word, and trust in ³oppression and perverseness, and stay thereon:

13 Therefore this iniquity shall be to you as a breach ready to fall, swelling out in a high wall, whose breaking cometh suddenly at an instant.

14 And he shall break it as the breaking of ⁴the potter's vessel that is broken in pieces; he shall not spare: so that there shall not be found in the bursting of it a sherd to take fire from the hearth, or to take water withal out of the pit.

15 For thus saith the Lord God, ⁵the Holy One of Israel, In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength; and ye would not.

16 But ye said, No; ⁶for we will flee upon horses; therefore shall ye flee: and, We will ride upon the swift; ⁷therefore shall they that pursue you be swift.

17 One thousand shall flee at the rebuke of one; at the rebuke of five shall ye flee: ⁸till ye be left as ⁹a beacon upon the top of a mountain, and as an ensign on an hill.

18 ¶ And ⁹therefore will the LORD wait, that he may be gracious unto you; and therefore ¹⁰will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: ¹¹for the LORD is a God of judgment: ¹²blessed are all they that wait for him.

19 For the people shall ¹³dwell in Zion at Jerusalem; thou shalt weep no more: ¹⁴he will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear it, he will answer thee.

20 And though the LORD give you ¹⁵the bread of adversity, and the water of ¹⁶affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers:

31 For through ¹⁹the voice of the LORD

as their condition is one for which relief can come from God alone. Under such circumstances, then, humble confidence, holy patience, constant and believing prayer, are both wisdom and duty. This, however, which might seem of all things easiest, is of all things the most difficult. It is far easier to trust in the flesh than in the Lord, and to lean upon our own understanding rather than on his unerring word, and in proportion to the ease is the peril. Ver. 18-24. The beautiful exhortation contained in the first and second of these verses is full of evangelical principle. The affirmation, "Blessed are all they who wait for him," finely harmonises with the statement on which we have been remarking. The best illustration supplied in Jewish history on both these points, is the conduct of Israel on the invasion of Sennacherib. In that case their trust was not in their sword, and in their bow, but in the living God; they sat still, and waited for his salvation. The result was deliverance and joy. They wept no more, for he had been very gracious to them. They had trusted, and they were not disappointed. The value of blessings is best understood by their withdrawal. But of all blessings to the people of God, the ordinances of the Gospel are the most precious, and of all calamities their loss is the greatest. Men, taught of Heaven, have an ear ever open to the voice of Providence: when they hear "This is the way," they hasten to walk in it, turning neither to the right hand nor to the left. The test of a healthy spirit is, a love of holiness, and a readiness to follow the Lord fully, whithersoever his commands may lead, and to whatever dangers they may expose. Ver. 25-33. There is something strangely significant in the idea of rivers and streams of water running on the tops of mountains. But that idea is peculiarly significant as an emblem of the change about to be effected by Christianity. Fervent piety would be found among individuals, classes, and peoples, where idolatry had for ages all but countless been in the ascendant, blinding the minds, hardening

CHAPTER XXXI.

The prophet sheweth the cursed folly in trusting to Egypt, and forsaking of God.

WOE to them that go down to Egypt for help, and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong: but ^athey look not unto the Holy One of Israel, ^bneither seek the LORD!

2 Yet ^che also is wise, and ^dwill bring evil, and will not ^lcall back his words: but will ^earise against the house of the evil-doers, and ^fagainst the help of them that work iniquity.

3 Now the Egyptians are men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit. When the LORD shall stretch out his hand, both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together.

4 For thus hath the LORD spoken unto me, Like as the lion and the young lion roaring on his prey, when a multitude of shepherds is called forth against him, he will not be afraid of their voice, nor abase himself for the ^anoise of them: ^bso shall the LORD of hosts come down to fight for mount Zion, and for the hill thereof.

5 As birds flying, so will the LORD of hosts defend Jerusalem; ^bdefending also he will deliver it; and ^lpassing over he will preserve it.

6 ^lTurn ye unto him from whom the children of Israel have deeply revolted.

7 For ^lin that day every man shall cast away his idols of silver, and ^bhis idols of gold, which your own hands have made unto you for a sin.

4 The heart also of the ^orash shall understand knowledge, and ^cthe tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak ^oplainly.

5 The vile person shall be no more called liberal, nor the churl said to be bountiful.

6 For the vile person will speak villany, ^fand his heart will work iniquity, to practise hypocrisy, and to utter error against the LORD, to make ^cempty the soul of the hungry; and he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail.

the hearts, and polluting the characters of men. Even the light of the moon would become as that of the sun, and the light of the sun sevenfold! Old things would pass away, and all things become new.

Chap. XXXI. 1-9. In proportion as people possess the means of aggression or resistance, they will be tempted to use and trust in them. This is particularly the case with cavalry. Moses had expressly interdicted the possession of such a force by Israel in large numbers, knowing the temptations to which it would expose them. Military enterprises rendered cavalry necessary to eminent success; and the Egyptians were noted for their particular attention to the breeding of these animals. A great historian, speaking of a particular locality in Egypt, records that there were in it no fewer than twenty thousand royal chariots, each having two horses. Then as now the incessant tendency of human nature was to depart from the living God through an evil heart of unbelief. There are occasions on which we may be required to use means, and part of these means may very materially consist in the aid of our fellow-men, and in such cases it would be presumption to neglect them; but even then it is ever to be remembered, that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. The believer's wisdom, therefore, whether acting apart or in harmony with others, is to acknowledge God in all his ways, looking upward for direction to his steps. He cannot too steadfastly remember that "the way of man is not in himself," and that without Christ he can do nothing: but that through his strength he can do all things, suffer all things, and conquer every adversary.

Chap. XXXII. 1-8. It is generally allowed, that the king that is to reign in righteousness, whatever reference it may have to Hezekiah, ultimately points to the Lord Jesus Christ. The subject has given rise to some useless discussion; for although it is not to be denied that it is immediately connected with the account of the destruction of the Assyrian army, that it fully accords with the prosperous and happy reign of Hezekiah, and that the statement cannot be applied directly and literally to the times of the Messiah, yet these kings were types of the Lord Jesus, and as such, there need be no hesitation in 13 ^{cs}¶ Hear, ye that are far off, what I have done; and, ^{ct}ye that are near, acknowledge my might.

14 The sinners in Zion are afraid; fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites: ^{cu}who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with ^{cv}everlasting burnings?

15 He ^{cw}that walketh ^{cx}righteously, and speaketh ^{cy}uprightly; ^{cz}he that despiseth the gain of ^{da}oppressions, ^{db}that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, ^{dc}that applying this Scripture to Him who, in the highest sense, "reigns in righteousness." He alone, however, "shelters" sinners from the wrath of God, and the temptations of the Wicked One. The sentiment contained in ver. 8 is one of great moment, which the opulent portion of the Church of God would do well to consider—while the liberal deviseth liberal things, by these very things they will stand. In proportion as they are faithful in a few things, they will have many committed to their charge. Ver. 9-20. The doctrine of Divine influence is here very strikingly set forth. It is, indeed, not easy to conceive of a more distinct recognition of the Holy Spirit as the source of all the piety of our world. He alone can remove the briers and thorns, and turn the wilderness into a fruitful field. May the self-same Spirit be poured out on all the churches of the saints as a spirit of prayer and of supplication! This is required for the revival of true religion where it is, for the overthrow of false religion, and for the spread of the Gospel to the ends of the earth. It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of the Scripture doctrines of the Cross; but these doctrines are powerful only in proportion as they are accompanied by the Eternal Spirit. Until then, things will, at home and abroad, continue substantially as they are. No length of time, no amount of human labour, will overcome the difficulties to be encountered, and realise the glorious era predicted by the prophet.

God's people cannot be too deeply penetrated by this conviction, for nothing short of a conviction, deep and overwhelming, will ever prompt the supplication which alone will be followed by a blessing.

Chap. XXXIII. 1-12. The spiritual portion of the ancient Church well understood the doctrine of grace, and the advantage to be derived from waiting on the Lord. To him they looked to be their arm every morning, and their salvation also in the time of trouble. While other nations of the earth looked to their armies and navies, their strongholds and fortifications, his people, when in a proper state of mind, relied solely on himself. In order to their reliance, however, knowledge was necessary, and its practical application constituted wisdom. Ver. 13-24. Fear, as one of the strongest passions that can influence the human heart, is peculiarly painful; but no fear is comparable to that of the hypocrite. Accordingly, when Jerusalem was invested by hostile armies, her wicked inhabitants were the subjects of a twofold alarm; while apprehending the rage of their foes, they had nothing to expect from Heaven but vengeance, a condemning conscience preventing them from looking upward, since they had nothing to hope, and everything to fear. The question in ver. 14 is one of terrible import, which ought to paralyse the heart of every hypocrite in the Church of God. The prophet is careful to distinguish between the characters of the righteous and the wicked. The portraiture drawn in ver. 15 and 16 is one of striking beauty, setting forth the connexion between character and privilege. From the earliest age this conjunction was clearly understood; sin and danger, holiness and safety, were ideas inseparably associated. The good man requires no other certificate than his own character; he is an epistle of Christ, known and read of all men. His words, his deeds, his spirit, his deportment, his aims, his pursuits, all proclaim him a child of God, and an heir of heaven. Hezekiah had been an object of peculiar interest to the people during the siege; his piety and humility, his prayer and confidence, all bespoke the character of the man, while his concern for the honour of God, and his mourning garb of sackcloth, strikingly appealed to the eye of the people wherever he shewed himself among them. With the destruction of the enemy he threw aside his sackcloth; his mourning was turned into joy, and his prayers into thanksgivings. The whole of the history is fraught with encouragement to Christians when beset with enemies for Christ's sake. They have but to act on the same principle, and breathe the same spirit, to rejoice in the same blessing.

one prophecy, and may be considered a regular poem of two parts—the first comprising a denunciation of Divine vengeance against the enemies of the Church, and the second describing her flourishing condition as the result of it. But, however complete and beautiful this portion of Scripture may be as it regards the events then passing, it doubtless referred to a future age, and to a greater victory. Nothing else can fully justify the expression but great revolutions in later ages, preparatory to the complete establishment of the Gospel. These verses possess an awful grandeur, as indicating wrath and power, justice and vengeance. Natural historians are somewhat perplexed as to what creature is meant by "unicorn." The term indicates an animal with only one horn. From references which are made to it, it would seem to have been wild, strong, and fierce. Dr Henderson, in opposition to the foolish notion that it was fabulous, produces testimonies from independent witnesses to its existence both in Asia and in Africa. Not only is the figure of the unicorn exhibited on the ruins of Persepolis, it is also described by Pliny in his "Natural History;" by Ludovico, who saw two unicorns at Mecca; and by many others. Here the creature is used to represent the people, or that portion of them who were strong, warlike, and regarded as invincible. Ver. 11-17. The term "cormorant" properly signifies a waterfowl, a bird which dwells in desolate places. The exhortation to seek out of the book of the Lord and read, shews the duty of men to study the Scriptures for themselves. In respect to prophecy, mere abstract thought or refined speculation is of no value. The Lord hath spoken, and the concern of men is to know what he hath said. The same Spirit that inspired the prophet will take care that every prediction shall be accomplished; history, therefore, is the best interpreter of prophecy. Prophecy, rightly understood, constitutes the strongest branch of the evidence of inspiration. It becomes stronger with time; and when all shall have been accomplished, it will form a chain stretching through all time, and comprising all the affairs of all nations. Few things are more conducive to strengthen faith, and to suppress the risings of godless scepticism, than the lessons of prophecy. Every revolving scene, therefore, is hastening on the last result, when the mystery of God shall have been finished. Happy they who believe in the Divine testimony, and who long for the appearance of the Lord in his glory!

Chap. XXXV. 1, 2. The beautiful figures here employed clearly point to moral and spiritual desolation. The import, therefore, is, that as great and happy changes would subsequently be realised with regard to mankind as if the wilderness should become a vast field, producing the lily and the rose, and all the fruits of the highest culture. The chapter has doubtless some allusion to the prosperous state of the country during the reign of Hezekiah, and it may also refer to the felicity consequent on a return from Babylon; but it doubtless points to future times, when the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, since not till then will the wilderness and solitary place be glad, and the desert rejoice and blossom as the rose. Ver. 3-10. While public instructors are to furnish the understanding with knowledge, they are not to forget the heart, which calls for strength and consolation. The preceptive portions of the Word of God require to be adequately blended with the promissory, since the latter alone can furnish the strength necessary to the former. As a rule, this will be found in all thoroughly scriptural instructions, whether imparted to the old or the young, who know the Lord. Ver. 3 and 4 are full of beauty and consolation. The resources of the covenant are so vast and inexhaustible, that there is no case they will not meet, no weakness they will not strengthen, no fear they will not remove. Ver. 5 and 6 were literally fulfilled in the days of the Saviour, and doubtless they point to that period. It is highly probable that the Lord Jesus, in his reply to the messengers of John, referred to these things as conclusive proofs of his Divine mission. He bade them go and tell John what they had seen and heard, leaving John to draw his own conclusions. The last verse points directly to the work of redemption, with its glorious results. Although to a certain extent fulfilled in the restoration of Israel from bondage, they will have their complete accomplishment only in the conversion of the Gentile nations. In the march of armies, the music materially contributes to the impression created by their warlike appearance; but no instruments are comparable to the uplifted voices of myriads. It is uncertain whether the beautiful language of the prophet refers to the ancient custom of wearing crowns on festive occasions, which were considered marks of honour and dignity, or to the practice of anointing the head at such times, which probably gave rise to the phrase used by David, "The oil of gladness;" but certainly it is expressive of the joy arising from salvation, and the introduction, in the highest sense, to the glorious privileges of the sons of God.

guage; for we understand it: and speak not to us in the Jews' language, in the ears of the people that ^uare on the wall.

12 But Rabshakeh said, Hath my master sent me to thy master and to thee to speak these words? ^vhath he not sent me to the men that sit upon the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their own piss with you?

13 ¶ Then Rabshakeh stood, and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and said, Hear ye the words of the great king, the king of Assyria.

14 Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you; for he shall not be able to deliver you.

15 Neither let Hezekiah ^wmake you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us: this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

16 Hearken not to Hezekiah; for thus saith the king of Assyria, ^xMake an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me: and eat ye every one of his vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern;

19 Where ^{ac}are the gods of ^{ad}Hamath and ^{ae}Arphad? where ^{af}are the gods of ^{ag}Sepharvaim? ^{ah}and have they delivered Samaria out of my hand?

20 Who ^{ai}are they among all the gods of these lands, that have delivered their land out of my hand, ^{aj}that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?

21 But they held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

22 ¶ Then came ^{ak}Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, that ^{al}was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph, the recorder, to Hezekiah ^{am}with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rabshakeh.

Chap. XXXVI. 1-22. The subject of this and the three following chapters is the destruction of the Assyrian army. As the events connected with the invasion had occupied a portion of the prophetic announcements, and as the prophet lived to see their accomplishment, it was proper that he should incorporate the facts with his prophecy. Nowhere in Scripture did the event so speedily follow the prediction, and never was fulfilment more complete and satisfactory. The bulk of the prophecies regarded events in the distant future, but here it was otherwise; and the effect must have been powerful, indeed, even on the minds of the unbelieving portion of the Jews. Deliverance so signal from impending dangers so appalling was alike fitted to impress the mind of the prophet, the king, and the people, and to give a powerful impulse to the piety of the really devout; and there seems no reason to doubt that it materially contributed to the happy and prosperous reign of Hezekiah, and the general interests of the Jewish Church. In proportion as the invading power was humbled, idolatry was exposed, and the religion of the Jews vindicated; while the God they served, and who delivered them, was to that extent glorified. The conduct of Sennacherib's servants sufficed to illustrate some of the leading features of human nature. The low cunning of Rabshakeh was in proportion to his boisterous impiety; he remains a sort of type of a class of men that have existed in every age, and whose peculiar characters have been developed according to circumstances. Nothing could exceed his impious insults of the true God, and the contempt he poured upon his worshippers; and the judgment which speedily followed was commensurate with his peculiar guilt.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

1 Hezekiah mourning, sendeth to Isaiah to pray for them.
6 Isaiah comforteth them. 36 An angel slayeth the Assyrians. 37 Sennacherib is slain by his own sons.

AND ^ait came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard ^{it}, that ^bhe rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, ^cand went into the house of the LORD.

2 And ^dhe sent Eliakim, who was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, unto Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz.

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, ^eThis day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of ^fblasphemy; ^gfor the children are come to the birth, and ^hthere is not strength to bring forth.

4 ⁱIt may be the LORD thy God will hear the words of Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent ^jto reproach the living God, ^kand will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore ^llift up thy prayer ^mfor the remnant that is ⁿleft.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 ^oAnd Isaiah said unto them, ^pThus shall ye say unto your master, Thus saith the LORD, ^qBe not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, wherewith the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, ^rI will ^ssend a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and return to his own land; and ^tI will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

8 ^uSo ^vRabshakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against ^wLibnah: for he had heard that he was departed from ^xLachish.

9 And ^yhe heard say concerning Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, He is come forth to make war with thee: and when he heard ^zit, he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, ^{aa}Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold, ^{ab}thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly, and shalt thou be delivered?

Chap. XXXVII. 1-20. The course pursued by Hezekiah on this great emergency illustrates a principle, and presents a lesson to the people of God in every age. He appears to have utterly despaired of arresting the invader, and nothing remained for him but, as the representative of his people, to prostrate himself before the Lord. The king's servants, probably instructed by their royal master, hastened to the prophet, who received an immediate answer from on high, calculated to assure and comfort the king, by filling him with the hope of deliverance through Divine interposition. It was distinctly intimated that the invaders should be destroyed, and their sovereign himself brought to an untimely end. A finer spectacle was never presented by Jewish royalty than when Hezekiah received the letter, and reading it, went up to the house of the Lord, and spread it before the Most High, in the meanwhile pouring out his prayer. That prayer will remain a model of humble, fervent, and believing supplication to the latest ages. How vivid the picture which was presented to the eye of the king of the worthlessness of idolatry, and the wickedness of its votaries! How exalted his conceptions of the power, holiness, justice, and majesty of the true God! Ver. 21-38. The language of the prophet sufficed to diffuse life, hope, and gladness through the court and the city, and they had not long to wait for the accomplishment of the menace. The sun went down as usual in peace, leaving a hundred and eighty-five thousand men around the city; but rose on the morrow only to illumine their corpses! It is impossible for men in our times to form any conception of the impression which was produced by such a result. Not only must it have fallen as a voice of sides of Lebanon; and I will cut down the tall cedars thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof: and I will enter into the height of his border, and the forest of his Carmel.

25 I have digged, and drunk water; and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of the besieged places.

26 Hast thou not heard long ago, how I have done it; and of ancient times, that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldst be to lay waste defenced cities into ruinous heaps.

27 Therefore their inhabitants were of small power, they were dismayed and confounded: they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb; as the grass on the house-tops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

28 But I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

29 Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears; therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

30 And this shall be a sign unto thee, Ye shall eat this year such as groweth of itself; and the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof.

31 And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward:

32 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of mount Zion: the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

33 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shields, nor cast a bank against it.

34 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

35 For I will defend this city to save it, for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

36 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred and fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

¹ Hezekiah hath his life lengthened. ² The sun goeth ten degrees backward for a sign of that promise. ³ Hezekiah's thanksgiving.

IN those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, came unto him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Set thine house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live.

2 Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the LORD,

3 And said, Remember now, O LORD, I beseech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight: and Hezekiah wept sore.

4 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD to Isaiah, saying,

5 Go and say to Hezekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears; behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years.

6 And I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria: and I will defend this city.

7 And this shall be a sign unto thee from the LORD, that the LORD will do this thing that he hath spoken;

8 Behold, I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the sun-dial of Ahaz, ten degrees backward. So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down.

10 I said in the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave: I am deprived of the residue of my years.

12 Mine age is departed, and is removed thunder throughout Judea, but upon the surrounding nations. It was the great fact of that age, as it has ranked with the greatest facts of all subsequent ages. The idea here communicated of angelic power is terrible beyond conception. One angel would suffice, in the briefest space, to put to death every soul of all the hundreds of millions that now people the globe. How important, then, to have these angels for our friends! How terrible to have them against us! How pleasing the thought that, with respect even to little children, even they are the objects of Jehovah's care; and the angelic hosts are ministering spirits sent forth to minister to those that are the heirs of salvation.

Chap. XXXVIII. 1-8. Great mercies call for great trials to keep the balance even. There was danger to Hezekiah from the extraordinary interposition of the Divine favour, and therefore it was necessary that he should be reminded, not only that life was short, but the tenure of it very uncertain. The same prophet, therefore, who had acted between him and the Most High, was commissioned to make a communication of a very awakening character: "Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die, and not live." Such language was eminently calculated to humble pride, and to diminish the glory of terrestrial splendour. Under these afflictive circumstances, the king was thrown back upon his own

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 Merodach-baladan, sending to visit Hezekiah, hath notice of his treasures. 3 Isaiah foretelleth the Babylonian captivity.

AT that time ^aMerodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, ^bking of Babylon, ^csent letters and a present to Hezekiah: for he had heard that he had been sick, and was recovered.

2 And Hezekiah was glad of them, and shewed them the house of his ^dprecious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his ^earmour, and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not.

3 ¶ Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, ^fThey are come from a far country unto me, even from Babylon.

4 Then said he, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, All that is in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not shewed them.

5 Then said Isaiah to Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD of hosts;

6 Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried to Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

7 And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and ^gthey shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

8 Then said Hezekiah to Isaiah, ^hGood is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken: he said moreover, For there shall be peace and truth in my days.

conscious integrity: his heart approved his conduct, and under its sanction he could appeal to the Lord. Happy are they who, in similar circumstances, can use corresponding language! It is worthy of notice, that while Hezekiah was the best of Jewish kings, and the most upright of men, none were ever more distressed by an intimation that life was at an end. He appears to have clung to existence with extraordinary tenacity. The intelligence affected him greatly more than did the letter of Sennacherib. The Lord was gracious, and heard the sovereign's prayer, and extended the lease of his existence. The proof given him, as if to aid faith, and to bring home the consolatory assurance, was of a remarkable character. Infidels have endeavoured to turn it against the claims of Inspiration, but without success. Ver. 9-22. The king has been careful to record the workings of his own heart on this very searching occasion. He deeply felt his nothingness, and threw himself on the compassion of his God. In proportion to the depth of his sorrow was the height of his exultation, when the prophet intimated that his life would be prolonged. The lesson the history imparts is obvious: when Christians have received special mercies, in the shape of personal deliverances, and prolonged existence, it behoves them to remember their obligation, and to turn the answer of their prayer into a song of praise.

Chap. XXXIX. 1, 2. In the Old Testament history we have traits of excellences as well as defects. Then, as now, sympathy with suffering, and congratulation on deliverance, characterised both the great and the small. The deportment of Hezekiah, on receiving the ambassadors of his brother king, was cordial and seemingly, although, for the moment, he appears to have forgotten that he was dealing with the representatives of an idolatrous power, which furnished him an opportunity of doing honour to the living and true God. Ver. 3-8. In this case the error of the king was followed by immediate rebuke. Guilt was not suffered to remain upon his conscience, nor was the hardening influence of this vain display suffered to mislead him further. The error of the king may be estimated in part from the punishment which followed it. That punishment, however, would be the fruit, not so much of Hezekiah's own conduct, as of that of his successor. The response of the king to the terrible communication of the prophet betrays a state of mind far from praiseworthy. He coolly replied, "Good is the word of the Lord," whereas that word portended nothing but overwhelming evil! Nor is this all: in the prospect of his country's ruin, he was comforted with the selfish assurance that there should be "peace and truth in his days." There was here a defect alike of piety, philanthropy, and patriotism. When he was apprised of his own doom, he "wept sore;" but when told of the destruction of the monarchy, the annihilation of his kingdom, and the degradation of his children, he was unmoved! Selfishness is a weed that grows in every heart; and never was its indulgence more strikingly manifested than on the present occasion. How affecting the contrast presented by the Lord Jesus, as he wept over Jerusalem, when he thought of its coming visita-

26 Lift up your eyes on high, and behold ^qwho hath created these ^rthings, that ^sbringeth out their host by number: he calleth them all by names, by the greatness of his might, for that ^the is strong in power; not one faileth.

27 Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, My way is hid from the LORD, and ^umy judgment is passed over from my God?

28 ¶ Hast thou not known, hast thou not heard, ^vthat ^wthe everlasting God, the LORD, the Creator of ^xthe ends of the earth, ^yfainteth not, neither is weary?

tion! The Gospel, as a display of benevolence, is the grand antidote to this all-absorbing selfishness.

Chap. XL. 1-11. The prophecy of Isaiah now takes a new form, which continues to the end of that book. All that remains is alike remarkable for beauty and grandeur. The historic gives place to the thoroughly prophetic. The prophet's eye darts into the distant future—everything appertaining to both Jew and Gentile, and the consummation of all things, presenting itself distinctly before him. As the Evangelical Prophet, he stands forth in his own glory and majesty, as he pours forth his marvellous predictions, so full of truth, and grace, and hope for a distracted race. The great centre of his wonderful portraiture is the Prince of Peace, the Lord of Glory, his person, work, and kingdom, overlapping every other consideration. As if to foreshadow the grace that was to abound to the world, he opens with the soothing words, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God." With respect to the import of the verses before us, there can be no dispute; it is so clear and obvious, that even a child that has learned the alphabet of the Gospel system cannot mistake it. Ver. 12-31. This sublime passage exhibits the character of the Most High in all its glory, and as such is eminently calculated to elevate our views and to inspire our confi-there is 'no searching of his understanding.

29 He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength.

30 Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall:

31 But they that wait upon the LORD shall 'renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and 'not faint.

CHAPTER XLI.

¹ God expostulateth with his people about his mercies to the church, 10 about his promises, 31 and about the vanity of idols.

KEEP silence before me, O islands; and let the people renew their strength: let them come near, then let them speak: 'let us come near together to judgment.

2 Who raised up ¹the righteous man from the east, called him to his foot, gave the nations before him, and made him rule over kings? he gave them as the dust to his sword, and as driven stubble to his bow.

3 He pursued them, and passed ²safely; even by the way that he had not gone with his feet.

4 Who hath wrought and done it, ^bcalling the generations from the beginning? ^cI the LORD, the first, and ^dwith the last; I am he.

5 The ^eisles saw it, and feared; 'the ends of the earth were afraid, drew near, and came.

6 They helped every one his neighbour; and every one said to his brother, Be ³of good courage.

7 So the carpenter encouraged the ⁴goldsmith, and he that smootheneth with the hammer ⁵him that smote the anvil, ⁶saying, It is ready for the sodering: and he fastened it with nails, that it should not be moved.

8 But ⁷thou, Israel, art my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, ⁸the seed of Abraham my friend.

9 Thou ⁹whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and ¹⁰called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant; ¹¹I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away.

dence. Sin has made the world miserable, and it is the express object of the Gospel to impart comfort, and to restore to felicity, which it accomplishes by turning men from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God.

Chap. XLI. 1-9. The righteous man to be raised in the East, has been the theme of much conflict amongst expositors. Some have viewed it as pointing to Abraham, and others to Cyrus; and a portion of them have given the preference to the former, on the ground that he was a righteous man in a sense in which that term could not be applied to Cyrus. But, on the other hand, there is ascribed to him an amount of victory which by no means harmonises with the career of Abraham. Looking at the subject in the latter view, Cyrus only could be meant; and his history was such as every way to illustrate the prophecy. Cyrus, although an idolater, was yet a man distinguished for his virtue as well as for his valour. His destruction of the Babylonian empire, and the liberation of the Jews, were, moreover, in a political sense, acts of exalted righteousness; and the abolition of idolatry which followed the success of his arms, comes under the same head. But it has been extensively held, that a higher than Cyrus was pointed to as furnishing the ultimate fulfilment, although the objections to this view seem all but insuperable. The Lord Jesus was not from the East, but Cyrus was; he was not a warrior subduing the nations—Cyrus was. This view, moreover, agrees with the specifications which Isaiah elsewhere makes, when Cyrus is actually called by name. The whole of the description, with the exception of righteousness, in the evangelical sense, applies in a remarkable manner to Cyrus; and finally, ⁴consider them, and know the latter end of them; or declare us things for to come.

23 Shew the things that are to come hereafter, ²that we may know that ye are gods: yea, ³do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold ⁴it together.

24 Behold, ¹ye are ²of nothing, and your work ³of nought: ⁴an abomination is ⁵he that chooseth you.

25 I have ¹raised up ²one from the north, and he shall come: from the rising of the sun ³shall he call upon my name; and he shall ⁴come upon princes as ⁵upon mortar, and as the potter treadeth clay.

26 Who hath ¹declared from the beginning, that we may know? and before-time, that we may say, ²He is ³righteous? yea, ⁴there is none that sheweth; yea, ⁵there is none that declareth; yea, ⁶there is none that heareth your words.

27 The ¹first shall say to Zion, Behold, behold them: and ²I will give to Jerusalem one that bringeth good tidings.

28 For ¹I beheld, and ²there was no man; even among them, and ³there was no counsellor, that, when I asked of them, could ⁴answer a word.

29 Behold, ¹they are all vanity; their works are nothing; their molten images are ²wind and confusion.

CHAPTER XLII.

¹ Jekorah calls on men to behold the Messiah; ⁸ declares that he will glorify himself in fulfilling his predictions; ¹³ promises to remove every obstacle to the conversion of the Gentiles; ¹⁸ predicts the unbelief of the Jews.

BEHOOLD ¹my servant, ²whom I uphold; ³mine elect, ⁴in whom ⁵my soul delighteth: ⁶I have put my Spirit upon him; ⁷he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles.

2 He shall ¹not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street.

3 A ¹bruised reed shall he not break, and the ²smoking flax shall he not ³quench: ⁴he shall bring forth judgment unto truth.

4 He ¹shall not fail nor be ²discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth: ³and the isles shall wait for his law.

5 ¶ Thus saith God the LORD, ¹he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; ²he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it; ³he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein.

19 Who is blind, but my servant? or this view accords with the object of the prophet, which was to assure the people that God would raise up for them such a deliverer. Ver. 10-29. Under the natural image of a thrashing-floor, Isaiah predicts the ruin and destruction of the enemies of Israel. As an instrument in God's hands, nothing could resist their progress or survive their blow. Thus will it be with the Church of God. Seeing that her Lord is for her, none can be against her; and through him she will prove more than conqueror over all her foes.

Chap. XLII. 1-4. On few scriptures have more strange things been uttered than on this opening verse. Although they seem so plain that he who runs may read, yet the controversy which has obtained upon them has been great and multifarious. Some have viewed them as representing the Jewish people, some Cyrus, and some the prophets collectively, and others the Lord Jesus. That ever this should have been doubted for a moment is very extraordinary, painfully shewing how little learning contributes to the discovery of the truth. Even the Chaldee paraphrase assigns it to the Messiah. Nor is this all; the passage is actually referred to him in the New Testament! The whole of these verses as clearly, minutely, and fully as it is possible for language to do, pointed to the Saviour's person, character, and work. He is chosen of God for his own sake, and he is constituted the head of the Church, all whose members are chosen in him. Ver. 5-25. The words here addressed to him are full of encouragement; a pledge is given of upholding and preserving him to be the surety, the foundation, and the very essence of the new covenant—the pledge of all the covenant blessings with which it is furnished, the fountain of knowledge, holiness, and happiness to the Gentile world. The new song set forth in ver. 10 is clearly the song of salvation, expressive of the joy with which the world will be filled when all flesh shall have seen it. While every portion of the chapter deaf, as my messenger that I sent? who is blind as he that is perfect, and blind as the LORD's servant?

23 Who among you will give ear to this? ⁱwho ^jwill hearken, and hear for the ^ktime to come?

24 Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not the LORD, he against whom we have sinned? for they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his law.

25 Therefore ^lhe hath poured upon him the fury of his anger, and the strength of battle: and it hath set him on fire round about, yet he knew not; and it burned him, ^myet he laid it not to heart.

20 The beast of the field shall honour me, the dragons and the ^{ae}owls: because I bears directly on the Son of God, ver. 21, in particular, points to his mighty work. By his atoning sacrifice he magnified the law, and made it honourable, so that God the Father can be just, and yet the justifier of the ungodly. The whole chapter breathes so strongly of the Divine benevolence, and exhibits so vividly the true character of the Lamb, that it is full fraught with consolation to his people. Having him, they have all things; in him they are complete: as the fulness of the Godhead, bodily he is presented to them, and it is their privilege to receive of his fulness, and grace for grace.

Chap. XLIII. 1-21. Those whom the Lord has redeemed may well banish fear, and confide in the power which broke their fetters. The promises here presented are of a nature to inspire the utmost courage. The figures selected, of flowing streams and flaming fires, from neither of which the saints are to suffer harm, are among the most impressive and assuring that nature can supply. From the special emphasis which is given to the subject of fear, it is to be inferred that the children of God, encompassed by enemies, are liable to be down-cast, if not intimidated; and comparing their own numbers and strength with those of the adversary, they well may; but, bringing to their aid Omnipotence, they may rise to the elevation of David, and declare boldly they will "not fear what man can do" unto them. Ver. 23-28. It is strange that a creature so helpless as man, so surrounded with perils, and whose sole hope is in his God, should yet be so backward to flee to his fortress! The Lord complains of Jacob, "Thou hast not called upon me." Such a course is alike marked by a want of piety and of wisdom. However small may be the sacrifice we bring to God's altar, if our object is sincerely to honour him, give waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen.

21 This ^cpeople have I formed for myself; they shall shew forth my praise.

22 ¶ But thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of me, O Israel.

23 Thou hast not brought me the ^esmall cattle of thy burnt-offerings, neither hast thou ^dhonoured me with thy sacrifices: I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense.

24 Thou hast bought me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou ^ffilled me with the fat of thy sacrifices; but ^ethou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities.

25 I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.

26 Put me in remembrance; let us plead together: ^edeclare thou, that thou mayest be justified.

27 Thy ^gfirst father hath sinned, and thy ^hteachers have transgressed against me.

28 Therefore ⁱI have profaned the ^jprinces of the sanctuary, ^kand have given Jacob to the curse, and Israel to reproaches.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Israel, and ^hhis Redeemer the LORD of hosts; ⁱ*I am* the first, and I am the last; and ^jbesides me there is no God.

7 And who, as I, shall call, and shall declare it, and set it in order for me, ^ksince I appointed the ancient people? and the things that are coming, and shall come, let them shew unto them.

8 Fear ye not, neither be afraid: have not I told thee from that time, and ^lhave declared it? ^m*ye are* even my witnesses. ⁿIs there a God besides me? yea, there is no ^oGod; I know not any.

9 ¶ They that ^pmake a graven image are all of them vanity; and their ^qdelectable things shall not profit; and they are their own witnesses: they see not, nor know; that they may be ashamed.

10 Who hath formed a god, or molten a graven image that is profitable for nothing?

11 Behold, ^rall his fellows shall be ashamed; and the workmen, they are of men: ^slet them all be gathered together, let them stand up; ^t*yet* they shall fear, and they shall be ashamed together.

12 ^uThe smith with ^vthe tongs both worketh in the coals and fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with the strength of his arms: ^wyea, he is hungry, and his strength faileth: he drinketh no water, and is faint.

13 The carpenter stretcheth out his rule, ^xhe marketh it out with a line, he fitteth it with planes, and he marketh it out with the compass, and maketh it after the figure of a man, according to the beauty of a man; ^ythat it may remain in the house.

14 He ^zheweth him down cedars, and taketh the cypress and the oak, which he ^{aa}strengtheneth for himself among the trees of the forest: he planteth an ash, and the rain doth nourish it.

15 Then shall it be for a man to burn: for he will take thereof, and warm himself; yea, he kindleth it, and baketh bread; yea, ^{ab}he maketh a god, and worshippeth it: he maketh it a graven image, and falleth down thereto.

16 He burneth part thereof in the fire; with part thereof he eateth flesh; he roasteth roast, and is satisfied; yea, he it will be accepted. The removal of guilt paves the way for all blessings. All promises belong to the believer, whose privilege it is to put his heavenly Father in constant remembrance of his necessities. If we have not, it is because we ask not, or because we ask amiss. Equal provision is made for pardon and for sanctification, for guidance and preservation, during our earthly pilgrimage. We are complete in Christ; and we are invited to repair to the fountain of his fulness for everything we need.

Chap. XLIV. 1-20. The prophet here recurs to the subject of fear, adding to the exhortation the glorious promise of spiritual baptism. The baptism of the Holy Ghost is here clearly set forth under the most impressive emblem. The fruits also of that baptism are strikingly delineated: the result will be spiritual resurrection, recovery, restoration, and establishment in the faith. Ver. 5 most beautifully depicts the process of self-dedication. Amid variety of forms, there is perfect unity of principle and purpose. One simply declares that he is the Lord's; another claims for himself a peculiar name; another enrolls himself among the faithful; and another has recourse to a surname; but all give themselves up, soul and body and spirit, to the service of the Saviour. How strikingly the privileges of these devoted sons contrast with the misery of the men who ^{ac}feed on ashes, and who have been turned aside by a deceitful heart! There is a lie in the right hand of all such! They look for good, but none will come; and forsaking God, they forsake their own mercies. Ver. 21-23. In the experience of the faithful in Christ Jesus, it will be found that remembrance of their condition by nature is a principal element. They have a lively recollection of their enmity, depravity, guilt, and danger, and of the boundless mercies by which both their state and their character were changed. The apostle to the Gentiles furnishes a striking illustration: he never forgot that he had been the chief of sinners; and he ceased warmeth himself, and saith, Aha, I am warm, I have seen the fire:

17 And the residue thereof he maketh a god, even his graven image: he falleth down unto it, and worshippeth it, and prayeth unto it, and saith, Deliver me; for thou art my god.

18 They have not known nor understood: for he hath shut their eyes, that they cannot see; and their hearts, that they cannot understand.

19 And none considereth in his heart, neither is there knowledge nor understanding to say, I have burnt part of it in the fire; yea, also I have baked bread upon the coals thereof; I have roasted flesh, and eaten it: and shall I make the residue thereof an abomination? shall I fall down to the stock of a tree?

20 He feedeth on ashes: a deceived heart hath turned him aside, that he cannot deliver his soul, nor say, Is there not a lie in my right hand?

21 Remember these, O Jacob and Israel; for thou art my servant: I have formed thee; thou art my servant: O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of me.

22 I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins: return unto me; for I have redeemed thee.

23 Sing, O ye heavens; for the LORD hath done it: shout, ye lower parts of the earth; break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: for the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel.

24 Thus saith the LORD, thy Redeemer, and he that formed thee from the womb, I am the LORD that maketh all things; that stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself;

25 That frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad; that turneth wise men backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish;

26 That confirmeth the word of his servant, and performeth the counsel of his messengers; that saith to Jerusalem,

Thou shalt be inhabited; and to the cities of Judah, Ye shall be built, and I will raise up the decayed places thereof:

27 That saith to the deep, Be dry; and I will dry up thy rivers:

28 That saith of Cyrus, He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure; even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built; and to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid.

CHAPTER XLV.

1 God, for his church's sake, calleth Cyrus. 2 He challenges obedience. 30 He convinceth the idols of vanity.

THUS saith the LORD to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut;

2 I will go before thee, and make the crooked places straight: I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron:

3 And I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places, that thou mayest know that I the LORD, which call thee by thy name, am the God of Israel.

4 For Jacob my servant's sake, and Israel mine elect, I have even called thee by thy name: I have surnamed thee, though thou hast not known me.

5 I am the LORD, and there is none else, there is no God besides me: I girded thee, though thou hast not known me;

6 That they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none besides me: I am the LORD, and there is none else.

7 I form the light, and create darkness; I make peace, and create evil. I the LORD do all these things.

8 Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness; let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together: I the LORD have created it.

9 Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker! Let the potsherd strive with the potsherd of the earth. Shall the clay not to celebrate the rich grace which had abounded towards him, setting himself forth as an encouragement to all that should follow, as the grace that sufficed for him could not fail to meet the necessities of all. The case of Cyrus is one of the most remarkable in history. Both his name and his mission were predicted long before his birth. If one thing more than another can demonstrate the sovereignty of God in the matter of salvation, and the relation of providence to grace, it is the history of this highly-favoured man. It is no marvel that he should have been so deeply impressed with the prophecy, when it was presented to him. Nothing was so fitted to win him from idolatry, and to elevate his spirit to the level of his duty. That his name and his work should thus have been set forth, might well stir up his spirit within him, and render him forward to accomplish his wonderful mission. When Dr Beattie, desirous to bring home the great fact of the relation of cause and effect to the understanding of his infant son, sowed his name with seed, he adopted a method which could not fail to astonish the child, and create a permanent impression on his mind. As the boy saw his name growing out of the earth, filled with wonder, he ran to apprise his father, and to inquire into the reason of a thing so wonderful. The end was accomplished, and the fact laid the foundation of a most important lesson.

Chap. XLV. 1-19. When the covenant of grace is touched upon, as in ver. 17, its ever-during character is generally set forth. While the purpose is traced up to a past eternity, its consequences are represented as extending through the eternity to come. All the saints are saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation, and they shall never be ashamed nor confounded world without end. All such have the privilege in time of continually approaching their God and Father, who never says to any of them, "Seek ye my face in vain." Whoso seeketh in a right spirit will assuredly find. In this search disappointment is impossible. There may for a season be seeming delay, but even that is the result of wisdom which selects both the best time and the most appropriate method of fulfilling the purposes of grace. Ver. 20-25. The great problem which the Gospel solved was, how Jehovah might at once be "a just God and a Saviour." By means of say to him that fashioneth it, What maketh thou? or thy work, He hath no hands?

10 Woe unto him that saith unto his father, What begettest thou? or to the woman, What hast thou brought forth?

11 Thus saith the LORD, "the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker, "Ask me of things to come concerning my sons; and concerning the work of my hands command ye me.

12 I have "made the earth, and created man upon it: I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and "all their host have I commanded.

13 I have "raised him up "in righteousness, and I will "direct all his ways: "he shall build my city, and he shall "let go my captives, not for "price nor reward, saith the LORD of hosts.

14 Thus saith the LORD, The labour of Egypt, and merchandise of Ethiopia, and of "the Sabceans, men of stature, shall come over unto thee, and they shall be thine: they shall come after thee; in chains they shall come over, and they shall fall down unto thee; they shall make supplication unto thee, saying, Surely God is in thee, "and there is none else; there is no God.

15 Verily thou art "a God that hidest thyself, "O God of Israel, the Saviour.

16 They shall be ashamed, and also confounded, all of them: they shall go to confusion together that are makers of idols.

17 But "Israel shall be saved in the LORD with "an everlasting salvation: "ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end.

18 For thus saith the LORD "that created the heavens, God himself that formed the earth, and made it; he hath established it, "he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: "I am the LORD, and there is none else.

19 I have not "spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth: I said not unto the seed of Jacob, "Seek ye me in vain: I the LORD "speak righteousness, I declare things that are right.

20 ¶ Assemble yourselves and come; draw near together, ye that are escaped of the nations: they have no knowledge that set up the wood of their graven image, and pray unto a god that cannot save.

25 In the LORD shall all "the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory.

CHAPTER XLVI.

1 The idols of Babylon could not save themselves. 3 God saveth his people to the end. 5 Idols are not comparable with God.

"BEL boweth down, Nebo stoopeth; their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle: your carriages were heavy loaden; they are a burden to the weary beast.

2 They stoop; they bow down together; they could not deliver the burden, but "themselves are gone into captivity.

3 ¶ "Hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, and all the remnant of the house of Israel, which are borne by me from the belly, which are carried from the womb:

4 And "even to your old age I am he; and even to hoar hairs will I carry you: I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver you.

5 ¶ "To "whom will ye liken me, and make me equal, and compare me, that we may be like?

6 They lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, and hire a goldsmith; and he maketh it a god: "they fall down, yea, they worship.

7 They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set him in his place, and he standeth; from his place shall he not remove: yea, "one shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer, nor save him out of his trouble.

8 Remember this, and shew yourselves the atoning sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ alone has this been accomplished. Although transgressors of the law which is holy, just, and good, have been forgiven, and may be forgiven to any extent, there has been no compromise of the legislative honours of the Creator. Jesus magnified the law and made it honourable, so that it is now consistent with justice to exercise mercy even to the chief of sinners. On this basis rest these glorious words—"Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God, and there is none else." There is but one God and one Mediator through whom all are invited to return and come to the Father, with the assurance of free, full, and everlasting pardon for all their offences. Where the soul is taught by the Spirit of God, the results will always be humility, combined with a sense of entire dependence upon God. All notions of self-righteousness are thus excluded, and every recipient of the Divine favour is prepared to add, "In the Lord have I righteousness and strength: even to him shall men come."

Chap. XLVI. 1-13. The Scripture doctrine of the perseverance of the saints is full of consolation. It were sad, indeed, if any peradventure attached to the possession of the Divine favour; but happily the gifts and callings of God are without repentance. To every pilgrim his language is, "Even to your old age I am he; and even to hoar hairs I will carry you: I have made and I will bear, even I will carry, and will deliver you." What promises are these! Truly may they be called "precious!" Old age, even to the people of God, is often attended with loss of strength, of property, of friends, men; bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors.

9 Remember the former things of old: for ^aI am God, and there is none else; I am God, ^band there is none like me;

10 Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying ^c'My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure:

11 Calling ^aa ravenous bird from the east, ^bthe man ^cthat executeth my counsel from a far country: yea, ^dI have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it.

12 ¶ Hearken unto me, ye stout-hearted, ^athat are far from righteousness:

13 I bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry: and I will place ^asalvation in Zion for Israel my glory.

CHAPTER XLVII.

1 God's judgments upon Babylon and Chaldaea, 6 for their unmercifulness, 7 and pride, shall be irresistible.

COME down, and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon; sit on the ground: there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans; for ^athou shalt no more be called tender and delicate.

2 Take the millstones, and grind meal: uncover thy locks, make bare the leg, uncover the thigh, pass over the rivers.

3 Thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be seen: ^aI will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man.

4 As for ^aour Redeemer, the LORD of hosts ^bis his name, the Holy One of Israel.

5 Sit thou silent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called The lady of kingdoms.

6 I was ^awroth with my people; ^bI have polluted mine inheritance, and given them into thine hand: ^c'thou didst shew them no mercy; upon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke.

7 And thou saidst, I shall be a lady for ever: so that thou didst not lay these things to thy heart, neither didst remember the latter end of it.

8 Therefore hear now this, thou that art and of all things; but even then, the Father of mercies will never leave nor forsake, but be a comforter to the last, and a present help in every time of trouble. The stout heart is the very opposite of the broken heart, and at the furthest distance from the "repentance that needeth not to be repented of;" and the faith which delivers from condemnation. To all such, wherever the Gospel is preached, God brings near his righteousness, which is unto all, and upon all them that believe. Wherever men receive the record which God hath given of his Son, whatever their previous distance, salvation tarries not, they are received graciously, and loved freely. Salvation is placed in Zion for Israel his glory; that is, the doctrines of the Gospel are there, for to her is committed the oracles of God and the ordinances of grace. She is, therefore, the teacher of a lost world, for whose benefit she has received the precious treasure, and woe unto her if she do not impart it!

Chap. XLVII. 1-15. The notion of Redemption incessantly recurs throughout the latter half of this wonderful prophecy. The Church never forgets for a moment that given to pleasures, that dwellest carelessly; that sayest in thine heart, ^aI am, and none else besides me; ^bI shall not sit as a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children:

9 But ^athese two things shall come to thee in a moment in one day, the loss of children, and widowhood: they shall come upon thee in their perfection ^bfor the multitude of thy sorceries, and for the great abundance of thine enchantments.

10 For thou hast trusted in thy wickedness: thou hast said, None seeth me. ^aThy wisdom and thy knowledge, it hath ^bperverted thee; and thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else besides me.

12 ¶ Stand now with thine enchantments, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth; if so be thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail.

13 Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. ^aLet now the ^bastrologers, the stargazers, ^cthe monthly prognosticators, stand up and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee.

14 Behold, ^athey shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver ^bthemselves from the power of the flame: there shall not be a coal to warm at, nor fire to sit before it.

15 Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured, even thy merchants, from thy youth: they shall wander every one to his quarter; none shall save thee.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

1 God, to convince the people of their obstinacy, revealeth his prophecies. 12 He exhorteth them to obedience.

HEAR ye this, O house of Jacob, ^awhich are called by the name of Israel, and are ^bcome forth out of the waters of Judah; ^cwhich swear by the name of the

she was in bondage, and that the arm of the Most High broke her fetters, and introduced her to glorious liberty. Her watchword was, "As for our Redeemer, the Lord of hosts is his name, the Holy One of Israel." In every age man has been curious to pry into the secrets of the future, and hence the encouragement which has been given to fortune-telling, divination, sorcery, astrology, and other impious methods of delusion. These are things with which Christian men can have nothing to do: secret things belong to God, but the things which are revealed to believers and their children. To the law and to the testimony, is the motto of the saints. Whatsoever detracts from these, or adds to them, is to be rejected. The Divine book suffices for every purpose, thoroughly furnishing the man of God for every good work.

Chap. XLVIII. 1-8. We are everywhere reminded that God requireth truth in the inward parts. Profession, without reality, is of no value; nay, it is offensive. It is to no purpose that the Church is called by the name of Israel, and swears by the name of the Lord, making mention of her God, if it be not done "in truth

4 Because ^hI knew that thou art ⁱobstinate, ^jand thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy brow brass;

5 I have ^keven from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I shewed it thee: lest thou shouldest say, ^lMine idol hath done them; and my graven image, and my molten image, hath commanded them.

6 Thou hast heard, see all this; and will not ye declare it? I have shewed thee new things from this time, even hidden things, and thou didst not know them.

7 They are created now, and not from the beginning; even before the day when thou heardest them not; lest thou shouldest say, Behold, I knew them.

8 Yea, thou heardest not; yea, thou knewest not; yea, from that time ^mthine ear was not opened: for I knew that thou wouldest deal very treacherously, and wast called ⁿa transgressor from the womb.

9 ^oFor my name's sake will I ^pdefer mine anger, and for my praise will I refrain for thee, that I cut thee not off.

10 Behold, ^qI have refined thee, but not ^rwith silver; ^sI have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction.

11 For mine own sake, ^teven for mine own sake, will I do it: for how should my name be polluted? and ^uI will not give my glory unto another.

12 ^vHearken unto me, O Jacob and Israel, my called; ^wI am he: I am the first, I also ^xam the last.

13 Mine ^yhand also hath laid the foundation of the earth, ^zand ^{aa}my right hand hath spanned the heavens: ^{ab}when I call unto them, they stand up together.

CHAPTER XLIX.

1 Christ being sent to the Jews, complaineth of them. 5 He is sent to the Gentiles. 13 God's love to the church.

LISTEN, O isles, unto me; and hear-ken, ye people, from far; ¹The LORD hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name.

2 And ²he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword; in the shadow of his hand hath he hid me, and made me a polished shaft; in his quiver hath he hid me;

and righteousness." She may call herself the "holy city," and profess to stay herself on the Lord—and it is both her duty and her privilege so to do—but the heart must accompany the language, otherwise the profession becomes sin. The great thing to be aimed at by believers is to harmonise their creed with their conscience, to profess all that they feel, and to feel all that they profess, so that their language may be an index to their heart. It is impossible to make too much of a good conscience. Paul declared that it was his rejoicing "that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with carnal wisdom, but by the grace of God, he had his conversation in the world," Ver. 9-11. These verses are very precious in the estimation of multitudes of God's people, many of whom have been called "in the furnace of affliction." The extent to which such has been the fact is greater than is generally supposed. Pastors of large experience concur in testifying, that unless people are called in early life, they generally go on in the ways of the world till arrested by crosses, disappointments, afflictions, or calamities. In this case as in every other, the calling indicated the election. Whatever occurs in this way is the simple fruit of grace—the Lord does it because it seemeth him good. Ver. 12-22. Wherever God calls men to a particular work, he never fails to qualify them; having brought them into the field, he "makes their way prosperous." God teaches his people, that he may lead them, and his teaching is invariably profitable. It is to little purpose that human instrumentality is put in motion, if unaccompanied by the Divine blessing. Transgression, however for the moment it may minister to pride or passion, is always a losing matter in the end: whereas steadfast obedience, at whatever cost, will be followed by a full reward—by "peace, flowing as a river, and righteousness as the waves of the sea." But wickedness and peace are terms incompatible. God, in mercy, has connected misery with disobedience, and happiness with devotedness.

Chap. XLIX. 1-5. The Saviour's speech, in dealing with the Scribes and Pharisees, was like a sharp sword. His withering exposures and terrible denunciations transfixed their souls like a dart. But notwithstanding he spake as never men spake, the amount of his success as a preacher of the Gospel was not great. His personal ministry served to shew that even perfect truth, spoken by the lips of Him who was love itself, and fortified by

3 And said unto me, ^cThou art my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified.

4 Then I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought, and in vain; yet surely my judgment is with the LORD, and my ¹work with my God.

5 ¶ And now, saith the LORD that formed me from the womb to be his servant, to bring Jacob again to him, ²Though Israel be not gathered, yet shall I be glorious in the eyes of the LORD, and my God shall be my strength.

6 And he said, ³It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant, to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the ⁴preserved of Israel; ⁵I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, ⁶that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth.

7 Thus saith the LORD, ⁸the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One, ⁹to him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers, ¹⁰kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship, because of the LORD that is faithful, and the Holy One of Israel, ¹¹and he shall choose thee.

8 Thus saith the LORD, ¹²In an acceptable time have I heard thee, ¹³and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I will preserve thee, and ¹⁴give thee for a covenant of the people, to ¹⁵establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages:

9 That thou mayest say ¹⁶to the prisoners, Go forth; ¹⁷to them that are in darkness, Shew yourselves: ¹⁸they shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in all ¹⁹high places.

10 They shall not hunger nor thirst; neither shall the heat nor sun smite them: for ²⁰he that hath mercy on them shall lead them, even by the springs of water shall he guide them.

11 And ²¹I will make all my mountains a way, and my highways shall be exalted.

12 Behold, ²²these shall come from far; and, lo, these from the north and from the west; and these from the land of Sinim.

his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted.

14 But Zion said, The LORD hath forsaken me, and my LORD hath forgotten me.

15 Can a woman forget her sucking child, ¹⁶that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.

16 Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me.

17 Thy children shall make haste; ¹⁸thy destroyers, and they that made thee waste, shall go forth of thee.

18 ¶ ¹⁹Lift up thine eyes round about, and behold: all these gather themselves together, and come to thee. ²⁰As I live, saith the LORD, ²¹thou shalt surely clothe thee with them all, as with an ornament, and bind them on thee, as a bride doeth.

19 For thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction, shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants, and ²²they that swallowed thee up shall be far away.

20 The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, ²³The place is too strait for me: give place to me that I may dwell.

21 Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? and who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?

22 Thus saith the LORD God, ²⁴Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people: and they shall bring thy sons in their ²⁵arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders.

miracles the most wonderful, did not suffice for the conversion of men. Nothing so strikingly illustrates the fact that this is brought about neither by might nor by power, but by the Divine Spirit. Were ten thousand Pauls to be raised up in one day, and sent forth to preach salvation, confirming both their message and their mission, at every step, by incontrovertible miracles, without the presence of the Eternal Spirit not a single conversion would result from their mighty ministrations! Many eminent messengers of mercy have laboured hard, apparently to little purpose; and in this respect they resemble their Lord. Such, like him, are apt to say, "I have laboured in vain, and spent my strength for nought and in vain." But it is not so: "their judgment is with the Lord, and their work with their God." If they have not been a saviour of life unto life, they have of death unto death! They have witnessed for their Master; and in the day of reckoning they will be held clear from the blood of men. "Though Israel be not gathered, yet will they be glorious in the eyes of the Lord, and their God will be their strength." Man's concern is with duty; results may be left to the Master. Ver. 6-12. The Lord Jesus is clearly set forth in these precious verses as the Alpha and Omega of the covenant. He is alike commissioned to restore Israel, and to enlighten the Gentiles, and to be God's salvation unto the end of the earth. While the work is prescribed, support and success are solemnly pledged to him. His word will be accompanied with power, and his kingdom established through all lands. Ver. 13-26. The Gospel is essentially a ministration of mercy, and the result of mercy bestowed is peace and comfort, hope and joy. Wherever the Gospel becomes the power of God to salvation, it never fails to work these results. Holiness and happiness are terms inseparably connected. A sense of worthlessness on conviction of sin, especially in the case of grievous backsliding, is often accompanied with such self-abhorrence that the soul has difficulty in believing that it can ²⁶ And I will feed them that oppress thee with their own flesh; and they shall be drunken with their own blood, as with ⁴sweet wine; ²and all flesh shall know that I the LORD am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob.

CHAPTER L.

¹ Christ sheweth the cause of the Jews' dereliction. ¹⁰ An exhortation to trust in God, and not in ourselves.

THUS saith the LORD, Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? or which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you? Behold, ²for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away.

² Wherefore, ³when I came, was there no man? when I called, was there none to answer? ⁴Is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem? or ⁵have I no power to deliver? behold, ⁶at my rebuke ⁷I dry up the sea; I make the rivers a wilderness: ⁸their fish stinketh, because there is no water, and dieth for thirst.

³ I ¹clothe the heavens with blackness, and I make sackcloth their covering.

⁵ ¶ The Lord God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back.

⁶ I ¹gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them ²that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting.

recover the Divine favour. Feeling that it deserves to be for ever cast out from his presence, it has difficulty in believing that he waits to be gracious to a spirit so worthless and so guilty. To meet this case, we have the wonderful assurances set forth in ver. 14-16, which more than suffices to quell the risings of despair.

Chap. L. 1-4. The Saviour again appears here in his glorious character of a preacher, with the tongue of the learned, and endowed with the power of speaking "a word in season to him that is weary." God only can comfort the sorrowful; and this is done by his Spirit, through the instrumentality of his precious promises. No small part of Christian duty consists in comforting the mourner, in strengthening weak hands, and confirming feeble knees. The gift of so doing is a precious one, adding materially to the usefulness, the happiness, and the honour of those who possess it. Ver. 5-9. Express reference is here made to the Saviour's reception among his own people, and the afflictions to which he was subjected towards the close of his public ministration. While men opposed, God helped him, and therefore he was not confounded. Knowing in whom he trusted, he set his face as a flint, assured that he should not be ashamed. This is one of those points in which his people are particularly required to copy his example. Surrounded by ungodly men, they that will be valiant for the truth will not have far to go for enemies; but let them be of good courage, the Master they serve will give them words which their enemies can neither gainsay nor resist. A devout man, happily endowed with a mixture of courage and prudence, and intimately conversant with the Word of God, is a formidable antagonist, who will not fail to come off more than a conqueror against the highest odds. Ver. 10, 11. These remarkable words have frequently been applied to spiritual darkness, to the sovereign withdrawal of the light of God's countenance; but such is not their import. The language refers to providential dispensations. It is no uncommon thing for the people of God to be at their wits' end, from the difficulties which surround them, and the darkness which rests upon their prospects. They are altogether unable to determine the path of duty. So situated, then, they are exhorted to trust in the name of the Lord, and to stay themselves on their God; and in due season the voice of Providence will distinctly say, "This is the way; walk ye in it." The case is impressively exemplified by Paul's shipwreck: the apostle had foretold the calamities which overtook them, telling them plainly, that if they "had hearkened unto him, they would not have gained such harm and loss." Still, there was hope for them; for the angel assured him that there should be no loss of life. He was further apprised that they should be cast upon a certain island, but what, he was not told. When they ascertained by the soundings that they approached the shore, they dropped their anchors, and waited for the day, when the sun arose, and supplied the light necessary to their guidance. The application is obvious.

Chap. LI. 1-6. It is the characteristic of the people of God that they follow after righteousness; and such only, in seeking, will find him. It will exercise a consolatory influence upon the heart ever to remember its original depravity. In proportion as men have correct law shall proceed from me, and ¹I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people.

5 My ¹righteousness is near; ^mmy salvation is gone forth, and ⁿmine arms shall judge the people: ^othe isles shall wait upon me, and on mine arm shall they trust.

6 Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath; for the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner: but ^pmy salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished.

7 ¶ Harken unto me, ^qye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my law; ^rfear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings.

8 For ^sthe moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool: but ^tmy righteousness shall be for ever, and my salvation from generation to generation.

9 ¶ Awake, awake, ^uput on strength, ^vO arm of the LORD; awake, as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Art thou not it that hath cut Rahab, and wounded the dragon?

10 Art thou not it which hath dried the sea, the waters of the great deep; that hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over?

11 Therefore ^wthe redeemed of the LORD shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness and joy; ^xand sorrow and mourning shall flee away.

12 ¶ I, even ^yI, am he that comforteth you: who art thou, that thou shouldest be afraid of a man that shall die, and of ^zthe son of man which shall be made as grass;

13 And ^aforgettest the LORD thy Maker, ^bthat hath stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth; and hast feared continually every day, because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he ^cwere ready to destroy? and ^dwhere is the fury of the oppressor?

views of the depth of their fall, they will prize the mercy and the atoning sacrifice through which they have been delivered. Zion needs comfort, for she has not a little to fill her with sorrow. When she sees how the glorious Gospel of the blessed God has been perverted, how its doctrines have been corrupted, and its ordinances abused, her eye may well affect her heart, and rivers of waters run down her cheeks, while she beholds the wicked trampling in the dust both the Gospel and the Law. Speaking in the large acceptance of the terms, nothing can comfort her that does not remove such cause of sorrow; but that done, she will be filled with joy and gladness, and abounding in thanksgiving and the voice of melody. However distant that day may seem, every hour brings it nearer; his salvation is gone forth; he will judge his people; the isles shall wait upon him, and on his arm they will trust. Ver. 7, 8. It is instructive to observe the uniform discrimination which characterises the writings of Isaiah. Nothing is vague or loose in the statements; every man may know his place, and the class to which he belongs. "Ye who know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my law," is language 18 There is ⁱnone to guide her among all the sons whom she hath brought forth; neither is there any that taketh her by the hand of all the sons that she hath brought up.

19 These ^mtwo things ²are come unto thee; ^jwho shall be sorry for thee? desolation, and ^kdestruction, and the famine, and the sword: ^oby whom shall I comfort thee?

20 Thy ⁿsons have fainted, they lie at the head of all the streets, ^qas a wild bull in a net: they are full of the fury of the LORD, the rebuke of thy God.

21 ¶ Therefore hear now this, thou afflicted, and drunken, but not with wine:

22 Thus saith thy LORD the LORD, and thy God that ^rpleadeth the cause of his people, Behold, ^sI have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, even the dregs of the cup of my fury; thou shalt no more drink it again:

as explicit as anything to be found in the New Testament. These are words which distinctly assume the presence of the teaching of the Holy Spirit, through whom alone men are made to know righteousness, and the law is written in their hearts. These, too, are they who are subjected to the reproach of men, and are consequently in danger of being "afraid of their revilings," which is always a snare to be guarded against. Ver. 9-23. The redeemed of the land will, without fail, in the end be remembered, and brought home to their Father's house. The conversion of the Gentiles, and the restoration of the Jewish people, will be attended with feelings essentially the same; everlasting joy will be upon their heads, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away. If any Christian feels himself wanting in courage, and in danger of being driven from the path of duty by the "fear of man," let him prayerfully ponder these verses, and it will be his own blame if he do not rise above "the fury of the oppressor." When Christians once attain that elevation of faith which enables them to say, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" they are prepared for the battle and sure of the victory.

Chap. LIII. 1-6. The Church is ever prone to slumber, which renders it necessary incessantly to exhort her to awake, and put on her strength. If knowledge be power, how much more is piety! But in Christian language, knowledge and piety are synonymous terms, as the knowledge of Christ is eternal life. When the Church shall have become thoroughly awake, and have seen that the graces of the Spirit are the most beautiful of garments, she will look well to her fellowship, suffering none to come within her fold, who are obviously "uncircumcised and unclean." She will shake herself from the dust; she will loose herself from the bonds of her neck, assert her rights, and remain for ever in the enjoyment of the glorious liberty wherewith her Head and Lord has made her free. The Church, thus emancipated and adorned, will become an object of unspeakable beauty and delight to earth and heaven. Then will the Lord Jesus, in the proper sense, "see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied." Ver. 7-12. This divine portraiture exhibits the light, the purity, and the peace which will characterise the latter ages, and sets forth the estimation in which the servants of the Lord will be held, alike because of their message and their Master. That will be the brightest day the world has seen, when the Lord comes forth to comfort his people, making bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations, through which all "the ends of the earth" will be led to "see his salvation." The light in which men look at the servants, as a rule, may also be taken as an index of the light in which they view the master; they who despise the one, cannot reverence the other. They who bring good tidings and publish peace, saying to Zion, "Thy God reigneth," will be highly "esteemed in love, even for their work's sake," and how much more for the sake of Him who loved them, and gave himself for them! Ver. 13-15. This is a distinct prediction of the Saviour's ministry and sufferings. Notwithstanding the purity of his life, and the prudence of his actions, yet he was despised, insulted, and treated with the utmost cruelty. It nevertheless pleased him, notwithstanding this, to command his apostles, in preaching the Gospel, to begin at Jerusalem. The "fountain opened for sin and uncleanness," sufficed even for them! That sprinkled on the conscience, guilt was removed, peace established, and love shed abroad. To some extent, the closing verse has already been fulfilled. He has already "sprinkled many nations," and even kings and rulers are more or less controlled by his word; but what appears is only the first fruit of the glorious harvest which is still to be reaped. To this end, it becomes the duty of his people, in obedience to his own command, to pray that his kingdom, which is already come, may spread, till the whole earth has been filled with his glory, and his will be done here as it is in heaven.

Chap. LIII. 1-3. This chapter is the most remarkable contained in the Old Testament. The visions of the evangelical prophet have reached a crisis. He beholds the cross with Emmanuel nailed to it, and his blood flowing for the redemption of men. He is endued with a conception the most vivid of the sufferings which paved the way for the crucifixion. He beholds him despised and rejected of men, and with wicked hands crucified and slain. Ver. 4-7. The prophet perceives clearly the vicarious nature of the sufferings endured by Emmanuel. He bore his people's griefs, and carried his people's sorrows; he was wounded for their transgressions, and bruised for their iniquities. He stood forth the representative of all whom the Father hath given him, in his own person, bearing the terrible consequences of their transgressions. This salvation is, from first to last, in all its parts, and all its aspects, the fruit of the Saviour's from him: he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

4 ¶ Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: ^ayet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

5 But ^bhe was ^cwounded for our transgressions, ^dhe was ^ebruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his ^fstripes we are healed.

6 ^hAll we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the LORD hath ⁱlaid on him the iniquity of us all.

7 He was oppressed, and he was afflicted; yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

8 He was taken ^jfrom prison and from judgment: and ^kwho shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was ^lhe stricken.

9 And he ^mmade his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his ⁿdeath; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth.

10 ¶ Yet it pleased the LORD to bruise him: he hath put him to grief: ^owhen thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, ^phe shall see his seed, ^qhe shall prolong his days, and ^rthe pleasure of the LORD shall prosper in his hand.

11 He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: ^sby his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; ^tfor he shall bear their iniquities.

12 Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath ^upoured out his soul unto death: and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.

suffering in the room and stead of the guilty, so that throughout eternity the redeemed of the Lord will ascribe to him exclusively their salvation, acknowledging with grateful joy the obligations under which they have been laid by his sufferings as their substitute. This is the very essence of the Gospel, and the present chapter sets it forth with a fulness, a freeness, and a completeness, not inferior to the exhibitions which are made of it even in the New Testament. Ver. 8-12. The death of the Saviour has met every difficulty in the way of his people. It matters not where they die, or where they are buried—whether they mingle with the dust of the poor, or be embalmed with the noble, he has overcome death, and him that has the power of death; and “with his dead body” in due season they shall live; for the “earth will cast out her dead.” All the points set forth in these wonderful verses were verified to the letter, during the closing scene of our Lord’s career. Nothing was omitted; and not till the “things concerning him had an end,” did he utter the memorable words, “It is finished,” commending his spirit to the hands of his heavenly Father, whose will he had performed in laying down his life for his people’s sake. Here, then, is the ground of hope for the guilty; here is the medium through which all flesh are invited, commanded to approach the mercy-seat, that they may obtain forgiveness of sins, and be justified freely through the grace that is in Christ.

Chap. LIV. 1-12. The Old Testament Church was confined within very limited dimensions; so that any material increase to her numbers would have been attended with serious inconvenience. The conversion of the Gentiles is represented as an addition to her family, requiring that her habitation should be greatly enlarged. Isaiah represents their calling as an adoption of children to the privileges of the Jewish household. The Church is therefore addressed as a matron, whose concern is to promote the welfare of all under her roof. She is counselled to enlarge her habitations on every side, since on every side she is to be multiplied. The Orientals have two sorts of tents, but both are constructed on the same principle. They are sustained by poles, more or fewer, stronger or of the LORD; and great shall be the peace of thy children.

14 In ¹righteousness shalt thou be established: thou shalt be far from oppression; for thou shalt not fear: and from terror; for it shall not come near thee.

15 ¶ Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by me: whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake.

16 Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy.

weaker, according to the size of the tent. If enlarged, the cords must be lengthened, and stronger stakes procured. As the family increases, therefore, the tent is extended. The address of the prophet to the Church is peculiarly cheering. It obviously bears on her past history, full of affliction and humiliation. She is exhorted now not to fear, but to be of good courage, seeing that the days of her mourning are ended. Ver. 13-17. The first of these verses demonstrates the evangelical and spiritual character of the great events to which the prophet points. The children of Zion are to be particularly cared for: they are to be taught at home, and God himself is to be their teacher. The words are precise and comprehensive: not one is to remain ignorant; they are all to be taught of God. Whatever instruments they may employ in this great process, he will himself preside over the whole, and secure complete success. Human power, in divers ways, may increase a congregation; but God alone can increase a Church. These words, therefore, beautifully harmonise with the testimony of apostolic times: "The Lord added to the Church daily such as were saved." The righteousness in which the Church is to be established comprises holiness in the largest acceptation of the term—walking in all the ordinances and commandments of the Lord blameless. The result of this universal equity will be the security of justice; oppression will be known no more, and every man will do by his neighbour as he himself would be done by. The evangelical element of the passage comes out in the last verse—"Their righteousness is of me." The great contest between the Jews and the Gentiles was, and still is, about righteousness. They wanted not for zeal and effort to establish their own righteousness; but in their zealous pursuit of it, they refused to submit to the Chap. LV. 1-5. The prophet here invites both Jews and Gentiles, desirous of eternal life, to come and participate in the blessings of the Gospel, which are exhibited to them under the emblems of temporal things. The term "thirst" is peculiarly expressive; the sensation it implies is one of great uneasiness, meetly representing the painful solicitude of the soul under deep conviction, crying out, "What shall I do to be saved?" The Saviour may have had this in view when he pronounced the blessing on those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness." The grace of the Gospel is clearly indicated in the text of the prophet. The world is here given to understand that, while the blessings are to be had without money, they cannot be had for it. The penitent who brings a price in his hand will meet only with a repulse. The expostulation with men who are wasting life, talents, substance, and everything in pursuit of happiness, is very affecting. The inquiries are much fitted to arrest the progress of self-righteousness, and all endeavours of men to recommend themselves to God. Ver. 6-13. Nothing less will satisfy the prophets and the apostles than immediate repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. With them there are no instructions for a future day; now is the accepted time, and now is the day of salvation! Until men have repented of sin, they will never believe the Gospel; the sense of guilt alone can lead them to cry for pardon. The duty, therefore, of all teachers, whether of the young or of the old, is to ply the conscience with the Divine law, urging on it the claims of justice as a means of leading it to seek mercy. The closing verses are much fitted to encourage preachers and teachers under depressing circumstances ; while the promises of God are sure, his purposes shall stand. No evangelical labour is wholly without effect. The labourer himself may never see it, but it is not the less certain.

Chap. LVI. 1-9. The observance of the ordinances and commandments of God with a single heart, is the best proof of true piety. The business of a Christian is not to originate or frame devices of his own, but, with humble reverence and devout gratitude, to accept of those presented in the Inspired Page. The light in which individuals, families, or nations look on the Lord's Day may be taken as a sure test of their spiritual condition. The sanctifying of the Sabbath here is a term comprehensive of the whole duties of religion and piety, which rise or fall, in popular regard, with the sacred day. The Sabbath was one of the peculiarities of the Jewish religion ; and it is a most important institution, as that on which all the rest, in a measure, depend. It was a standing memorial, a sign between them and the God of Abraham. It occurred frequently, reminding them of God, and breaking in upon their worldly pursuits. It kept up a constant sense of religion, and thus furthered the interests of personal piety. It deserves particular notice, that the prophet does not speak of sacrifice ; he pronounces no blessing on those that burnt incense, or conformed to the peculiar rites of Moses. These rites were all to pass away ; but the spirit of the system of which they were part would survive, and be embodied in Christianity. Moreover, those who observed the Sabbath in a right spirit were in no danger of forgetting the institution of sacrifice ; just as those whose hearts are filled with the love of the Saviour will be forward to keep his commandments. The heart right, there is no fear of external observance. Ver. 10-12. The language here is figurative. The people are likened to a flock of sheep ; their rulers, both religious and civil, to shepherds, with their dogs set to watch the flock ; and their enemies, intent on their destruction, who resemble wild beasts, intent on devouring them. The warning is addressed to all spiritual watchmen, to guard against slumber and unfaithfulness. The Lord himself, the Shepherd and Bishop of souls, who never "slumbers or sleeps, is to be the model for his ministers.

Chap. LVII. 1-6. The righteous are removed sometimes in mercy, that they may escape approaching calamities. The expression, "He shall enter into peace," strikingly accords with the New Testament declaration, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord : yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labours." The idea of rest, therefore, is a principal element of our conception of heavenly felicity ; toil and trouble, care and sorrow, are here the lot of men, because of sin. Ver. 6 assumes a remarkable fact, to which testimony is amply borne by heathen literature. The worship of road stones extensively obtained among the ancients. One of the most eminent of the early converts to Christianity has left upon record his own practice ; he says, "When I have met a smooth road stone smeared with oil, supposing spiritual power to be connected with it, I worshipped it, and requested blessings from it." Another eminent ancient Greek, speaking of the habits of his countrymen, says, "Passing by the anointed stones in the streets, he takes out his phial of oil, and pours it on them ; and, having fallen on his knees and made his adorations, he departs." The practice obtains in the East to the present under every green tree, 'alaying the children in the valleys under the cliffs of the rocks?

6 Among ^{the} smooth stones of the stream ^{is} thy portion; they, they ^{are} thy lot: even ^{to} them hast thou poured a drink-offering, thou hast offered a meat-offering. ^{Should} I receive comfort in these?

7 Upon a lofty and high mountain hast thou set thy bed: even thither wentest thou up to offer sacrifice.

8 Behind the doors also and the posts hast thou set up thy remembrance; for thou hast discovered thyself to another than me, and art gone up: thou hast enlarged thy bed, and ^{made} thee a covenant with them; thou lovedst their bed ^{where} thou sawest it.

CHAPTER LVIII.

1 Hypocrisy is to be reproved. 8 The promises due to godliness, 18 and to the keeping of the sabbath.

CRY ^{aloud}, spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.

2 Yet they seek me daily, and delight to know my ways, as a nation that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God: ^{they} ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God.

3 Wherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not? wherefore have we ^{afflicted} our soul, and thou takest no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure, and exact all your ^{labours}.

4 Behold, ye fast for strife and debate, and to smite with the fist of wickedness: ye ^{shall} not fast as ye do this day, ^{to} make your voice to be heard on high.

5 Is it such a fast that I have chosen? ^{a day} for a man to afflict his soul? ^{is it} to bow down his head as a bulrush, and hour. Roberts cites divers examples of it. Ver. 18-21. The reference here is, doubtless, to the return of the remnant of the Jews from Babylon. Dr Wolff, in one of his lectures, states that, on entering Jerusalem from the west, the road, for a considerable distance, was so full of stones that it was impracticable to ride, so that parties were compelled to dismount. When the Pacha approached Jerusalem, a number of labourers were sent before him to remove the stones out of the way—a fact which curiously illustrates the language of the prophets. On a placard or standard was written the following words:—"The Pacha is coming! The Pacha is coming! The Pacha is coming! Cast up the way! Remove the stones!" The passage is fraught with instruction to all Christians who are labouring for the conversion of the heathen, whether at home or abroad. Every stumblingblock, to the utmost extent practicable, ought to be removed. Until this be done, the work must advance but slowly. There are no obstacles comparable to those presented by inconsistency among believers. They ought everywhere to constitute epistles of Christ, so that the teacher or the preacher has only to point to them for a development of his principles.

Chap. LVIII. 1-12. The ancient Church illustrated the evils of hypocrisy more amply and more frequently than the excellences of piety. The portraiture here presented is very affecting. While steeped in evil practices, they zealously occupied themselves with the observances of religion. They appear to have attempted a compromise between their consciences and their ritual observances; it was a sort of commutation of secret injustice, and an easy means of keeping their bosoms quiet. It may well be supposed that the snare into which the mass of the Jews so uniformly fell, has proved fatal to multitudes of Christians. Formality and hypocrisy are plants indigenous to the human heart. Even where piety, true and fervent, abounds, false professors will find a place—remaining satisfied with the name of living, while they are dead in trespasses and in sins. No two things could present a more striking contrast than the spirit of the Jews did to their observances. Looked at from a distance, they would seem deeply imbued with the spirit of devotion; more closely examined, their insincerity, selfishness, and sensuality immediately appeared. While they fasted, they contended with each other, inflicting cruelty on the weak, and perpetrating injustice on every side. Ver. 13, 14. Here again the prophet urges on the people the observance of the Sabbath, which shews the greatness to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the LORD?

6 Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke?

7 Is it not ^oto deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh?

8 ¶ Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee: the glory of the LORD shall ^{be} thy rere-ward.

9 Then shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am. If thou take away from the midst of thee ^mthe yoke, the putting forth of the finger, and ^sspeaking vanity;

10 And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noon-day:

11 And the LORD shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in ^ddrought, and ^pmake fat thy bones: and thou shalt ^{be} like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters ^{fail} not.

12 And they that shall be of thee shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in.

13 ¶ If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the LORD, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words:

14 Then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and

CHAPTER LIX.

1 The calamities of the Jews are owing to their sins. 16 Salvation is only of God. 20 The covenant of the Redeemer.

BEHOLD, ^tthe LORD's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither ^bhis ear heavy, that it cannot hear:

2 But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have ^hhid his face from you, that he will not hear.

3 For your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness.

4 None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity.

5 They hatch ^ccockatrice' eggs, and weave the spider's web: he that eateth of their eggs dieth, and that which is ^ccrushed breaketh out into a viper.

6 Their webs shall not become garments, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: ^ctheir works are works of iniquity, and the act of violence is in their hands.

7 Their feet run to evil, ^dand they make haste to shed innocent blood: ^ctheir thoughts are thoughts of iniquity; wasting and ^ddestruction are in their paths.

8 The way of peace they know not; and there is no ^jjudgment in their goings: they have made them ^ccrooked paths; ^wwhosoever goeth therein shall not know peace.

9 ¶ Therefore is judgment far from us, neither doth justice overtake us: we wait for light, but behold obscurity; for brightness, but we walk in darkness.

10 We grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if we had no eyes: we stumble at noon-day as in the night; we are ⁱin desolate places as dead men.

11 We roar all like bears, and mourn of the importance which he attached to it. Nowhere is there a more striking delineation of the state of mind which ought to characterise its observance. If Christians desire to know the frame which ought to be cultivated, they have only to consult these verses; and there is but too much reason to fear that the numbers even of the faithful who will bear the application form but a small minority. The tone of mind here depicted is one of the highest order. It implies piety, not only sincere, but strong, and ardent in the highest degree. When the Sabbath shall thus come to be observed generally, it will be a token that the glory of the latter day is at hand; or, rather, indeed, that it has already appeared. It implies religion of the most healthful and vigorous character, and an approach to that of the spirits of the just made perfect.

Chap. LIX. 1-15. The subject of the preceding chapter is here continued, with a reply to the hypocrites, who complained that the Lord had not listened to their prayers, and had set light by their fastings. It would seem as if the Jews now questioned the power of the Lord, since he did not deliver them as aforetime. The cause was clear; they were insincere both in their prayers and their fastings, which had become transgression, rising like a cloud between them and their God, and cutting off intercourse. If anything can awaken Christians to the dangers of hypocrisy, oppression, deceit, and injustice, under the mask of piety, it is the picture here presented. Sincerity and integrity had ceased to be virtues, prized and cultivated; the few who remained faithful were deemed fools, and became objects of contempt or persecution. Ver. 16-19. Here the adage that "man's extremity was God's opportunity" was realised. When the faithful had failed among the sons of men, from a regard to his promise to Abraham, he still remembered mercy, mingling it with judgment. There is, indeed, some difficulty as to the precise import of the language; but it unquestionably has regard to the application of the blessings of redemption to a fallen world, and it will have its accomplishment when the power shall have gone forth to quicken the whole human race, unstopping their ears, and disposing them to listen to the voice of salvation. Ver. 20, 21. These words clearly shew that the entire passage relates to the Cross. They can signify nothing else than the appearance of the Son of God in human nature. But while the Redeemer is pointed to, the Eternal Spirit, which brought him again from the dead.

is also acknowledged. It was his high office to quicken dead souls, to reveal to them their misery, and conduct them to the rock and refuge, the Lord Jesus, with his finished righteousness. The prominence here given, therefore, to the work of the Spirit deserves the special notice of the Christian Church. She never can be too deeply penetrated by the fact, that she is the temple of the Spirit, strong only in his strength, wise in his wisdom, holy in his holiness.

Chap. LX. 1-4. The light here referred to is the Lord Jesus, with his glorious Gospel, which, in after times, was to be propagated. "The day-spring from on high," an expression used synonymously with the Sun of Righteousness, was to arise when the Lord himself appeared in human nature. It was for the Church, as a spiritual mirror, to reflect that glorious light on the benighted nations of the earth. It is not improbable that the glory of the Lord points to the symbol of the Divine Majesty with which the camp of Israel was favoured, denoting the Divine presence for the guidance, comfort, and protection of his people. The image of the rising sun is the most magnificent the universe can supply; yet even that but imperfectly represents the LORD, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel.

THE ^aSpirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the LORD hath ^aanointed me ^cto preach good tidings unto the meek: he hath sent me ^dto bind up the broken-hearted, ^eto proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound;

6 But ye shall be named the Priests of the LORD: ^amen shall call you the Ministers of our God: ^bye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves.

7 For ^ayour shame ye shall have double, subject. The whole earth, and every man in it, was dead in sin, and buried in darkness, but the voice of the Gospel to every man of all its millions is, "Awake, thou that sleepest, arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Christ is, therefore, the light of the world, and in him is no darkness at all. It is his glory that he is the light of the Gentiles, whom he has received as his inheritance that he may work, and sanctify, and justify them, and present them faultless before the throne of his Father. Ver. 6-22. The results of the Divine illumination to be imparted by the Lord Jesus, are to be the awakening of the world, the conversion of the Gentiles, and the consecration of all their wealth and power to his service. The isles were to wait for him, and be obedient to his will. Service and salvation were to be connected, while rebellion against him would be followed by destruction. The nation and kingdom that will refuse submission must perish; it is, therefore, the duty of all that hear his word to submit to his authority, which will bring along with it pardon, peace, adoption, sanctification, and glory.

Chap. LXI. 1-3. This Scripture, in one point, is the most remarkable to be found in the Old Testament, from the fact that the Lord Jesus, to whom it refers, expounded it with his own lips on his first great public appearance, when he said, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears." The Saviour, notwithstanding the perfect purity of his nature, required for his work a special baptism of the Holy Spirit. No words in the Old Testament so beautifully delineate the character of his merciful mission. He was specially authorised to preach glad tidings of forgiveness to all who repented of their sins; to bind up the hearts of such with the balm of Gospel consolation; to proclaim to the slaves of sin a glorious emancipation, and to introduce them to the liberty of the sons of God. "The acceptable year" may probably allude to the year of Jubilee, when the trumpet of freedom was sounded throughout the nation. What that year was to the Jews, the era of the Lord's appearance was to the human race, and the sound of the Jubilee

Trumpet was a meet emblem of the Gospel which was to be proclaimed to the ends of the world, and to every creature. The consolatory character of the Gospel is here remarkably set forth. The mourners in Zion, those who hated sin and loved holiness, and were grieved with the wicked, were to be comforted, their hands strengthened, and their hearts encouraged. Nothing can exceed the tenderness and sweetness of the Saviour's addresses to the "broken-hearted." For all such the oil of joy was promised, and the garment of praise removed the spirit of heaviness. Ver. 4-11. The events referred to in these verses appear to be subsequent to those mentioned in the foregoing. The former clearly point to the conversion of the world, and the latter to that of Israel. The call, conversion, and restoration of the Jews, will be the most extraordinary event that has occurred in our world's history since the appearance of the Lord Jesus Christ. The scattered, oppressed, and degraded condition in which they are now placed, will present an inconceivable contrast to the condition which ultimately awaits them. The Jews possess, in proportion to their numbers, a wealth incomparably greater than that of any other people. At this moment, there is scarcely a crown in Europe that is not in debt to them, and which, by recalling their money, they might not shake or trouble. When the glorious day to which the prophet looks forward shall have arrived, all these nations will realise their obligations to the seed of Abraham for something infinitely higher than money, and they will vie with each other in good wishes and good offices in furtherance of their return to their own land. With respect to the building of the old waste places, a considerable diversity of opinion has prevailed. On the one hand, the words are taken literally, as implying the restoration of Israel to the promised land, and it is difficult to see how they can be explained in any other sense. The ruins and desolations which now mark Judea, cannot, without the utmost violence, be applied to the heathen world; but, taken in their literal meaning, they have a most emphatic significance. The entire structure of the language, as well as the spirit which pervades the and for confusion they shall rejoice in their portion: therefore in their land they shall possess the double; ^oeverlasting joy shall be unto them.

8 For ²I the LORD love judgment, I hate robbery for burnt-offering; and I will direct their work in truth, and ^qI will make an everlasting covenant with them.

9 And ^rtheir seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people: all that see them shall acknowledge them, that ^sthey are the seed which the LORD hath blessed.

10 I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom ¹decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels.

11 For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; ^tso the Lord God will cause righteousness and ^upraise to spring forth before all the nations.

CHAPTER LXIII.

1 Christ sheweth who he is, what his victory is over his enemies, 7 and his mercy towards his church.

WHO is this that cometh ^afrom Edom, with dyed garments from ^bBozrah?

passage, seems to require a literal fulfilment. That the Gospel will produce effects the most stupendous on the heathen world, building up its waste places, and raising former desolations by bringing it back to something even purer and higher than the primitive piety of patriarchal times, is true; but such a result, so far from presenting the essential embodiment of these Scriptures, seems only a concomitant of the introduction of the Christian system into heathen lands. The Jewish Church, on her restoration to the favour she had so long forfeited, is represented in ver. 10 as filled with unutterable joy. The language is beautifully harmonious with the song of Mary, and also the speech of Zacharias—"I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, and covered me with the robe of righteousness." The closing verse clearly connects the whole with the universal diffusion of the Gospel, when "the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all nations."

Chap. LXII. 1-9. There is difficulty in determining who is the speaker in these words. It has been thought it is the prophet himself expressing his determination to preach the glad tidings of salvation. He had already spoken to the Jews concerning their deliverance out of Babylon, and their restoration. Some have thought that it is Jehovah himself declaring his purposes relative to the events predicted in the foregoing chapter. Others have considered that it was the language of a prophetic choir speaking in the name of the Church, and expressing the duty of continual intercession for the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom. Others have been led to suppose that it is the Messiah himself, who had already been personally introduced in the beginning of the last chapter. The Lord Jesus in this view declares that he would not cease, either personally or by his ministers, continually to preach and teach his glorious Gospel, until the holiness of the Church, and the salvation to be found in her, should be made manifest to the world, so that she should resemble a bright light shining in darkness. This last seems the true import of the language. Verse second and the three that follow are considered to be the language of the prophet, since the Church is addressed in the second person, while in the former verse she is spoken of in the third. Ver. 10-12. The pastors and teachers of the Church are here admonished to remove all obstacles that might impede the conversion of the Gentiles and their introduction into the Church. The Lord Jesus is about to receive his full recompense for his sufferings and death on behalf of a lost world, and perform that great work which was still before him. The language may refer to the restoration of the Jews to their own land—a splendid part of a great whole; and, without doubt, it points to the general prevalence of religion throughout all nations.

Chap. LXIII. 1-6. The answer to the interrogatory is unquestionably by the Messiah. The passage itself has been very extensively misunderstood. It is repre-this that is ¹glorious in his apparel, ²travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save.

2 Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-fat?

3 I have ⁴trodden the wine-press alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.

4 For ⁵the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come.

5 And I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore ⁶mine own arm brought salvation unto me; and my fury, it upheld me.

6 And I will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth.

7 ⁷I will mention the loving-kindnesses of the LORD, and the praises of the LORD, according to all that the LORD hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his loving-kindnesses.

8 For he said, ⁸Surely they are my people, children that will not lie: ⁹so he was their Saviour.

9 ⁹I in all their affliction he was afflicted, and ¹⁰the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old.

10 But they rebelled, and ¹¹vexed his Holy Spirit: therefore he was turned to be their enemy, and he fought against them.

11 Then he remembered the days of old, sented as descriptive of Christ in his sufferings; but examination will shew that such is not the fact. He is not here presented as the Lamb slain, but as the mighty conqueror of everything opposed to the establishment of his kingdom. The prophet beholds the Messiah returning in triumph, loved and admired by his people as he travelled in the greatness of his strength, unexhausted by the mighty efforts which he put forth in the battle. In ver. 3, he himself is the speaker; there is difficulty, however, attending the passage. There are predictions which intimate the slaughter of the enemies of God, and his people, still remaining unfulfilled. Whether they are to be taken literally, or spiritually, it is not easy to determine. Ver. 7-14. The joyful Church here celebrates the praises of God, while she calls to mind the mercies of former days. The way to move the affection is, to meditate on the Divine goodness: and the way to humble the heart is to reflect on the unworthy returns which have been made for it. Truth is the prime ingredient of piety. The true children of God "will not lie." Falsehood and salvation are terms utterly incongruous. The Divine compassion comes forth here with great beauty. God the father of his people sympathises with them in all their sufferings, bearing their burdens, and soothing their sorrows. As a shepherd carries the lambs of the flock, and a nurse her children, so the Lord bears up his people in the arms of his omnipotence. Ver. 10 presents a serious fact, touching "the vexing" of the Moses and his people, saying, ¹Where is he that brought them up out of the sea with the ²shepherd of his flock? ³where is he that put his Holy Spirit within him?

12 That led them by the right hand of Moses with his glorious arm, dividing the water before them, ¹³to make himself an everlasting name?

14 As a beast goeth down into the valley, ¹⁵the Spirit of the LORD caused him to rest; so didst thou lead thy people, to make thyself a glorious name.

15 ¹⁶I Look down from heaven, and behold from the habitation of thy holiness and of thy glory: where is thy zeal and thy strength, the ¹⁷sounding of ¹⁸thy bowels and of thy mercies toward me? are they restrained?

16 Doubtless thou art our Father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not: thou, O LORD, art our Father, ¹⁹our Redeemer; thy name is from everlasting.

17 ²⁰O LORD, why hast thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our heart from thy fear? ²¹Return for thy servants' sake, the tribes of thine inheritance.

Holy Spirit. The attribute of holiness is naturally connected with the Spirit of the Lord, seeing that he is the source and the author of it. The chastisement of the rebellion of those in whom he dwelt was, the withdrawal of his presence and protection, and the subjection of them to sufferings which were calculated to produce conviction, and lead them to repentance. Ver. 15-19. A prayer is here offered to the Lord for mercy on his people under their existing calamity and burdens. The intense desire to manifest the glory of the Divine excellence in merciful dispensations towards the subjects of the Divine love are here presented. The whole prayer is supposed to be offered by the Exiles towards the close of their captivity; and the language is such as is proper to their condition. It is therefore supposed, that when Isaiah wrote, the temple was in ruins, and the land overrun by the enemy. The dreadful state of things which he beheld in vision was realised to the very letter.

Chap. LXIV. 1-8. The heavens are considered as a tent outspread, which required to be rent that its inhabitants might rush forth. It is a sublime description of the Divine majesty, which occurs in several places of the Holy Scriptures. There is clearly a reference to the descent of the Lord on Mount Sinai, when he gave the law. The scope of the prayer is, that the Most High would manifest himself on behalf of his people, and against their enemies, as he had done on divers occasions make thy name known to thine adversaries, that the nations may tremble at thy presence!

3 When thou didst terrible things which we looked not for, thou camest down, the mountains flowed down at thy presence.

4 ¶ For since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him.

5 Thou meetest him that rejoiceth and worketh righteousness; those that remember thee in thy ways: behold, thou art wroth; for we have sinned: in those is continuance, and we shall be saved.

6 But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away.

7 And there is none that calleth upon thy name, that stirreth up himself to take hold of thee: for thou hast hid thy face from us, and hast consumed us, because of our iniquities.

8 But now, O LORD, thou art our Father: we are the clay, and thou our potter; and we all are the work of thy hand.

9 ¶ Be not wroth very sore, O LORD, neither remember iniquity for ever: behold, see, we beseech thee, we are all thy people.

10 Thy holy cities are a wilderness, Zion is a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation.

11 Our holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised thee, is burnt up with fire: and all our pleasant things are laid waste.

12 Wilt thou refrain thyself for these things, O LORD? wilt thou hold thy peace, and afflict us very sore?

me, unto a nation that was not called by my name.

2 I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people, which walketh in a way that was not good, after their own thoughts;

3 A people that provoketh me to anger continually to my face; that sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick;

6 Behold, it is written before me; I will not keep silence, but will recompense, even recompense into their bosom,

7 Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together, saith the LORD, which have burnt incense upon the mountains, and blasphemed me upon the hills: therefore will I measure their former work into their bosom.

8 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, As the new wine is found in the cluster, and one saith, Destroy it not; for a blessing is in it: so will I do for my servants' sakes, that I may not destroy them all.

9 And I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains; and mine elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there.

10 And Sharon shall be a fold of flocks, and the valley of Achor a place for the herds to lie down in, for my people that have sought me.

11 ¶ But ye are they that forsake the LORD, that forget my holy mountain, that prepare a table for that troop, and that furnish the drink-offering unto that number.

12 Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and aftertime, making known his mighty power, and confounding the wicked. This prayer was offered up in a frame of mind fitting to the circumstances. Depravity, in the highest degree, is acknowledged; while the righteousness of the Church is considered as so many filthy rags. It is also confessed, that whatever has befallen her is the fruit of her iniquity; and with this is combined the humbling confession, that there was "none that called upon the name of the Lord, and stirred himself up to take hold upon his God." Prayers offered up in such a spirit will, in the end, not fail to obtain an answer. Ver. 9-12. The earnest supplication here presented, is founded not only in the mercy of the Divine character, but in the covenant which had been made with Abraham. The Church, in the depth of her affliction, has nothing to plead beyond the cheering fact, "We are thy people." The language is supposed to be uttered towards the close of the Babylonian captivity; and in that view it is full of pertinence. It strikingly harmonises with the prayer of Daniel, which abounds in confession, while it implores the extension of mercy and the restoration of favour. It is one of the peculiarities of the prophet, that he places himself always in the midst of the scenes he describes, as if he beheld them passing before his own eyes. The spirit here displayed is worthy the attention of individual Christians, as well as of the Church of God generally. There are no circumstances so afflictive that they may not be made the subject of prayer; and there is no extent of backsliding and iniquity so great as to exclude the transgressor from the throne of grace. But in such cases the confession must be sincere, the humiliation complete; and whatever is implored must be sought on the ground of mercy, and through the mediation of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Chap. LXV. 1-7. We have here a defence of the Divine proceedings with respect to Abraham. The Most High declares, that he had called the Gentiles although they had not sought him, and rejected Israel because of their refusal to obey his command. Their rejection was the punishment of their perverseness, and their devotion to idolatry. But while punished, they were not to be destroyed; a remnant would be preserved because of the covenant made with Abraham. Ver. 8-16.

did choose that wherein I delighted not.

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry: behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty: behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed:

14 Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit.

15 And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord God shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name:

16 That he who blesseth himself in the earth, shall bless himself in the God of truth; and he that sweareth in the earth, shall swear by the God of truth; because the former troubles are forgotten, and because they are hid from mine eyes.

17 For, behold, I create new heavens, and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind.

18 But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy.

19 And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people; and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying.

20 There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner, being an hundred years old, shall be accursed.

CHAPTER LXVI.

1 God will be served in humble sincerity. 5 The humble comforted. 15 God's judgments against the wicked.

THUS saith the LORD, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest?

2 For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the LORD: but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word.

3 He that killeth an ox, as if he slew a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb, as if he cut off a dog's neck; he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swine's blood; he that burneth incense, as if he blessed

The image here is taken from the act of gathering grapes when a part of them were in some way damaged or spoiled. In such a case the vine-dresser, of course, threw them away; but in the mass he would find a few that were ripe and good. Just so with Israel; while the bulk were corrupt, there were still many who had not bowed the knee to Baal. This view is in harmony with the doctrine everywhere occurring in Isaiah, and elsewhere in the Scriptures, that the entire nation would not be cut off; a remnant would be preserved, that in them the promises made to Abraham might be fulfilled. Ver. 17-25. Great changes in material things are often employed in Scripture to denote great spiritual changes; in the New Testament the language here employed is also used to denote the future state of the righteous; but whether on earth, after it has been purified, or in another sphere, has been the subject of much discussion. The present language is highly poetical, which renders its material import doubtful. The immediate reference, at any rate, is to Judaea, and the vast changes to be produced on the return of the exiles; it seems, nevertheless, highly probable, that under these figures, there are references to more important changes to be ultimately effected by the Gospel, and brought to a crisis of perfection, beauty, and glory in the latter times. The Millennial happiness of Israel is here shadowed forth under a variety of figures. Hitherto the extent of mortality amongst children has been very great, comprising no small portion of each generation. The import of the expression here seems to be, that there shall be no infant that shall not fill up its days; all will live long, and be blessed with health and vigour to the last. Considerable darkness, however, still rests on the passage, which time alone can fully remove. It is interesting to observe, however, that in early times a notion extensively prevailed that the life of man was to be materially lengthened. The prophet has obviously an eye to the longevity of the patriarchs, with which he represents the times to come as corresponding. There can be no figure in the cheering fact set forth in ver. 24, when the prayers of the people shall be answered speedily and abundantly. Concerning ver. 25, however, it were dangerous to affirm anything positive. The present food of the lion is flesh. For anything that can be proved to the contrary, that noble creature is capable of feeding on grass, and straw, and it is at least within the limits of possibility that he shall do so in those peaceful times, although there is hazard in a positive affirmation. But there is no peradventure as to the great fact that such changes as those of wolves and lions into lambs and doves, will be meet emblems of revolutions wrought in human nature.

Chap. LXVI. 1-4. The tendency of the human heart is to turn everything connected with religious observance into an act of merit. The Jews took great credit to themselves for their strict observance of the laws of Moses, forgetting the worthlessness of actions which did not proceed from proper motives. At this time they were rebuilding the temple with great magnificence, and appear to have congratulated themselves on the piety of their performance. As a means of correction, the prophet gives them to understand that such an edifice had no beauty in the eye of God apart from the spirit of its worshippers, and that, therefore, the man of a pure and a contrite spirit who trembled at the Divine Word, furnished the only approved and appropriate temple. Both this and the preceding chapter clearly point to the calling of the Gentiles, and the establishment of the New Testament Dispensation, with the rejection of impenitent Israel. It is not meant in ver. 3 that the killing of an ox is as sinful as the murder of a man, but that he who performed such an act in the spirit of impious idolatry possessed the same disposition, and would no more find acceptance through the blood of a sacrifice than the blood of a man. The expression strongly intimates the unspeakable importance of motive, which in religion was everything. To offer a dog in sacrifice would have been an abomination in the estimation of the Jew, who looked on the animal as vile. Even the price of such a creature was not admissible to the treasury of the temple. The dog, however, was held in veneration by many of the heathen, and even offered in sacrifice. One of the Roman poets, in a satire, says, "Every city worships the dog, none worship Diana." A great historian also says, "Certain animals the Egyptians greatly venerate, not only when alive, but when they are dead—as rats, mice, and dogs." Another historian states that, "In some instances, when the cat dies, all the inhabitants cut off their eyebrows; when a dog dies, they shave the whole body and the head." No kind of sacrifice, therefore, was regarded by the Jew with more detestation. But to offer the appointed sacrifice in the utter absence of the appropriate spirit, was just as detestable in the sight of God as the offering of these animals would have been. As to "swine's blood," the meaning is this:—the sacrifice of a hog was a peculiarly offensive sight to the Israelites. The sum of the whole of these points is, that the acceptance of worship turns solely on the state of the heart. Ver. 5, 6. There is some difficulty as to the import of these verses. It has been considered an address to the apostles, disciples, and followers of Christ, in reference to the persecutions to which they would be exposed from the Jewish people. This is the more probable, from the fact that the whole chapter refers to the days of the Messiah; and the state of things in ver. 5 entirely agrees with the events which attended the introduction of Christianity. Christians were everywhere persecuted, and the Jews took a prominent part in stirring up the Gentiles. Ver. 7-9. Viewing the opening words of this paragraph as pointing to the speedy diffusion of the Gospel, and the rapid conversion of the world, it is full of import; and the probability is, that the conversion of the Jews will be as sudden as that of the Gentiles, and that within a brief space. Israel, through all the world, will be awakened by the removal of the veil from their eyes, leading them to look at Him whom they have pierced, which will be followed by penitence and prayer. The work, it appears, will come first in the shape of a mighty revival, which will differ from all previous revivals in this, that it will not subside; that which at the outset will appear to be extraordinary, will become the established order of things. The idea of a "nation" being "born at once," is one of peculiar grandeur. The travail will be followed by the birth of millions, and the same power which put the work in motion, will be present to continue it till the purposes of the Most High concerning our race and our world shall have been accomplished. Ver. 10-24. The language of the prophet is here peculiarly soothing: the Lord himself will comfort his afflicted people with all the blandishments and tenderneesses of a loving mother. Touching the matter of "vengeance," the objects of it are the enemies of the Church, probably in every period, but more especially in the latter days, when great conflicts

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JEREMIAH.

Jeremiah prophesied upwards of forty years preceding the Babylonian captivity, and for some time subsequently. A considerable portion of his predictions came to pass in his lifetime, or shortly after his decease. Some of them, however, extend further, and a portion have not yet been fulfilled.

CHAPTER I.

¹ The calling of Jeremiah: 11 his vision: 15 his message against Judah. 17 God promiseth to assist him.

THE ¹words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, ²of the priests that were ³in Anathoth, in the land of Benjamin:

2 To whom ⁴the word of the LORD came ⁵in the days of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign.

3 It came also ⁶in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto the end of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto the carrying away of Jerusalem captive in the fifth month.

4 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, ⁷and I ⁸ordained thee a prophet unto the nations.

6 Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, ⁹I cannot speak; ¹⁰for I am a child.

7 ¶ But the LORD said unto me, Say not, I am a child: ¹¹for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak.

8 Be not afraid of their faces: ¹²for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the LORD.

9 Then the LORD put forth his hand, and touched my mouth: and the LORD said unto me, ¹³Behold, I have put my words in thy mouth.

10 See, ¹⁴I have this day set thee over the nations, and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant.

seem to ensue. The coming of the Lord is referred to in language which implies suddenness, accompanied with astonishment, to destroy the enemies of his people. It has been considered that the phrase, "The slain of the Lord," points to the awful judgments to be inflicted on the adversary referred to in various parts of the Scriptures, and brought to a crisis in the great battle of Armageddon. Much darkness hangs over this, and corresponding passages, which the wisdom of man is incapable of penetrating. To what extent it is to be taken literally, or figuratively, we have no means of determining; but in either case, it is something unparalleled; and all will terminate in the establishment of the kingdom, and the greatness of the kingdom throughout the 12 Then said the LORD unto me, Thou hast well seen: for ³I will hasten my word to perform it.

13 And the word of the LORD came unto me ⁴the second time, saying, What seest thou? And I said, ⁵I see a seething-pot; and the face thereof is ⁶toward the north.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, Out of the north an evil shall ⁷break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land.

15 For, lo, I will call all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the LORD; and they shall come, and they shall set every one his throne at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem, and against all the walls thereof round about, and against all the cities of Judah.

16 And ⁸I will utter my judgments against them touching all their wickedness, ⁹who have forsaken me, ¹⁰and have burnt incense unto other gods, and ¹¹worshipped the works of their own hands.

17 ¶ Thou therefore gird up thy loins, and arise, ¹²and speak unto them all that I command thee: be not dismayed at their faces, lest I ¹³confound thee before them.

18 For, behold, ¹⁴I have made thee this day a defended city, and an iron pillar, and brasen walls against the whole land; against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof, against the priests thereof, and against the people of the land.

19 And they shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee;

Chap. I. 1-19. It was the lot of Jeremiah to prophesy in the reigns of five kings. The period in which he lived involved much trial, and many dangers; but for this he was specially prepared by the Hand which had appointed him. Like Moses, Jeremiah was appalled by the prospect, and required special encouragement to enable him to enter on his office with confidence and hope. The reply was peremptory, but soothing, and he was forthwith clothed with power which set at nought difficulties. None of the prophets were called to work so arduous, and none of them received so explicit and comprehensive

CHAPTER II.

1 God's expostulation with the Jews touching their causeless revolt. 14 They are the causes of their own calamities.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

2 Go and ^acry in the ears of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I remember ¹thee, the kindness of thy youth, the love of thine espousals, when thou wentest after me in the wilderness, in a land that was not sown.

3 Israel was ^bholiness unto the LORD, and the first-fruits of his increase: all that devour him shall offend; evil shall come upon them, saith the LORD.

4 ^cHear ye the word of the LORD, O house of Jacob, and ^dall the families of the house of Israel:

5 Thus saith the LORD, ^eWhat iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone far from me, and have walked after vanity, ^fand are become vain?

6 Neither said they, Where is the LORD that ^gbrought us up out of the land of Egypt, that ^hled us through the wilderness; through a land of deserts, and of pits; through a land of drought, and of the shadow of death; through a land that no man passed through, and where no man dwelt?

7 And ⁱI brought you into a plentiful country, to eat the fruit thereof, and the goodness thereof: but when ye entered, ^jye defiled my land, and made mine heritage an abomination.

8 The priests said not, Where is the LORD? and they that handle the law knew me not: the pastors also transgressed against me, and the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things that do not profit.

9 ^kWherefore ^lI will yet plead with you, saith the LORD, and with your children's children will I plead.

a mission. After this assurance of security and protection, it was no marvel that the prophet went through his work with much boldness, patience, and perseverance. His Divine Master knew what was needed, and provided accordingly. The images of the tree and the pot portended evil to the people. The prophet's very first vision, therefore, was much fitted to bring on him the wrath of the nation. It was a vision of judgment because of sin. The unanimity of the entire city in their opposition to Jeremiah was remarkable, shewing how deeply all classes had become involved in the sin of idolatry. Having first rebelled against the Most High, they now made war against him in the person of his servant, and, if permitted, they would have put a speedy end to his reproof and warning. By this course they but added to their own guilt, and increased the vengeance which was soon to overtake them. It is written, "Reproof is always grievous to him that is out of the way"—a fact which but enhances the danger, since it stands in the way of that repentance which needeth not to be repented of.

Chap. II. 1-8. The first generation of the Jews was the best. Their affections tended to the elevation of their piety; preserved and nourished by miracle, they were filled with gratitude, and fired with love: Israel was holiness to the Lord, the first fruits of his increase.

11 Hath ^aa nation changed their gods, which are yet no gods? but my people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit.

12 Be astonished, O ye heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid, be ye very desolate, saith the LORD.

13 For ^bmy people have committed two evils; they have ^cforsaken me, ^dthe fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, ^ebroken cisterns, that can hold no water.

14 ^fIs Israel a servant? is ^ghe a home-born slave? why is he ^hspoiled?

15 The young lions roared upon him, and ⁱyelled, and ^jthey made his land waste: ^khis cities are burnt without inhabitant.

16 Also the children of ^lNoph and ^mTahapanes ⁿhave broken the crown of thy head.

17 Hast thou not procured this unto thyself, ^oin that thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, ^pwhen he led thee by the way?

18 And now what hast thou to do in the way of Egypt, to drink the waters of Sihor? or what hast thou to do in the way of Assyria, to drink the waters of the river?

19 Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and ^qthy backslidings shall reprove thee: know therefore, and see, that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, ^rand that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord God of hosts.

20 For ^sof old time I have broken thy yoke, and burst thy bands; and thou saidst, I will not ^ttransgress; when upon every high hill, and under every green tree, thou wanderest, playing the harlot.

21 Yet I had planted thee a noble vine,

This is human nature; multitudes who have been humble and devout amid trial, toil, and poverty, have forgotten the Lord upon a change of circumstances. Few have sustained the ordeal of prosperity and elevation without loss of piety; on the other hand, few, very few, have been spiritually endangered by a descent in the social scale. The loss of property has often increased the love of God, by revealing to the soul the emptiness of earth, and the unsatisfactory nature of all its possessions. Of all things, sin is the most indefensible. When the sinner is asked why he hates God, there can be no reply but silence. Every mouth, whether of devils or of men, must be shut, when God arises to plead his own cause. Forgetfulness of God is at the foundation of all backsliding and apostasy. When men forget their mercies, they soon forget the Author of them. Israel supplies a very striking example; they became so dead to their past deliverances, and their present blessings, that the Author of them was remembered no more. As tending to humble their pride, they appear to have hastened to extinguish their recollection. It is to be noticed throughout the whole of the Jewish history, that the nation and their teachers rose or fell together! "The priest said not, Where is the Lord? and they that handled the law knew him not: The pastors also transgressed against him, and the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things that did not profit." All departure begins there, and there, too, must wholly a right seed : how then art thou turned into the degenerate plant of a strange vine unto me ?

22 For though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord God.

23 How canst thou say, I am not polluted, I have not gone after Baalim ? See thy way in the valley, know what thou hast done : thou art a swift dromedary traversing her ways ;

24 A wild ass ^{used to the wilderness,} that snuffeth up the wind ^{at her pleasure :} in her occasion who can ^{turn her away ?} all they that seek her will not weary themselves ; in her month they shall find her.

25 Withhold thy foot from being unshod, and thy throat from thirst ; but thou saidst, There is no hope : no ; ^{for} I have loved strangers, and ^{after} them will I go.

26 As the thief is ashamed when he is found, so is the house of Israel ashamed ; they, their kings, their princes, and their priests, and their prophets, 27 Saying to a stock, Thou art my father ; and to a stone, Thou hast brought me forth : ^{for they have turned} their back unto me, and not their face ; but in the time of their trouble they will say, Arise, and save us.

28 But where are thy gods that thou hast made thee ? let them arise, if they can save thee in the time of thy ^{trouble :} for according to the number of thy cities are thy gods, O Judah.

29 Wherefore will ye plead with me ? ye all have transgressed against me, saith the LORD.

30 In vain have I smitten your children ; they received no correction : ^{my} your own sword hath devoured your prophets, like a destroying lion.

31 O generation, see ye the word of the LORD. Have I been a wilderness unto Israel ? a land of darkness ? Wherefore

CHAPTER III.

1 God's great mercy in Judah's vile whoredom. 12 The promises of the gospel to the penitent.

THEY say, "If a man put away his wife, and she go from him, and become another man's, shall he return unto her again ?" shall not that land be greatly polluted ? but thou hast played the harlot with many lovers ; yet return again to me, saith the LORD.

commence all reformation. The state of the ministry is a sure index of the state of the people. It is, then, not only of the first importance that the whole body of Gospel instructors, whether of the old or the young, should be truly converted men, but that they should continue throughout their whole course of service to walk with God, constantly ascending in the scale of knowledge and piety. This is the greatest blessing that can fall to the lot of any people, and the contrary is the greatest curse. Ver. 9-19. All suffering is the fruit of sin ; and no rod of correction is so terrible as that of a man's own wickedness. When the fear of the Lord is no longer in men, it is a token that their departure is complete. When Adam sinned and fell, he was not suffered to become hardened ; his peace fled ; his confidence was gone ; but his fear remained, and was a source of torment till he was in mercy restored. The man to whom the Lord can say, "My fear is not in thee," is in a most alarming condition. Ver. 20-37. The natural language of the true convert is, "I will not transgress." Regeneration never takes place without originating a hatred of sin, a determination to have no more to do with it. Every soul that is born of God is a "noble vine, wholly a right seed," and so he ought to remain till the day which shall date the close of his earthly service. For a creature who has tasted that the Lord is gracious, to say to a stock, "Thou art my father ;" and to a stone, "Thou hast brought me forth," is the lowest depth even of intellectual prostration. The backslider, when hurried to destruction by his sins, is compelled to look to God at the last with the prayer, "Arise, and save us." This has been done by myriads when it was too late. Happy the man who never had occasion to offer such a prayer ! When a people are once so far gone as to say to the Most High, "We are lords ; we will come no more unto thee," their condition has become utterly desperate. The highest form of iniquity is, to commit sin and then to deny it. "I am innocent, I have not sinned," is language of the most heinous guilt, which will be visited by the most condign punishment. The lesson supplied by the chapter is one eminently fitted to awaken security, and to expose the folly and the peril of false profession.

Chap. III. 1-19. A spirit of adoption is a proof of regeneration. Only the soul that is born of God cries out, "My Father, thou art the guide of my youth." This is the proper frame of mind in every believer. Everything turns on the heart. Any attempt to compromise the matter will but add sin to sin, and aggravate condemnation. There is nothing so reasonable as will he keep it to the end? Behold, ^othou hast spoken and done evil things as thou couldest.

6 ¶ The LORD said also unto me in the days of Josiah the king, Hast thou seen that which ^bbacksliding Israel hath done? ^ashe is gone up upon every high mountain, and under every green tree, and there hath played the harlot.

7 And I said, after she had done all these things, ^rTurn thou unto me: but she returned not. And ^aher treacherous sister Judah saw it.

8 And I saw, when for all the causes whereby backsliding Israel committed adultery, I had put her away, ^aand given her a bill of divorce; yet her treacherous sister Judah feared not, but went and played the harlot also.

9 And it came to pass, through the ^alightness of her whoredom, that ^ashe defiled the land, and committed adultery with stones and with stocks.

10 And yet for all this her treacherous sister Judah ^ahath not turned unto me with her whole heart, but ^afeignedly, saith the LORD.

11 And the LORD said unto me, ^rThe backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah.

12 ¶ Go and proclaim these words toward the north, and say, ^rReturn, thou backsliding Israel, saith the LORD, ^aand I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you: ^bfor I am merciful, saith the LORD, and I will not keep anger for ever.

13 Only ^aacknowledge thine iniquity, that thou hast transgressed against the LORD thy God, and hast scattered thy ways to the strangers under every green tree, and ye have not obeyed my voice, saith the LORD.

14 Turn, O backsliding children, saith the LORD; for I am married unto you: and I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion:

15 And ^aI will give you pastors according to mine heart, ^awhich shall feed you with knowledge and understanding.

16 And it shall come to pass, when ye be multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, saith the LORD, they shall say no more, ^rThe ark of the covenant of 17 At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the LORD; ^aand all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the LORD, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the ^aimagination of their evil heart.

18 In those days ^athe house of Judah shall walk ^rwith the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have ^agiven for an inheritance unto your fathers.

19 But I said, ^rHow shall I put thee among the children, and give thee a ^apleasant land, a ^agoodly heritage of the hosts of nations? and I said, Thou shalt call me, My father; and ^ashalt not turn away ^afrom me.

20 ¶ Surely as a wife treacherously departeth from her ^ahusband, ^aso have ye dealt treacherously with me, O house of Israel, saith the LORD.

21 A voice was heard upon the high places, weeping and supplications of the children of Israel: for they have perverted their way, ^aand they have forgotten the LORD their God.

22 ^rReturn, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings. Behold, we come unto thee; for thou art the LORD our God.

23 Truly ^ain vain is salvation hoped for from the hills, and from the multitude of mountains: truly ^rin the LORD our God is the salvation of Israel.

24 For shame hath devoured the labour of our fathers from our youth; their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters.

25 We lie down in our shame, and our confusion covereth us: ^afor we have sinned against the LORD our God, we and our fathers, from our youth even unto this day, ^aand have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God.

CHAPTER IV.

¹ Israel and Judah are called to repent, with promises and warnings. ⁵ A prediction of the invasion of Judah, for the wickedness of the inhabitants. ¹⁹ The prophet laments the sins and miseries of his people.

If thou ^awilt return, O Israel, saith the LORD, ^rreturn unto me; and if thou penitence; and nothing so fully demonstrates the peculiar hardness of the human heart as refusal to repent and to do works meet for repentance. The parental tenderness of the exhortation is wonderful: "Only acknowledge thy iniquities, that thou hast transgressed against the Lord thy God." The exhortation to return, with the assurance of a gracious reception, is accompanied with a promise of pastors after God's own heart. This is a chief element in the system of the means by which reformation is to be accomplished. Pastors of another stamp had been the main cause of the falling away; and in the nature of things, they could effect no revival. Only penitent believers can preach penitence and faith with success. Ver. 20-25. Next to joy and gladness, the most important sounds that can be heard from the lips of man are weeping and supplication among those who have perverted their way and forgotten their God. Such a display of sorrow will never fail to call forth corresponding compassion. While drowned in tears, they heard a voice, "Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backsliding." The grateful response is immediately made, "Behold, we come unto thee." Such is the working of true grace in the soul. The confession is marked by depth, power, and beauty. The heart, the whole heart, is in it; and it is full of humility. The frame of mind proper to the people of God is one which magnifies the Lord. In its view, the creature is nothing, the Creator is all in all. The result of the universal spread of the Gospel will be that all the nations of the earth will see the salvation of God. The day that shall behold this will be full of glory to the Redeemer. Psalm lxxii. will then, in all its fulness, become a history: "All nations shall be blessed in him; and all nations shall call him blessed."

Chap. IV. 1-13. The Word of God is the only guide wilt ^aput away thine abominations out of my sight, ^bthen shalt thou not remove.

2 And thou ^ashalt swear, The LORD liveth, in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness; ^band the nations shall bless themselves in him, ^cand in him shall they glory.

3 ¶ For thus saith the LORD to the men of Judah and Jerusalem, ^bBreak up your fallow ground, and sow not among thorns.

4 Circumcise yourselves to the LORD, ^band take away the foreskins of your heart, ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem; ^blest my fury come forth like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

5 Declare ye in Judah, and publish in Jerusalem; and say, ^bBlow ye the trumpet in the land: cry, gather together, and say, ^bAssemble yourselves, and let us go into the defended cities.

6 Set up ^bthe standard toward Zion: ^bretire, stay not; ^bfor I will bring evil from the north, and a great ^bdestruction.

7 The ^blion is come up from his thicket, and ^bthe destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; he is gone forth from his place ^bto make thy land desolate; ^band thy cities shall be laid waste, without an inhabitant.

8 For ^bthis gird you with sackcloth, lament and howl: for ^bthe fierce anger of the LORD is not turned back from us.

9 And it shall come to pass at that day, saith the LORD, ^bthat the heart of the king shall perish, and the heart of the princes; and the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall wonder.

10 Then said I, Ah, Lord God! ^bsurely thou hast greatly deceived this people and Jerusalem, saying, ^bYe shall have peace; whereas ^bthe sword reacheth unto the soul.

11 At that time shall it be said to this people and to Jerusalem, A ^bdry wind of the high places in the wilderness toward the daughter of my people, not to fan, nor to cleanse, 12 ^bEven ^ba full wind from those places shall come unto me: now also will I ^bgive sentence against them.

13 Behold, ^bhe shall come up as clouds, and ^bhis chariots shall be as a whirlwind: ^bhis horses are swifter than eagles. ^bWoe unto us! for we are spoiled.

14 O Jerusalem, ^bwash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved: ^bhow long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee?

15 For ^ba voice declareth from Dan, and publisheth affliction from mount Ephraim.

16 Make ^bye mention to the nations: behold, publish against Jerusalem, ^bthat watchers come ^bfrom a far country, ^band give out their voice against the cities of Judah.

17 As keepers of a field, are they against her round about; ^bbecause she hath been rebellious against me, saith the LORD.

18 Thy way and ^bthy doings have procured these ^bthings unto thee: this is thy wickedness, because it is bitter, ^bbecause it reacheth unto thine heart.

19 ¶ My bowels, ^bmy bowels! I am pained at ^bmy very heart; my heart maketh a noise in me: I cannot hold my peace, ^bbecause thou hast heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war.

20 ^bDestruction upon destruction is cried; for the whole land is spoiled: ^bsuddenly are my tents spoiled, and my curtains in a moment.

21 How long shall I see the standard, and hear the sound of the trumpet?

22 For ^bmy people is foolish, they have not known me; they are sottish children, and they have none understanding: ^bthey are wise to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge.

23 I ^bbeheld the earth, and, lo, it was without form and void; and the heavens, and they ^bhad no light.

24 I beheld the mountains, and, lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly.

25 I beheld, and, lo, ^bthere was no man, and all the birds of the heavens were fled.

26 I beheld, and, lo, ^bthe fruitful place was a wilderness, and all the cities thereof were broken down at the presence of the LORD, and by his fierce anger.

27 For thus hath the LORD said, ^bThe whole land shall be desolate; yet will I not make a full end.

28 For this shall ^bthe earth mourn, and ^bthe heavens above be black: because I have spoken it, I have purposed it, and will not repent, neither will I turn back from it.

29 The whole city ^bshall flee for the noise of the horsemen and bowmen; they shall go into thickets, and climb up upon the rocks: ^bevery city shall be forsaken, and not a man dwell therein.

30 And ^bwhen thou art spoiled, what wilt thou do? Though thou clothest thyself with crimson, though thou deckest thee with ornaments of gold, though thou rentest thy ^bface with painting, ^bin vain shalt thou make thyself fair; ^bthy lovers will despise thee, they will seek thy life.

31 For ^bI have heard a voice as of a woman in travail, and the anguish as of in the all-important matter of religion. Well conducted agriculture supplies much from which the spiritual husbandman may learn. To sow among thorns is to lose both the seed and the labour. If any good is to be done, the fallow ground must be broken up, at whatever cost; this is the unalterable condition of a crop. The business, therefore, of the parent, the teacher, and the preacher of the Gospel, must be to work conviction, true and deep, in the soul of the sinner. Without repentance there can be no faith, and without faith no forgiveness. The Apostles were not less emphatic in urging repentance toward God than faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; and it will be the wisdom of all whom the matter concerns closely to follow the Divine example. Ver. 14-31. Such is the importance of the subject that the prophet returns to it: "O Jerusalem, wash thy heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved." Religion is thoroughly a thing of the heart; it takes cognisance even of the thoughts, which her that bringeth forth her first child, ¹the voice of the daughter of Zion, that bewaileth herself, that spreadeth her hands, saying, Woe is me now! for my soul is wearied because of murderers.

CHAPTER V.

The judgments of God upon the Jews for their manifold corruptions.

RUN ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof, if ye can find a man, ^aif there be any that executeth judgment, ^bthat seeketh the truth; and I will pardon it.

2 And though they say, ^c"The LORD liveth; surely they swear falsely.

3 O LORD, are not thine eyes upon the truth? thou hast stricken them, but they have not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but they have refused to receive correction: ^d"they have made their faces harder than a rock; they have refused to return.

4 Therefore I said, ^e"Surely these are poor; they are foolish: for they know not the way of the LORD, nor the judgment of their God.

5 I will ^f"get me unto the great men, and will speak unto them; for they have known the way of the LORD, and the judgment of their God: but these have altogether broken the yoke, and burst the bonds.

6 Wherefore a lion out of the forest shall slay them, and a wolf of the ^gevenings shall spoil them, a leopard shall watch over their cities: every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces; because their transgressions are many, and their backslidings are ^hincreased.

7 ⁱ"How shall I pardon thee for this? thy children have forsaken me, and ^jsworn by them that are no gods: when I had fed them to the full, ^k"they then committed adultery, and assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses.

8 They were as fed horses in the morning: ^l"every one neighed after his neighbour's wife.

9 Shall ^m"I not visit for these things? saith the LORD: ⁿ"and shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

10 ^o"Go ye up upon her walls, and destroy; but make not a full end: take away her battlements; for they are not the LORD's.

11 For the house of Israel and the house of Judah have ^p"dealt very treacherously against me, saith the LORD.

12 They ^q"have belied the LORD, and said, It is not he; ^r"neither shall evil come upon us; neither shall we see sword nor famine:

13 And the prophets shall become wind, and the word is not in them: thus shall it be done unto them.

14 Wherefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, Because ye speak this word, behold, ^s"I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them.

15 Lo, ^t"I will bring a nation upon you from far, O house of Israel, saith the LORD: it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, ^u"a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say.

16 Their quiver is as an open sepulchre, they are all mighty men.

17 And ^v"they shall eat up thine harvest, and thy bread, which thy sons and thy daughters should eat; they shall eat up thy flocks and thine herds; they shall eat up thy vines and thy fig-trees; they shall impoverish thy fenced cities, wherein thou trustedst, with the sword.

18 Nevertheless, in those days, saith the LORD, I will not make a full end with you.

19 And it shall come to pass, when ye shall say, Wherefore doeth the LORD our God all these things unto us? then shalt thou answer them, ^w"Like as ye have forsaken me, and served strange gods in your land, so shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours.

20 ^x"Declare this in the house of Jacob, and publish it in Judah, saying, 21 Hear now this, O foolish people, and without ^y"understanding; which have eyes, and see not; which have ears, and hear not:

22 ^z"Fear ye not me? saith the LORD: will ye not tremble at my presence, which have placed the sand for the bound of the sea by a perpetual decree, that it cannot pass it; and though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass over it?

to the Most High are as palpable as words are to men. Let us therefore keep the heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.

Chap. V. 1-6. The apostacy at this time was so complete, as to comprehend a whole nation. The prophet speaks as if not a single witness had remained for the Lord besides himself. The language of loyalty continued, but the sentiment was gone. "Though they said, The Lord liveth, they swore falsely." When people have gone such lengths, they become so hardened as to be insensible to the judgments they have brought on themselves; while they feel it, and even groan under it, they see nothing in it beyond the operation of natural causes. They shut out all idea of the Divine hand, which would involve the acknowledgment both of their own sin, and of the Divine justice, even during the most awful visitation. Ver. 7-18. The prophet, in the bitterness of his disappointment, accounted for the state of things which grieved him, from the poverty of the people, which entailed ignorance on them; and, therefore, he determined to betake himself to the great men who had received a better education, through which it might be supposed they had known the way of the Lord. But great and small had departed from the way of truth, and the most opulent were the most wicked; the great men had "altogether broken the yoke, and burst the bonds." Ver. 19-29. The God of Abraham was faithful to his promise: in the midst of wrath he remembered mercy, and therefore did not make a full end; in compassion he exerted on them an influence, which so far restored the reign of reason as to prompt the inquiry, "Wherefore doeth the Lord our God all these things?" These were hopeful questions, since they seemed to point 23 But this people hath ^arevolting and a rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone.

24 Neither say they in their heart, ^aLet us now fear the LORD our God, that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season: he reserveth unto us ^athe appointed weeks of the harvest.

25 ^a¶ Your ^biniquities have turned away these things, and your sins have withholden good things from you.

26 For ^aamong my people are found wicked men: ^athey ^alay wait, as he that setteth snares; they set a trap, they catch men.

27 As a ^acage is full of birds, ^aso are their houses full of deceit; therefore they are become great, and waxen rich.

28 They are ^awaxen fat, they shine; yea, ^athey overpass the deeds of the wicked: ^athey judge ^anot the cause, the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper; and the right of the needy do they not judge.

29 Shall ^aI not visit for these things? saith the LORD: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

30 ^a¶ A wonderful and ^ahorrible thing is committed in the land;

31 The ^aprophets prophesy falsely, and the priests ^abear rule by their means; and ^amy people love to have it so: ^aand what will ye do in the end thereof?

CHAPTER VI.

1 God will prosper Zion's enemies. 10 The prophet declares the sins of the people. 16 He denounces the judgments of God; calls the people to mourning; and predicts their incorrigible obduracy.

O ^aYE children of Benjamin, ^agather yourselves to flee out of the midst of Jerusalem, ^aand blow the trumpet in ^aTekoa, and set up a sign of fire in ^aBeth-haccerem: for ^aevil appeareth out of the north, and great destruction.

2 I have likened ^athe daughter of Zion to a ^acomely and delicate woman.

3 The shepherds with their flocks shall come unto her; they shall pitch ^atheir tents against her round about; they shall feed every one in his place.

4 Prepare ye war against her; arise, and let us go up at noon. Woe unto us! for the day goeth away, for the shadows of the evening are stretched out.

5 Arise, and let us go by night, and let us destroy her palaces.

6 ^a¶ For thus hath the LORD of hosts said, ^aHew ye down trees, ^aand ^acast a mount against Jerusalem: ^athis is the city to be visited; she is wholly oppressed in the midst of her.

7 As a fountain casteth out her waters, so she casteth out her wickedness: ^aviolence and spoil is heard in her; before me continually is grief and wounds.

8 Be ^athou instructed, O Jerusalem, ^alest my soul ^adepart from thee; ^alest I make thee desolate, a land not inhabited.

9 ^a¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, They shall thoroughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine: turn back thine hand as a grape-gatherer into the baskets.

10 To whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? Behold, ^atheir ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot hearken: behold, ^athe word of the LORD is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it.

11 Therefore ^aI am full of the fury of the LORD; I am weary with holding in: ^aI will pour it out upon the children abroad, and upon the assembly of young men together: ^afor even the husband with the wife shall be taken, the aged with ^ahim that is full of days.

12 And ^atheir houses shall be turned unto others, ^awith their fields and wives together: for ^aI will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD.

13 For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them, every one is given to covetousness; and from the prophet even unto the priest, every one dealeth falsely.

14 They have healed also the ^ahurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when ^athere is no peace.

15 Were they ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush; therefore they shall fall among them that fall: ^aat the time that I visit them they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

16 Thus saith the LORD, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ^aye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, ^aWe will not walk therein.

17 Also I set watchmen over you, ^asaying, Harken to the sound of the trumpet. But they said, We will not hearken.

18 ^a¶ Therefore hear, ye nations, and know, O congregation, what is among them.

to repentance, which would have brought salvation; but in the present instance the expectation was not realised. They did not say in their hearts, "Let us now fear the LORD our God, that giveth rain, the former and the latter, in his season." As the result of their impious infatuation, the "good things" they might have enjoyed were withheld from them. Ver. 30, 31. The ruin was perfect. When such a condition of things as is here set forth had been brought about, the whole nation was clearly ripe for destruction. Society was based on falsehood, in which the prophets took the lead, playing into the hands of the priests, who turned the act to account for their own wicked purposes. The most extraordinary part of the business was, that the people concurred in their own undoing! Such a condition of things as this implies the lowest depth of degradation, out of which nothing but sovereign grace can raise a people.

Chap. VI. 1-10. The "sign of fire" is explained by the fact, that it was then usual with all nations to signify in the night, by signs of fire, the approach of an enemy, or the solicitation of succour in the hour of danger. The former was done by moving the torches, the latter by holding them still. The Chaldeans illustrated ver. 9, by not only carrying away captive the chief people, but, like the grape-gatherer, returning again and again to collect the poor, till little remained but the gleanings of this awful harvest. The hardened 19 Hear, O earth: behold, I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their thoughts, ^bbecause they have not hearkened unto my words, nor to my law, but rejected it.

20 To what purpose cometh there to me incense from Sheba, and the sweet cane from a far country? ^cyour burnt-offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices sweet unto me.

21 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, ^dI will lay stumblingblocks before this people, ^eand the fathers and the sons together shall fall upon them; the neighbour and his friend shall perish.

22 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, ^fa people cometh from the north country, and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth.

23 They shall lay hold on bow and spear; they are cruel, and have no mercy: their voice roareth like the sea; and they ride upon horses, set in array as men for war against thee, O daughter of Zion.

24 We have heard the fame thereof: our hands wax feeble: ^ganguish hath taken hold of us, and pain, as of a woman in travail.

25 Go not forth into the field, nor walk by the way; for ^hthe sword of the enemy and fear is on every side.

26 ¶ O daughter of my people, ⁱgird thee with sackcloth, and wallow thyself in ashes; make thee mourning, as for an only son, most bitter lamentation: ^jfor the spoiler shall suddenly come upon us.

27 I have set thee for a tower and a fortress among my people, that thou mayest know and try their way.

28 They are ^kall grievous revolvers, ^lwalking with slanders: ^mthey are brass and iron; they are all corrupters.

29 The bellows are burnt, the lead is consumed of the fire, ⁿthe founder melteth ^oin vain; for the wicked are not plucked away.

30 ^pReprobate silver shall men call them, because the LORD ^qhath rejected them.

house, and proclaim there this word, and say, ^bHear the word of the LORD, all ye of Judah, that ^center in at these gates to worship the LORD:

3 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, ^dAmend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place.

4 ^eTrust ye not in lying words, saying, 'The temple of the LORD, The temple of the LORD, The temple of the LORD, are these.

5 For ^fif ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings; ^gif ye thoroughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbour;

6 ^hIf ye oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, ⁱand shed not innocent blood in this place, ^jneither walk after other gods to your hurt;

7 Then ^kwill I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers, for ever and ever.

8 ¶ Behold, ^lye trust in lying words, that cannot profit.

9 Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not;

10 And come and stand before me in this house, ^mwhich is called by my name, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations?

11 Is this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? Behold, ⁿeven I have seen it, saith the LORD.

12 But go ye now unto ^omy place which was in Shiloh, ^pwhere I set my name at the first, ^qand see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel.

13 And now, because ye have done all these works, saith the LORD, ^rand I spake unto you, rising up early and speaking, but ye heard not; ^sand I called you, but ye answered not;

14 Therefore will I do unto ^tthis house, which is called by my name, wherein ye trust, and unto the place which I gave to you and to your fathers, ^uas I have done to Shiloh.

15 And ^vI will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, ^weven ^xthe whole seed of Ephraim.

16 Therefore pray not thou for this condition of the people is affectingly displayed in ver. 10. From pride, prejudice, idolatry, and iniquity, they had become so depraved that they closed their ears to the words of God, as if determined to listen to the voice neither of judgments nor mercy. They hated the prophets even for their love, and were rather exasperated than melted by their reproofs and instructions. Covetousness, then as now, was the disease of the people: and even the prophet and the priest were sorely smitten with it. They were, therefore, rendered utterly unfit for the arduous duties which devolved upon them. The result was the prophecy of smooth things. They dealt in the promises when they ought to have applied the precepts to work penitence in the hearts of a hardened people. They did not cleanse the wound previous to the application of emollients. Their cry was, "Peace, peace;" all is well! There is nothing to fear; Jehovah is full of mercy. Thus they did evil that good might come, and hardened themselves against the Lord. Ver. 11-30. Under these circumstances, the position of the prophet was not only distressing but dangerous; it was that of a tower and a fortress, against which the grievous revolvers that walked in slanders might hurl their poisoned darts. Little do succeeding generations think what has been done and suffered on their behalf, by the faithful witnesses of God!

Chap. VII. 1-7. A new prophecy commences here, which appears to have been delivered some time after the preceding. The prophet, in obedience to the Divine command, placed himself at the door of the temple, that he might there proclaim his message to the people on the solemn feast days. It is easy to conceive that such a step must have been peculiarly offensive to the authoripeople, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: for I will not hear thee.

17 ¶ Seest ^athou not what they do in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

18 The ^achildren gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead ^atheir dough, to make cakes to the ^aqueen of heaven, and ^bto pour out drink-offerings unto other gods, ^cthat they may provoke me to anger.

19 Do ^athey provoke me to anger? saith the LORD: do they not provoke themselves to the confusion of their own faces?

20 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, ^aBehold, mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place, upon man, and upon beast, and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruit of the ground; and it shall burn, ^aand shall not be quenched.

21 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; ^aPut your burnt-offerings unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh.

22 For I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, concerning ^aburnt-offerings or sacrifices:

23 But this thing commanded I them, saying, ^aObey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, ^athat it may be well unto you.

24 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but ^awalked in the counsels and in the ^aimagination of their evil heart, and ^awent ^abackward, and not forward.

25 Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day, I have even ^asent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early, and sending them.

26 Yet ^athey hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, ^abut hardened their neck; ^athey did worse than their fathers.

27 Therefore thou shalt speak all these

32 ¶ Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be called Tophet, nor The valley of the son of Hinnom, but, The valley of slaughter: for they shall bury in Tophet, till there be no place.

33 And ^athe carcases of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth; and none shall fray them away.

34 Then will I cause to cease from the cities of Judah, and from the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride; ^afor the land shall be desolate.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 A prediction of the calamities of the Jews both dead and alive. 4 Reproofs of their shameless impenitence. 13 A prophetic description of the Chaldean invasion. 18 The prophet's grief in prospect thereof.

AT that time, saith the LORD, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of ties. The message was alike simple and pungent: they were summoned to amend their ways and their doings, and not to trust in lying words. They had already counted too much on their relation to Abraham. They exulted in their imaginary monopoly of the Divine favour, and thought it impossible so to offend as to forfeit their privileges. There is immense force in the reiterated expression contained in ver. 4; these were the lying words of the false prophets, who materially aided the people in hardening their hearts. Ver. 8-16. The Tabernacle with the Ark had long stood at Shiloh, till at length the impiety of the sons of Eli, and the people's wickedness, provoked the Lord to give up the Ark into captivity. It was then finally removed from Shiloh, which was destroyed when the Ten Tribes were carried captive. The injunction in ver. 16, "Not to pray for the people, neither to lift up a cry nor prayer for them, nor to make intercession for them to the Lord," was terrible! Such a communication ought to have made all ears tingle; it was a token of coming desolation! The Divine displeasure could not have been expressed in language more alarming. When not only the people's own prayers were rejected, but the intercession of the holiest of men and the most faithful of God's servants shut out, it was a sign that they were marked out for ruin. Ver. 17-34. The "Queen of Heaven," of course, meant the Moon; and the cakes, it has been thought, were stamped with the likeness of the idol to which they were offered. It is worthy of remark, that the Papists have adopted this very title in the worship of the Virgin, as if they were intent on imitating one of the worst parts of Jewish idolatry. Ver. 23 strongly exposes the folly of heartless formality; everything ritual has a value only as it relates to truth, and the Redeemer. "Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well with you." It cannot be too deeply impressed on the hearts of all Christians, that doctrines, and ordinances, and all the externals of religion, are only means to an end, and that end the kindling of holy love in the heart, and that the test of love is the keeping of the commandments.

Chap. VIII. 1-12. The nation had not the sense to follow the example of individuals, who, when they fall, endeavour to rise; and if damaged, are glad of assistance. The people had fallen by iniquity, and never thought to rise by repentance. They turned away from the Lord:

the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves :

2 And they shall ^aspread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, ^bwhom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and whom they have worshipped : they shall not be gathered, nor be buried ; they shall be for dung upon the face of the earth.

3 And ^cdeath shall be chosen rather than life by all the residue of them that remain of this evil family, which remain in all the places whither I have driven them, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 ¶ Moreover, thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD ; ^dShall they fall, and not arise ? shall he ^eturn away, and not return ?

5 Why ^fthen is this people of Jerusalem ^gslidden back by a perpetual backsliding ? they ^hhold fast deceit, ⁱthey refuse to return.

6 I hearkened and heard, ^jbut they spake not aright : ^k'no man repented him of his wickedness, ^lsaying, What have I done ? every one turned to his course, ^m'as the horse rusheth into the battle.

7 Yea, ⁿthe stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times ; and ^othe turtle, and the crane, and the swallow, observe the time of their coming ; but ^p'my people know not the judgment of the LORD.

8 How do ye say, ^q'We are wise, and ^r'the law of the LORD is with us ? Lo, certainly ^sin vain made he ^tit ; the pen of the scribes is in vain.

9 ^uThe wise men are ^v'ashamed, they are dismayed and taken : ^w'lo, they have rejected the word of the LORD ; and ^x'what wisdom is in them ?

10 Therefore ^y'will I give their wives unto others, and their fields to them that shall inherit them : ^z'for every one, from the least even unto the greatest, is given to covetousness ; ^{aa}'from the prophet even unto the priest, every one dealeth falsely.

11 For ^{ab}'they have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace ; when ^{ac}there is no peace.

12 Were they ^{ad}'ashamed when they had committed abomination ? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush ; ^{ae}'therefore shall they fall among them that fall : in the time of their visi-

14 ⁵Why do we sit still ? assemble yourselves, ⁶and let us enter into the defenced cities, and ⁷let us be silent there ; for the LORD our God hath put us to silence, and given us ⁸water of ⁹gall to drink, because we have sinned against the LORD.

15 We ¹⁰looked for peace, but no good came ; and for a time of health, and behold trouble !

16 The snorting of his horses ¹¹was heard from Dan : ¹²the whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing of his strong ones : for they are come, and have devoured the land, and ¹³all that is in it ; the city, and those that dwell therein.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The prophet lamenteth the manifold sins of the people, 9 and their impending judgments. 12 Disobedience is the cause of their calamity.

1 OH that ¹'my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people !

2 Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men, that I might leave my people, and go from them ! ³for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men.

and in spite of entreaties, stood by their revolt. Even the birds of the air reproved them, for the stork knew her appointed times, as did also the swallow ; but they were blind to the signs of Providence, and hastened on to their own destruction. At this period, the spirit of self-deceit was completely in the ascendant. The Divine goodness had been abused from presumption. They said, "We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us." This they said, whilst they were giving the most decided manifestation of folly. The people who thus spake, had still to learn the first principles of true piety. Such a spirit as they here breathed, betokened the worst, and clearly foreshadowed their coming doom. Ver. 13-22. The picture of distress here presented is perfect, and most deeply affecting. How touching the prophet's inquiry : "Is not the Lord in Zion, is not her King in her ?" "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved !" The spiritual lessons presented by the whole are of the highest moment. They wanted not for balm to heal the nation's wounds ; but in the infatuation of her impiety, she refused to apply it. She despised the physician, and pursued a course which only deepened her wounds.

Chap. IX. 1-8. Here the prophecies attain a climax. Nothing can be more touching than his lamentations, nothing more grievous than the character he draws of the people. Ver. 9-26. The injunctions of ver. 24 are among the most precious contained in the inspired page. It exhibits society in its weak part. Few possess wisdom,

3 And ^cthey bend their tongues like their bow for lies; but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth: for they proceed from evil to evil, and ^dthey know not me, saith the LORD.

4 Take ^eye heed every one of his ^fneighbour, and trust ye not in any brother: for ^gevery brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbour will walk with slanders.

5 And ^hthey will ⁱdeceive every one his neighbour, and will not speak the truth: they have ^jtaught their tongue to speak lies, and ^kweary themselves to commit iniquity.

6 Thine habitation is in the midst of deceit; through deceit they ^lrefuse to know me, saith the LORD.

7 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will melt them, and try them: for how shall I do for the daughter of my people?

8 Their tongue is as an arrow shot out; it speaketh deceit: one speaketh peaceably to his neighbour with his mouth, but ^min heart he layeth ⁿhis wait.

9 ¶ Shall ^oI not visit them for these things? saith the LORD: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

10 For ^pthe mountains will I take up a weeping and wailing, and for the ^qhabitations of the wilderness a lamentation, ^rbecause they are ^sburnt up, so that none can pass through them; neither can men hear the voice of the cattle: ^tboth the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled; they are gone.

11 And ^uI will make Jerusalem heaps, and ^va den of dragons; ^wand I will make the cities of Judah ^xdesolate, without an inhabitant.

12 ¶ Who is the wise man, that may understand this? and who is he to whom the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, that he may declare it, for what the land perisheth and is burnt up like a wilderness, that none passeth through?

13 And the LORD saith, ^y'Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein;

14 But have walked after the ^zimagination of their own heart, and after Baalim, which their fathers ^{aa}taught them:

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will feed them, even this people, with wormwood, and give them water of gall to drink.

16 I will ^{ab}scatter them also among the heathen, whom neither they nor their fathers have known; ^cand I will send a sword after them, till I have consumed them.

17 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Consider ye, and call for the mourning women, that they may come; and send for cunning women, that they may come:

18 And let them make haste, and take up a wailing for us, that our eyes may run down with tears, and our eyelids gush out with waters.

19 For ^da voice of wailing is heard out of Zion, How are we spoiled! we are greatly confounded, because we have forsaken the land, because our dwellings have cast us out.

20 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O ye women, and let your ear receive the word of his mouth, and teach your daughters wailing, and every one her neighbour lamentation:

21 For ^edeath is come up into our windows, and is entered into our palaces, to cut off the children from without, and the young men from the streets.

22 Speak, Thus saith the LORD, Even the carcasses of men shall ^ffall as dung upon the open field, and as the handful after the harvest-man, and none shall gather them.

23 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, ^g'Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, ^h'neither let the mighty man glory in his might, ⁱ'let not the rich man glory in his riches:

24 But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which exercise loving-kindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the LORD.

25 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, ^j'that I will ^kpunish all them which are circumcised with the uncircumcised;

26 ^l'Egypt, and ^m'Judah, and Edom, and the children of Ammon, and Moab, and all that are ⁿin the ^o'utmost corners, that dwell in the wilderness: for all these nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel are ^puncircumcised in the heart.

CHAPTER X.

1 The unequal comparison of God with idols. 19 The spoil of the tabernacle by foolish pastors.

HEAR ye the word which the LORD speaketh unto you, O house of Israel;

2 Thus saith the LORD, ^a'Learn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed might, or wealth, without the disposition, more or less, to glory in them, so that what might be rendered an instrument of usefulness for promoting the good of mankind and the glory of the Giver, is perverted to the injury, or it may be the destruction, of the possessor. It is natural for the human heart to glory in something; and in the absence of a proper ground, it will choose anything rather than forego its gratification. There is one ground of exultation in which he cannot err—let him glory in salvation; let him glory in this, that he has been taught by the Divine Spirit to understand and know the Lord; and imitate the excellences of his heavenly Parent—like him exercising loving kindness, judgment, and righteousness in the earth.

Chap. X. 1-18. The superiority of the true religion to everything idolatrous, is nowhere more strikingly illustrated than when the prophet discourses on idol-worship. Not until the minds of a people are thoroughly debased and benighted, could they be induced to bow down to the stock of a tree; but then the exercise not only keeps them low, but sinks them lower. The mind becomes at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them.

3 For the ¹customs of the people are vain: for ²one cutteth a tree out of the forest (the work of the hands of the workman) with the axe:

4 They ³deck it with silver and with gold; they fasten it with nails and with hammers, that it move not.

5 They are upright as the palm-tree, but ⁴speak not: they must needs be borne, because they cannot go. Be not afraid of them; for ⁵they cannot do evil, neither also is it in them to do good.

6 Forasmuch as there is none like unto thee, O LORD; ⁶thou art great, and thy name is great in might.

7 Who would not fear thee, O King of nations? for ⁷to thee doth it appertain: forasmuch as among all the wise men of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, there is none like unto thee.

8 But they are ⁸altogether brutish and foolish; the stock is a doctrine of vanities.

9 Silver spread into plates is brought from Tarshish, and gold from Uphaz, the work of the workman, and of the hands of the founder: blue and purple is their clothing; they are all the work of cunning men.

10 But ¹⁰the LORD is the ¹⁰true God, he is ¹⁰the living God, and an ¹⁰everlasting King: at his wrath the earth shall tremble, and the nations shall not be able to abide his indignation.

11 Thus shall ye say unto them, ¹¹The gods that have not made the heavens and the earth, even ¹¹they shall perish from the earth, and from under these heavens.

12 He ¹²hath made the earth by his power, he hath ¹²established the world by his wisdom, and hath ¹²stretched out the heavens by his discretion.

13 When he ¹³uttereth his voice, there is a ¹³multitude of waters in the heavens, and he causeth the vapours to ¹³ascend from the ends of the earth; he ¹³maketh lightnings ¹³with rain, and ¹³bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Jeremiah proclaimeth God's covenant, 8 He rebuketh the disobedient Jews, 11 and prophesieth evils to come upon them.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Hear ye the words of this covenant, further darkened, and the heart increasingly hardened, and the probability of their ever recovering diminishes with time. In religion, "the wise men of the nations" were but fools; the most distinguished amongst them were but blind men groping in the dark. Ver. 19-22. The pathetic words of the prophet are alike remarkable and precious. How often must the pilgrims to Zion say, "Truly this is a grief, and I must bear it!" Parents, bereaved, aged, and solitary, have frequent occasion to employ the plaintive language of Jeremiah; their children are either "gone forth" or dead; there is none "to stretch forth the tent any more," and to set up the curtains. Man only, of all the creatures, is capable of worship. The idolater is so clearly allied to the brute, as no longer to subvert the end of his existence as head and high priest of creation—the link that connects us with heaven. The pastor who has "not sought the Lord" is, therefore, by the prophet likened to the brute. Such a man is as incapable of diffusing a heavenly influence around him as the beast that perishes. Without grace, he is without power for good, although it is much otherwise for evil. Prosperity is from the Lord alone, and to obtain the blessing the Lord must be sought; when it is withheld, the flock will not long keep together. Ver. 23-25. It is one of the highest lessons to know that "the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." The children of God are always ready to receive fatherly correction; but their weakness requires that it shall not be in anger, which would bring them to nothing. Ignorance of God is crime which must be followed by punishment. The condition, therefore, of the heathen is terrible beyond conception, which ought to impel the Church of God to the most strenuous, persevering, and prayerful efforts to propagate the Gospel. The idea of family worship, even in ancient times, is clearly brought out in the closing words. Would there were less ground to fear that multitudes of families, now considered Christian, would fare but ill in the event of the imprecation of the prophet being realised! May the time speedily come when words shall indicate things! when the power of godliness shall be coextensive with the forms of it!

Chap. XI. 1-10. Obedience is the test of love. The 5 That I may perform the oath which I have sworn unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day. Then answered I, and said, "So be it, O LORD.

6 Then the LORD said unto me, Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, and do them.

7 For "I earnestly protested unto your fathers, "in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice.

* Deut. 32. 4.
Reason the case with thee.

Jerusalem have ye set up "altars to that "shameful thing, even altars to burn incense unto Baal.

14 Therefore "pray not thou for this people, neither lift up a cry or prayer for them: "for I will not hear them in the time that they cry unto me for their "trouble.

15 "What hath my beloved to do in mine house, "seeing she hath wrought lewdness with many, and "the holy flesh is passed from thee? "when thou doest evil, "then thou rejoicest.

16 The LORD called thy name, "A green olive-tree, fair, and of goodly fruit: "with the noise of a great tumult he hath kindled fire upon it, and the branches of it are broken.

17 For the LORD of hosts, "that planted thee, hath "pronounced evil against thee, for the evil of the house of Israel, and of the house of Judah, which they have done against themselves, to provoke me to anger, in offering incense unto Baal.

18 ¶ And "the LORD hath given me knowledge of it, and I know it: then thou shewdest me their doings.

19 But "I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought to the slaughter; and I knew not that they had devised devices against me, saying, Let us destroy "the tree with the fruit thereof, and let us cut him off from the land of the living, that his name may be no more remembered.

20 But, O LORD of hosts, "that judgest righteously, "that triest the reins and the heart, "let me see thy vengeance on them; for unto thee have I revealed my cause.

21 Therefore thus saith the LORD of the men of Anathoth, that seek thy life, saying, "Prophecy not in the name of the LORD, that "thou die not by our hand:

22 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will "punish them: the young men shall die by the sword; their sons and their daughters shall die by famine:

23 And there shall be no remnant of them: for I will bring evil upon the men of Anathoth, even the year of their visitation.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The prophet complaineth of the wicked's prosperity. 5 God reproves his impatience. 14 A prophecy of heavy judgments on the oppressors of the Jews, and of the calling of the Gentiles.

"RIGHTEOUS art thou, O LORD, when I plead with thee; yet let me "talk object of the Gospel is to slay the enmity of the human heart, and to produce this holy affection. Till that has been accomplished, its end has not been answered. Continuance of the heart in the state which produces this obedience, is the condition of ultimate blessing. This is an arrangement which commends itself to the reason of the human heart; the prophet promptly answered, "So be it, O Lord." The sum and substance of all the prophet's lessons was, "Obey my voice." This they refused to do. Unmoved by either promises or threatenings, they held on their evil course, and brought upon themselves the manifold and unparalleled calamities involved in the captivity. Ver. 11, 23. Here once more, in ver. 14, as in chap. vii., the awful injunction is given to the prophet to desist from prayer on behalf of the nation, forasmuch as the fountain of mercy for a season was sealed! Even their own prayers, which they would pour out in their anguish, would return unanswered into their own bosoms! This is the perfection of misery! A creature cast off by the Creator, a child disowned by its parent, are pictures of desolation which nothing can surpass. It is the comfort of the people of God, that the devices of their enemies, however unknown to themselves, all pass under the review of their heavenly Father, and are carefully provided against. In those days, it was often perilous work to prophesy in the name of the Lord. Jeremiah spake under the threat of murder. Still he spake. Much grace was required for such service; but as was the prophet's day, so was his strength; and thus will it be with every witness for God on the earth.

Chap. XII. 1-11. The feelings which agitated the 4 How ¹long shall the land mourn, and ^kthe herbs of every field wither, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein? ¹the beasts are consumed, and the birds; because they said, ^m"He shall not see our last end.

13 They have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns: they have put themselves to pain, but shall not profit; and they shall be ashamed of your revenues, because of the fierce anger of the LORD.

14 [¶]Thus saith the LORD ^aagainst all mine evil neighbours, that touch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit; Behold, ^bI will pluck them out of their land, ^cand pluck out the house of Judah from among them.

15 And it shall come to pass, after that I have plucked them out, I will return, and have compassion on them, and will bring them again, every man to his heritage, and every man to his land.

16 And it shall come to pass, if they will diligently learn the ways of my people, to swear by my name, The LORD liveth; (^aas they taught my people to swear by Baal;) then shall they be ^abuilt in the midst of my people.

17 But ^aif they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Under the type of a linen girdle, the people's destruction is signified. 12 By the bottles filled with wine, their excess in misery is foretold.

THUS saith the LORD unto me, ^a"Go and get thee a linen girdle, and put it upon thy loins, and put it not in water.

2 So I got a girdle, ^aaccording to the word of the LORD, and put it on my loins.

3 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying,

4 Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, and arise, go to Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.

5 So I went, and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me.

6 And it came to pass after many days, that the LORD said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there.

7 Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it; and, behold, the girdle was marred, ^cit was profitable for nothing.

breast of the prophet, as he beheld the prosperity of the wicked, are not strangers to observant men. Even David himself was troubled by rebellious thoughts on this subject; but a little reflection speedily corrected his error. The Judge of all the earth will assuredly do right; and however adverse appearances may sometimes be, it will in the end be seen that the way of transgressors is hard. The purport of ver. 5 and 6 amounts to this—if you have been unable to encounter smaller perils, how will you combat with those that are greater? The term "pastors," in ver. 10, is supposed to signify the generals of the Chaldean army. God calls Judah his "vineyard, and pleasant portion," because of the care he takes to cultivate and improve it. Ver. 12-17. The spoilers were the Chaldeans, who destroyed Jerusalem and all the fortified places of the land. While the Jews deserved all the chastisements which overtook them, the nations which were the instruments of it were only bent on the gratification of their own passions; so that the deed, although it realised the purposes of God, was sin, which in due season would bring upon themselves its appropriate punishment. To swear by the hand of the Lord is to worship and serve the living God as the Author of life, and the Giver of all good. Men have their choice between being ruled by the grace of God, or crushed by his justice. Happy they who choose the life set before them!

Chap. XIII. Pride was not made for man, and it rarely fails to work evil to its possessor. The measure in which it exists is just the measure of the guilt which attaches to it. Here the knowledge of man is at fault; but it is perfectly known to the Searcher of hearts, and, according to what he finds, he will deal it out merited chastisement. Humility is the best preparative for affliction: the humble soul may seem weak, but, as compared with the proud, it is strength. Emptied of self, it is the more ready to receive the truth, and to

8 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Thus saith the LORD, After this manner will I mar ^dthe pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem.

10 This evil people, which ^erefuse to hear my words, ^fwhich walk in the ^gimagination of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing.

11 For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have ^hI caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD; that they might be unto me for a people, and ⁱfor a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: ^jbut they would not hear.

12 ¶ Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, ^kEvery bottle shall be filled with wine; and they shall say unto thee, Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine?

13 Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, ^lI will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David's throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, with drunkenness.

14 And ^mI will dash them ⁿone against another, ^oeven the fathers and the sons together, saith the LORD: ^pI will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, ^qbut destroy them.

15 ¶ Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud: for the LORD hath spoken.

16 Give glory to the LORD your God, before he cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and, ^rwhile ye look for light, he turn it into ^sthe shadow of death, and make it gross darkness.

17 But if ye will not hear it, ^tmy soul shall weep in secret places for ^uyour pride; and mine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears, ^vbecause the LORD's flock is carried away captive.

18 Say unto the king, and to the queen, ^wHumble yourselves, ^xsit down: for your ^yprincipalities shall come down, ^zeven the crown of your glory.

19 The cities of the south shall be shut up, and none shall open them: ^{aa}Judah rely upon the promised grace. Notwithstanding the difference of rank, human nature is one, and the dangers of the rulers of mankind are substantially the same as those of their meanest subjects. Pathos well befits the mouths of holy men in speaking to the wicked. Jeremiah, of all the prophets, was the most remarkable for these precious gifts. His remonstrances were steeped in tears. While bold for his God, he melted with compassion for his erring fellow-men. His example deserves the imitation of all Christian teachers.

Chap. XIV. 1-9. There seems reason to believe that these predictions were delivered on the approach of the final destruction of the land, and after idolatry had broken out, overflowing the nation like a fountain. The picture drawn is one of extreme suffering and social con-

CHAPTER XIV.

¹ A terrible famine in Judah, ² causeth the prophet to pray for the people. ¹⁰ The Lord forbids him to pray for them. ¹⁴ False prophets are no excuse for them. ¹⁷ He is ordered to mourn over his people.

THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah concerning ¹the dearth.

2 Judah ^amourneth, and the gates thereof languish; they are black unto the ground; ^band the cry of Jerusalem is gone up.

3 And ^ctheir nobles have sent their little ones to the waters: they came to the ^dpits, and found no water; they returned with their vessels empty; they were ashamed and confounded, and covered their heads.

4 Because ^ethe ground is chapt, for there was no rain in the earth, ^fthe plowmen were ashamed, they covered their heads.

5 Yea, the hind also calved in the field, fusion. The nobles, no longer surrounded by a subservient retinue, were compelled to draw upon the services of their "little ones," even to carry water! And, to add to their calamity, when most required it was most difficult to be had. Ashamed and mortified by their disappointment, they returned with their vessels empty. The spirit of the prophet here, as elsewhere, is remarkable for the meek submission with which he beheld the approach of judgments. He confessed that all was deserved, and the appropriate reward of iniquity and idolatry. With all his pity for the people, he was yet intensely concerned for the honour of his God. Ver. 10-16 The meaning is, they were prone to wander into forbidden ground, delighting in idolatry, and in the vices and games connected with it. Again the prophet, in ver. 11, is commanded to abstain from all intercesand forsook it, because there was no grass.

6 And the wild asses did stand in the high places, they snuffed up the wind like dragons; their eyes did fail, because there was no grass.

7 ¶ O LORD, though our iniquities testify against us, do thou it for thy name's sake: for our backslidings are many; we have sinned against thee.

8 O the Hope of Israel, the Saviour thereof in time of trouble, why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land, and as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night?

9 Why shouldest thou be as a man astonished, as a mighty man that cannot save? yet thou, O LORD, art in the midst of us, and we are called by thy name; leave us not.

10 ¶ Thus saith the LORD unto this people, Thus have they loved to wander, they have not refrained their feet; therefore the LORD doth not accept them: he will now remember their iniquity, and visit their sins.

11 Then said the LORD unto me, Pray not for this people for their good.

12 When they fast, I will not hear their cry; and when they offer burnt-offering and an oblation, I will not accept them: but I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.

13 ¶ Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you assured peace in this place.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name: I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.

16 And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of

CHAPTER XV.

1 The utter rejection and manifold judgments of the Jews.
10 Jeremiah, complaining, 19 receiveth a gracious promise.

THEN said the LORD unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.

2 And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the LORD, Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity.

sion on behalf of the people, since their doom was determined. Their own cry likewise would be disregarded, and their very burnt offerings would be an abomination. Jeremiah was much troubled by the conduct of the false prophets, who, by their "lies," were hastening the people on to destruction. No teaching at all is decidedly preferable to that which only leads astray. Ver. 17-22. The prophet's heart, at this time, was melted, as he thought of the miseries, present and prospective, of the country which he loved with so much tenderness. They looked for peace, but there was no good; and for a time of healing, but trouble increased. With respect to the Divine dispensations, he had nothing to do but to fall before them, acknowledging the wickedness of the people, and the iniquities of their fathers.

Chap. XV. 1-9. The remarkable words in the opening verse were meant to prepare the prophet for the denial which awaited his earnest intercession. No pleading could avail on behalf of a people so wicked. Things had reached a crisis which rendered the manifestation of the Divine judgment indispensable to the vindication of the Divine government. This implied a climax in national transgression: for Moses obtained pardon for the people, on various occasions, when they had committed heinous iniquities; Samuel also was successful in his benevolent intercessions, even for those who had greatly transgressed: but there was a limit to forbearance, and that limit the nation had now passed. Nothing remained, therefore, but the fulfilment of the threatenings which had gone before. Great indulgence had been shewn them; the threatenings had been long continued, and the infliction was slow to follow; at length, however, the compassions of the Lord were gone, and nothing remained but to chastise the transgressors. Ver. 10-21. The language of the prophet here is peculiarly affecting. Although the most loving of human kind, he yet found himself "a man of strife, and a man

CHAPTER XVI.

¹ The utter ruin of the Jews foretold; ¹⁴ their return from captivity stranger than their deliverance out of Egypt.

THE ¹"word of the LORD came also unto me, saying, of contention to the whole earth." The case of Jeremiah is one which has since been realised among the faithful servants of God times without number. They who will wink at iniquity, even though they do not share it, will be allowed to live in peace; but let them oppose, no matter with what gentleness, or even timidity, and they will soon rouse opposition; and if, like the prophet, they will set their face as a flint against transgression, then they may count on a speedy declaration of war by transgressors. The cry raised against them will often be bitter and loud, and mingled with much misrepresentation, which time alone can clear away; and that time may occasionally extend beyond the period of their own mortal existence. No matter; the judgments of earth are not those by which their eternal condition is to be determined. All such judgments will be revised in the court of heaven; and a reversal will take place wherever truth and justice demand it. Ver. 16 and 17 are remarkable for their beauty. The word of the Lord was the food of the prophet; it filled him with joy and rejoicing. It was enough for him to be called by the name of his God. He sat not in the assembly of the mockers, neither did he rejoice; he sat alone, as true, faithful, and fearless witnesses for God will often be compelled to do. Things had now reached a pitch which called for peculiar decision; and the Lord's instruction to the persecuted prophet was such as to nerve his soul, and to fit him for the emergency. Separating between the "precious and the vile" was difficult as well as dangerous work; but the prophet was prepared for it; and by the good hand of his God upon him, he went through with it. It sufficed for him to know that his God had made him "a fenced brasen wall," against which the entire wrath of the nation could not prevail. "I am with thee to save thee, and to deliver thee," was language well fitted to make the weakest strong.

Chap. XVI. 1-18. The prophet is here instructed to proceed upon a new principle, with a view to the instruction of his infatuated countrymen. He is required to express faith in his own predictions, as a means of adding moral force to his persuasions. Ver. 6 and 7 receive an appropriate illustration from the history of the pestilence, wherever it has occurred. In those cases, so far from paying dutiful attention to the dust of dear departed friends, survivors, paralysed with terror, flee for their lives, leaving the dead without sepulture. It was customary for the heathen to manifest the most intense and ungovernable grief in connexion with death, by tearing their hair, rending their garments, and cutting their persons. These, however, were not only the signs of sorrow, but understood as contributing to mitigate the imaginary sufferings of the dead, and to appease the angry divinities. The "cup of consolation" was so

2 Thou shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons or daughters in this place.

3 For thus saith the LORD concerning the sons and concerning the daughters that are born in this place, and concerning their mothers that bare them, and concerning their fathers that begat them in this land;

4 They shall die of grievous deaths; they shall not be lamented, neither shall they be buried; but they shall be as dung upon the face of the earth: and they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine; and their carcases shall be meat for the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

5 For thus saith the LORD, Enter not into the house of mourning, neither go to lament nor bemoan them: for I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the LORD, even loving-kindness and mercies.

6 Both the great and the small shall die in this land: they shall not be buried, neither shall men lament for them, nor cut themselves, nor make themselves bald for them:

7 Neither shall men tear themselves for them in mourning, to comfort them for the dead; neither shall men give them the cup of consolation to drink for their father or for their mother.

8 Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting, to sit with them to eat and to drink.

9 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I will cause to cease out of this place in your eyes, and in your days, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride.

10 And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt shew this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, Wherefore hath the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity? or what is our sin that we have committed against the LORD our God?

11 Then shalt thou say unto them, Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith the LORD, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, and have forsaken me, and have not kept my law:

2 Cor. 3. 3.

12 And ye have done worse than your fathers; (for, behold, ye walk every one after the imagination of his evil heart, that they may not hearken unto me;)

13 Therefore will I cast you out of this land into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there shall ye serve other gods day and night, where I will not shew you favour.

14 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be said, The LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

15 But, The LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.

16 Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the LORD, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks.

17 For mine eyes are upon all their ways: they are not hid from my face, neither is their iniquity hid from mine eyes.

18 And first I will recompense their iniquity and their sin double; because they have defiled my land, they have filled mine inheritance with the carcases of their detestable and abominable things.

19 O LORD, my strength, and my fortress, and my refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit.

20 Shall a man make gods unto himself, and they are no gods?

21 Therefore, behold, I will this once cause them to know, I will cause them to know mine hand and my might; and they shall know that my name is The LORD.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The captivity of Judah for sin. 4 Trust in man is cursed; 7 in God is blessed. 9 The deceitful heart cannot deceive God. 12 The salvation of God.

THE sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond: it is graven upon the table designated from the fact that it was given to the sorrowful, with a view to raise their sinking spirits and assuage their grief. The custom extensively prevailed in ancient times, and it does so even now in some countries. Ver. 14-21. In the midst of darkness there are streaks of light to cheer the surrounding gloom. It was dimly hinted that the day would come when the displeasure of the Most High would give place to compassion, and the remnant of the captivity would be restored. The circumstance, however, that seventy long years were first to pass away, rendered the intelligence of small moment on personal grounds. The love of offspring, reverence for the fatherland, and regard for the honour of God, nevertheless gave special value to these gracious enunciations. This restoration, viewed by itself, was one of the most affecting chapters of Jewish history; but in its typical import, as significant of redemption, and of the deliverance of the Church of God from oppression and wrong, it is peculiarly cheering. Ver. 19 is one of the most animating predictions of Jeremiah touching the calling of the Gentiles. Nothing can be more explicit than his words: "The Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers inherited lies, vanity, and things that do not profit." Such, in substance, will be the conviction and the confession of the whole heathen world on their being turned from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. This is a very remarkable prediction; and if it be remembered, that at the time at which the prophet wrote nothing was less probable, its inspiration becomes the more apparent.

Chap. XVII. 1-7. The opening words of this chapter bespeak the indelible impression of idolatry on the

of their heart, and upon the horns of your altars;

2 Whilst their children remember their altars and their groves by the green trees upon the high hills.

3 O my mountain in the field, I will give thy substance and all thy treasures to the spoil, and thy high places for sin, throughout all thy borders.

4 And thou, even thyself, shalt discontinue from thine heritage that I gave thee; and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in the land which thou knowest not: for ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn for ever.

5 Thus saith the LORD, Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the LORD:

6 For he shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited.

7 Blessed is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is:

8 For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit.

9 The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?

10 I the LORD search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings.

11 As the partridge sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool.

12 A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary.

13 O LORD, the hope of Israel, all that forsake thee shall be ashamed, and they that depart from me shall be written in the earth, because they have forsaken the LORD, the fountain of living waters.

14 Heal me, O LORD, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for thou art my praise.

15 Behold, they say unto me, Where is the word of the LORD? let it come now.

16 As for me, I have not hastened from being a pastor to follow thee: neither have I desired the woeful day; thou knowest: that which came out of my lips was right before thee.

17 Be not a terror unto me: thou art my hope in the day of evil.

18 Let them be confounded that persecute me, but let not me be confounded; let them be dismayed, but let not me be dismayed: bring upon them the day of evil, and destroy them with double destruction.

19 Thus said the LORD unto me, Go and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem;

20 And say unto them, Hear ye the word of the LORD, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that enter in by these gates:

21 Thus saith the LORD, Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the sabbath-day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem;

22 Neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the sabbath-day, neither do ye any work; but hallow ye the sabbath-day, as I commanded your fathers.

23 But they obeyed not, neither inclined their ear, but made their neck stiff, that they might not hear, nor receive instruction.

24 And it shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the LORD, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath-day, but hallow the sabbath-day, to do no work therein;

25 Then shall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain for ever.

26 And they shall come from the cities of Judah, and from the places about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from the plain, and from the mountains, and from the south, bringing burnt-offerings, and sacrifices, and meat-offerings, and incense, and bringing sacrihearts and the memories of the people. The ancients were accustomed to write on tables of brass or copper, or other hard substances, with appropriate instruments, and hence this record endured long. The infirmity of man has ever been to trust in himself, or in his fellow-creatures, and, in either case, the result has been disastrous. When the Jews turned from their almighty Protector, looking to Egypt for help, it never failed to issue in their overthrow. It behoves Christians as well as Jews to guard against making flesh their arm in anything; God alone can be relied on as true, wise, gracious, faithful, and almighty. Ver. 8-27. In proportion as it is crime and folly to trust in man, it is duty and wisdom to trust in God. "Blessed is the man who trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is." To this great truth, the inspired penman, both of the Old and the New Testament, agree: it is impossible to conceive of a unity more perfect than obtains upon this, and everything of a corresponding character. The simile here selected, of a fertile soil and a flowing river, is full of beauty, strikingly illustrating the exalted privileges of walking with the Lord, and living to the praise of his grace. The testimony borne in ver. 9 and 10 is one of the most important in Scripture, furnishing a mortifying contrast to pride of intellect, and the vainglorious claims which are made on behalf of the dignity of human nature. But all-important as the testimony here borne is, it is sustained by individual experience and universal observation. In very deed, the "man who trusts in his own heart is a fool;" and, unless amongst those who fear God and work righteousness, it is often foolish and perilous to trust to our fellow-creatures. Travellers fices of praise, unto the house of the LORD.

27 But if ¹ye will not hearken unto me ²to hallow the sabbath-day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath-day; ³then will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, ⁴and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

CHAPTER XVIII.

¹ Under the type of a potter, God sheweth his absolute power in disposing of nations. 11 Judgments threatened to Judah.

THE word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Arise, ³and go down to the potter's house; and there I will cause thee to hear my words.

3 Then ¹I went down to the potter's house; and, behold, he wrought a work on the ²wheels.

4 And the vessel that he ²made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter: so he ³made it again another vessel, ⁴as seemed good to the potter to make it.

5 Then the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

6 O house of Israel, ¹cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the LORD. Behold, as the clay ²is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel.

10 If it ¹do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, ²then I will repent of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them.

11 Now therefore go to, speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I frame evil against you, and devise a device against you: ¹return ye now every one from his evil way, and make your ways and your doings good.

12 And they said, There is no hope: but ²we will walk after our own devices, have observed in India an illustration of ver. 13, where they found children writing their lessons with their fingers in the sand strewed on the pavement. When the space was full, the sand was smoothed, or swept off and renewed from a heap that was near. Once more, in the closing paragraph, we have a plea on behalf of the devout observance of the Sabbath-day. Then, as now, it was the condition of spiritual progress, and also an index of the state of piety; and the abrogation of that day would, in the end, prove the abrogation of all religion.

Chap. XVIII. 1-10. Everything was turned into a means of instructing the prophet. As he beheld the potter conducting the process of his manufacture, the Lord spoke to him communicating an important lesson touching Divine sovereignty. As the Lord of all, he has a right to do what seemeth good to his infinite wisdom, love, and justice. Ver. 11-23. The language of the people bespeaks their unbelieving disposition. They professed to think they would derive no benefit from renouncing their doubts, and returning to the Lord; and they, therefore, determined to persevere in the path of transgression. People so circumstanced are in a very hopeless condition; they are fast ripening for destruction, which, in due season, will not fail to overtake them. Snow remains long on the tops of Lebanon, and, occasionally, the whole year in the cold clefts. Rebellion and impiety have reached a crisis when people come to devise mischief against the faithful servants of the Lord. Ver. 18 indicates a fearful condition of hardened malignity; it is impiety perfected! The confidence of the

CHAPTER XIX.

Under the type of breaking a potter's vessel, is foretold the desolation of the Jews for their sins.

THUS saith the LORD, "Go and get a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests;

2 And go forth unto ^bthe valley of the son of Hinnom, which ^{is} by the entry of the ¹east gate, and proclaim there the words that I shall tell thee:

6 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that ¹this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor The valley of the son of Hinnom, but The valley of slaughter.

7 And ¹I will make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; ¹and I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives; and ¹their carcases will I give to be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

the flesh of his friend, in the siege and straitness wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.

10 Then ¹shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee, 11 And shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, "Even so will I break this people, and this city, as ^{one} breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot ²be made whole again: and they shall ¹bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury.

12 Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and ^{even} make this city as Tophet:

13 And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled ¹as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses ¹upon whose roofs they have burnt incense unto all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink-offerings unto other gods.

14 Then came Jeremiah from Tophet, whither the LORD had sent him to prophesy; and ¹he stood in the court of the LORD's house, and said to all the people, 15 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will bring upon this city, and upon all her towns, all the evil that I have pronounced against it, ¹because they have hardened their necks, that they might not hear my words.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Pashur, smiting Jeremiah, receiveth a new name, and a fearful doom. 7 Jeremiah complaineth of contempt, 10 of treachery, 14 and of his birth.

NOW Pashur the son of ¹Immer the priest, who was also ¹chief governor in the house of the LORD, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things.

2 Then Pashur ¹smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were ¹in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the LORD.

3 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The LORD ¹hath not called thy name Pashur, but ¹Magor-missabib.

people was great in proportion as the grounds for it were small; they believed the law should not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet. Such deception could go no further. It may seem at first sight a little thing to be smitten with the tongue, but it is a drawn sword, which may cut character to pieces, and transfix the soul of the righteous.

Chap. XIX. 1-15. There is difficulty attending the idolatrous practice to which ver. 4 refers. The interpretation has been limited to children sacrificed to idols; but this would seem too narrow a view. The term, "innocents" is not necessarily limited to children; it may apply with the utmost force and fulness to the prophets and the righteous, of both sexes and all ages, who have been martyrs to the truth of God. Baal was the great idol of ancient times, and, as identical with Moloch, the terms are used interchangeably in speaking of the idol. It has, indeed, been supposed by some that they were different—the one belonging to Ammon, and the other to the Philistines. But be this as it may, they were equally abominable and horrible, and the worship of them the very climax of idolatry. Tophet was peculiarly the region of death; full of murdered men and women. The simile here is fraught with an awful picture. As Tophet had been defiled with the bodies of the slain, and with the filth of the city poured into it, so the houses of the people, of all ranks, would be crowded, and defiled by the carcases of the slain lying unburied. The flat roofs of the Jewish dwellings were favourable to the offering of incense to the Sun, Moon, and Stars, of which the worshippers had a more distinct view from the housetops. The entire portraiture is deeply humbling to human nature, indicating the fearful extent to which idolatry had gone in the days of Jeremiah. At no period, probably, had the nation reached to such a pitch of iniquity. The cup was full, and the Divine vengeance descended upon them to the uttermost.

Chap. XX. 1-6. A Jewish writer tells us that the stocks were made of two pieces of wood, in which the necks of prisoners were put; and some say it had holes for the hands to be put in, thus corresponding with the modern pillory. Ver. 7-9. The expression "deceived me" has been the subject of misapprehension. The translation is faulty; it cannot be taken in the common acceptance, as the prophet is not to be viewed as accusing 4 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, 'I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends; and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it: 'and I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword.

5 Moreover, I will deliver all the strength of this city, and all the labours thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah will I give into the hand of their enemies, which shall spoil them, and take them, and carry them to Babylon.

6 And thou, Pashur, and all that dwell in thine house, shall go into captivity: and thou shalt come to Babylon, and there thou shalt die, and shalt be buried there, thou, and all thy friends, to whom thou hast prophesied lies.

7 'O LORD, thou hast deceived me, and I was 'deceived; 'thou art stronger than I, and hast prevailed: I am in derision daily, every one mocketh me.

8 For since I spake, I cried out, I cried violence and spoil; because 'the word of the LORD was made a reproach unto me, and a derision, daily.

9 Then I said, 'I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name: but his word 'was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay.

10 'For 'I heard the defaming of many, fear on every side. 'Report, say they, and we will report it. 'All 'my familiars watched for my halting, saying, Peradventure he will be enticed, and we shall prevail against him, and 'we shall take our revenge on him.

11 But 'the LORD is with me as 'a mighty terrible one; therefore 'my persecutors shall stumble, 'and they shall not prevail: they shall be greatly ashamed; for they shall not prosper: their everlasting confusion shall never be forgotten.

12 But, O LORD of hosts, that triest the righteous, and seest the reins and the heart, 'let me see thy vengeance on them: 'for unto thee have I opened my cause.

13 Sing unto the LORD, praise ye the LORD; 'for he hath delivered the soul of the poor from the hand of evil-doers.

14 'Cursed be the day wherein I was born: let not the day wherein my mother bare me be blessed.

15 Cursed be the man who brought tid-

18 Wherefore came I forth out of the womb to see labour and sorrow, that my days should be consumed with shame?

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Zedekiah enquireth the event of Nebuchadrezzar's war.
 3 A hard siege foretold.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, 'when king Zedekiah sent unto him 'Pashur the son of Melchiah, and 'Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying,

2 'Enquire, I pray thee, of the LORD for us, ('for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon maketh war against us,) if so be that the LORD will deal with us 'according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

3 'Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah;

4 Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, 'Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, 'and I will assemble them into the midst of this city.

5 And 'I myself will fight against you 'with an outstretched hand, and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath.

6 And 'I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast: they shall die of a great pestilence.

7 And afterward, saith the LORD, 'I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in this city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life: and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword; 'he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.

8 'And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, 'I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 He 'that abideth in this city shall die

Jehovah of deception at the very moment that he was proclaiming in him his own confidence and hope. The literal import of it is to persuade, which may be used in either a good or a bad sense. The prophet probably refers to his own reluctance to enter on his office, which Jehovah overcame by assurances and promises, whereby he was persuaded to enter on the work, and to persevere in his duties, in spite of danger and discouragement. Never had a prophet so much to endure; and as his day, so was his strength. It may, indeed, be doubted if all the prophets together were called to encounter such an amount of opposition, and to go through so much afflic-tion. Ver. 10-18. Notwithstanding the spotless character of the prophet, his enemies heaped upon him a flood of calumny. The evil tongues of the time vied with each other in reviling him. Such courses amongst ungodly people are not altogether unknown in modern times, although there may be less of concert among the persecutors.

Chap. XXI. 1-10. The battle is not to the strong, and still less to the weak. The Jews were given to understand, that they would fight to no purpose against the king of Babylon, who was the appointed instrument by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall live, and his life shall be unto him for a prey.

10 For I have set my face against this city for evil, and not for good, saith the LORD; it shall be given into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire.

11 ¶ And touching the house of the king of Judah, say, Hear ye the word of the LORD;

12 O house of David, thus saith the LORD, I execute judgment in the morning, and deliver him that is spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go out like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

13 Behold, I am against thee, O inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain, saith the LORD; which say, Who shall come down against us? or who shall enter into our habitations?

14 But I will punish you according to the fruit of your doings, saith the LORD; and I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof, and it shall devour all things round about it.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 An exhortation to repentance. 10 The judgment of Shallum, 20 and of Coniah.

THUS saith the LORD, Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word,

2 And say, Hear the word of the LORD, O king of Judah, that sitteth upon the throne of David, thou, and thy servants, and thy people that enter in by these gates;

3 Thus saith the LORD, Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor: and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place.

4 For if ye do this thing indeed, then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, he, and his servants, and his people.

5 But if ye will not hear these words, I swear by myself, saith the LORD, that this house shall become a desolation.

6 For thus saith the LORD unto the king's house of Judah, Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon: yet surely I will make thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited.

7 And I will prepare destroyers against thee, every one with his weapons; and they shall cut down thy choice cedars, and cast them into the fire.

8 And many nations shall pass by this city, and they shall say every man to his neighbour, Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this great city?

9 Then they shall answer, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD their God, and worshipped other gods, and served them.

10 ¶ Weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him; but weep sore for him that goeth away: for he shall return no more, nor see his native country.

11 For thus saith the LORD touching Shallum the son of Josiah king of Judah, which reigned instead of Josiah his father, which went forth out of this place, He shall not return thither any more:

12 But he shall die in the place whither they have led him captive, and shall see this land no more.

13 ¶ Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong; that useth his neighbour's service without wages, and giveth him not for his work;

14 That saith, I will build me a wide house, and large chambers, and cutteth him out windows; and it is ceiled with cedar, and painted with vermilion!

15 Shalt thou reign, because thou closest thyself in cedar? Did not thy father eat and drink, and do judgment and justice, and then it was well with him?

16 He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then it was well with him: was not this to know me? saith the LORD.

17 But thine eyes and thine heart are not but for thy covetousness, and for to shed innocent blood, and for oppression, and for violence, to do it.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, They shall not lament for him, saying, Ah my brother! or, Ah sister! they shall not lament for him, saying, Ah lord! or, Ah his glory!

19 He shall be buried with the burial for the accomplishment of the purposes of Divine justice. The spirit alike of pride and of patriotism forbade submission to the invading power, and yet that was the sole condition of personal preservation. All who should submit would live, but to resist would be to perish. Ver. 11-14. It is probable the time for dispensing judgment was the forenoon, or even an earlier hour, when the people were repairing to their labour. The import of the words "execute judgment in the morning," however, may imply that it shall be executed promptly, without delay. The language of ver. 13 denotes the lower part of the city, which was surrounded with hills, the latter describing Mount Zion. Jerusalem, so circumstanced, was foolishly believed by its rebellious inhabitants to be impregnable, and they, therefore, flattered themselves, that they would succeed in bidding defiance to all attempts to take the city. Under ordinary circumstances this might have been so for a period; but if God be against a people, who can be for them? Even an inferior, and still more a superior, power will not fail to overthrow them. It is vain to contend against God; none ever yet did so and prospered.

Chap. XXII. 1-19. It is thought the expression in ver. 6, "Thou art Gilead unto me," amounts to this—"Thou head of Lebanon art Gilead," that is, "the heap of witnesses to me; surely I will make thee a wilderness of uninhabited cities"—that is, "I call upon the towering heights of Lebanon to bear witness that I will do this." The injunction in ver. 10, not to weep for the dead, is peculiarly affecting. The dead in question was good Josiah, who, although cast down from his throne, of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

20 ¶ Go up to Lebanon, and cry; and lift up thy voice in Bashan, and cry from the passages: for all thy lovers are destroyed.

21 I ^sspake unto thee in thy ^sprosperity; but thou saidst, I will not hear: this hath been thy manner from thy youth, that thou obeyedst not my voice.

22 The ^rwind shall eat up all thy pastors, and ^tthy lovers shall go into captivity; ^ssurely then shalt thou be ashamed and confounded for all thy wickedness.

23 O ⁱnhabitant of ^bLebanon, that makest thy nest in the cedars, ^how gracious shalt thou be when pangs come upon thee, the pain as of a woman in travail!

24 As I live, saith the LORD, though ^cConiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah were the signet upon my right hand, yet would I pluck thee thence;

25 And ⁱI will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life, and into the hand of them whose face thou fearest, even into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 And I will cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee, into another country, where ye were not born; and there shall ye die.

27 But to the land whereunto they ^rdesire to return, thither shall they not return.

28 Is this man ^cConiah ^aa despised broken idol? is he a vessel wherein is no pleasure? wherefore are they cast out, he and his seed, and are cast into a land ^hwhich they know not?

29 O ^earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the LORD.

30 Thus saith the LORD, ^wWrite ye this man childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days: for no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Jeremiah prophesieth a restoration of the scattered flock. 9 God's fearful judgments against false prophets.

WOE be ^unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the LORD.

2 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people, Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them; behold, ⁱI will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the LORD.

3 And ⁱI will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase.

4 And ⁱI will set up shepherds over them, which shall feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the LORD.

5 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that ⁱI will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.

6 In ^this days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall ^dwell safely; ^hand this is his name whereby he shall be called, ^tTHE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

7 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

8 But, The LORD liveth, which brought up, and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; ^hand they shall dwell in their own land.

9 ¶ Mine heart within me is broken because of the prophets; all my bones shake: I am like a drunken man, and like a man whom wine hath overcome, because of the LORD, and because of the words of his holiness.

was happy, and in peace; but weep rather for his wicked son, who, after a short and impious reign, was carried away captive never more to return to his native country. Jehoiakim is the party mentioned in ver. 13. He was too selfish to be patriotic, and in a period of great distress and approaching danger he occupied himself in building a magnificent palace, and this he did by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong. He could only accomplish his vain object by the oppression of his people. He compelled his subjects to work for nothing, and in divers ways he committed extortion and injustice; but when the hour of peril came, he would find his palace a miserable refuge from the fury of the invader. Travellers testify to the largeness of the chambers of the East, size being the more desirable on account of the warmth of the temperature. The picture drawn by the prophet of this magnificent edifice is illustrated by houses existing at the present hour. In Barbary the chambers of the great are hung with velvet or damask, from the middle of the wall downwards, and the rest is adorned with wreaths and devices in stucco, and fret-work. The ceiling is generally of wainscot painting, or thrown into a variety of panels with gilt mouldings. These were the devices of taste and vanity specified by the prophet.

Ver. 20-30. As the rulers and teachers of the nation had been the prime promoters of its impiety, in the hour of judgment the cup of sorrow would first be presented to their lips. The wind would eat them up. They would perish as the fruits of the earth are blighted and consumed by the operation of the elements. Their allies also would be carried into captivity, where they would remain, pining and dying under the blow of the Divine hand.

Chap. XXIII. 1-8. Pastors signify kings, princes, priests, and prophets; and the flock, the nation whom they had misled, misgoverned, and ruined. The "righteous Branch," the King that should reign and prosper, and execute judgment and justice in the earth, could be none other than the Lord Jesus, who was a branch out of the stem of Jesse; by his Spirit and his truth he was to renovate the earth, and establish a reign of equity and love. "The Lord our righteousness" is an expression full of evangelical import, exhibiting the grand result of the Saviour's atoning sacrifice. In this, the prophet and the apostle of the Gentiles are in beautiful harmony. According to him, Christ has been "made of God unto his people wisdom, righteousness, sanctifica-

10 For the land is ¹full of adulterers; for because of ²swearing the land mourneth; the pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up, and their ³course is evil, and their force is not right.

11 For ¹both prophet and priest are profane: yea, ²in my house have I found their wickedness, saith the LORD.

12 Wherefore their way shall be unto them as slippery ways in the darkness; they shall be driven on, and fall therein: for I will bring evil upon them, even the year of their visitation, saith the LORD.

13 And I have seen ¹folly in ²the prophets of Samaria; they ³prophesied in Baal, and caused my people Israel to err.

14 I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem ⁵an horrible thing: they commit adultery, and walk in lies; they ⁶strengthen also the hands of evil-doers, that none doth return from his wickedness: they are all of them unto me as Sodom, and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts concerning the prophets, Behold, ¹I will feed them with wormwood, and make them drink the water of gall: for from the prophets of Jerusalem is ²profaneness gone forth into all the land.

16 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ¹Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you; they make you vain: they speak ²a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the LORD.

17 They say still unto them ¹that despise me, The LORD hath said, ²Ye shall have peace; and they say unto every one that walketh after the ³imagination of his own heart, ⁴No evil shall come upon you.

18 For ¹who hath stood in the ²counsel of the LORD, and hath perceived and heard his word? who hath marked his word, and heard it?

19 Behold, ¹a whirlwind of the LORD is gone forth in fury, even a grievous whirlwind: it shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked.

20 The anger of the LORD shall not return, until he have executed, and till he have performed the thoughts of his heart: in the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly.

21 I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied.

22 But if they had stood in my counsel, and had caused my people to hear my words, ¹then they should have turned them from their evil way, and from the evil of their doings.

26 ¹How long shall ²this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart;

tion, and redemption." Attempts have been made to get rid of the idea of justification through faith in the blood of the Lamb; but it has been to no purpose; that doctrine is written as with a sunbeam throughout the inspired pages. This is one of the cardinal doctrines of Scripture, and one of the most precious provisions of the covenant. Ver. 9-32. The swearing here signifies perjury; this was one of the crying sins for which God was about to visit the nation with his judgments. The priests and the prophets were largely to blame in this matter, and their punishment would be awful in proportion to their guilt. They had poisoned the people by

CHAPTER XXIV.

¹ By good and bad figs, 4 the prophet foreshoweth their restoration from captivity, 8 and the desolation of Zedekiah and the rest.

THE LORD shewed me, and, behold, ¹two baskets of figs were set before the temple of the LORD, ²after that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon had carried away captive Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths, from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon.

2 One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe; and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, ³they were so bad.

3 Then said the LORD unto me, What seest thou, Jeremiah? And I said, Figs; the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

4 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Like these good figs, ⁶so will I acknowledge ⁷them that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good.

6 For ¹I will set mine eyes upon them for good, ²and I will bring them again to this land: and I will build them, and not pull them down; and I will plant them, and not pluck them up.

7 And ¹I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the LORD; ²and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their whole heart.

8 ¶ And ¹as the evil figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus

CHAPTER XXV.

¹ Jeremiah, reproving the Jews' disobedience to the prophets, 8 foretelleth the seventy years' captivity, 12 and the succeeding destruction of Babylon.

THE word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah, ¹in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that was the first year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; 2 The which Jeremiah the prophetspake unto all the people of Judah, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying,

3 From the thirteenth year of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, even unto this day, (that is the three and twentieth year,) the word of the LORD hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye have not hearkened.

4 And the LORD hath sent unto you all his servants the prophets, ⁵rising early and sending them; but ⁶ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear.

5 They said, ⁷Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the LORD hath given unto you and to your fathers ⁸for ever and ever:

6 And ⁹go not after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands, and I will do you no hurt.

7 Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the LORD; ⁸that ye might provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt.

8 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of their "lies," and they would now be called to drink the cup of God's wrath. Ver. 33-40. The prophets often call their visions "burdens," as signifying the weight of the divine judgments on their hearts. The scornful men of the day would seem to have mocked their compassion. In doing this, they brought upon themselves the Divine displeasure. As their punishment, their own words would fall on them, crushing them in the dust, and exposing them to contempt and derision.

Chap. XXIV. 1-10. The first ripe figs were most valued; this generally took place in June, whereas the second sort were not ripe till August, and a third only ripened in the course of the winter, and were gathered in the spring. Mercy dawns in ver. 6, which probably refers to the favour with which God would bless the souls of the exiles in their captivity. The restoration of their posterity to their own land is distinctly indicated. Ver. 7 is a specially precious promise, touching the revival of true religion among the people. There seems reason to believe that the captivity produced a particularly humbling effect on the children of Israel. When the conflict was over, and their doom realised, they began to perceive the nature and aggravation of the sins which had engulfed them in such misery. The Lord was pleased to sanctify their affliction, and to make events which had the appearance of the annihilation of the Jewish Church the means of its renovation. This language clearly delineates the religion of the heart; it specifies spiritual life as comprising repentance and faith, the forgiveness of sin, the peace of justification, and the joy of adoption. It is, in a word, the religion of the New Testament.

Chap. XXV. 1-38. Jeremiah had now prophesied throughout the long period of twenty-three years. Commencing in the thirteenth year of Josiah, who lived thirty-one years, the prophet had laboured about sixteen or nineteen years in his reign; then followed that of Jehoshaphat; and now he had advanced four years into the reign of Jehoiakim. Jeremiah, although the chief, was not the only prophet of the period. He had several contemporaries, among whom were Zephaniah and Urijah.

hosts, Because ye have not heard my words,

9 Behold, I will send and take all the families of the north, saith the LORD, and Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them, and make them an astonishment, and an hissing, and perpetual desolations.

10 Moreover, I will ¹take from them the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle.

11 And this whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon ²seventy years.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass, ¹when seventy years are accomplished, ²that I will ³punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the LORD, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, and will make it perpetual desolations.

13 And I will bring upon that land all my words which I have pronounced against it, even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath ¹prophesied against all the nations.

14 For many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of them also: and I will recompense them according to their deeds, and according to the works of their own hands.

15 ¶ For thus saith the LORD God of Israel unto me, ¹Take the wine-cup of this fury at my hand, and ²cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it.

16 And they shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them.

17 Then took I the cup at the LORD's hand, and made all the nations to drink, unto whom the LORD had sent me:

Things now became deeply serious, and the approaching crisis presented itself to the prophetic eye. "The sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle," are phrases very expressive to an Eastern ear. The people grind their corn at daybreak, and on going out in the morning the noise of the mill, and the song of the grinders were everywhere heard. As a contrast to this, the day was at hand when gloom and silence would prevail in the evening, while the morning would bring no voice of gladness. There is something particularly noticeable in the exact-ness with which the period of the Captivity was stated. This considerably mitigated the horror of the event. Had there been utter silence on this point, the pungency of the grief would have been greatly augmented. They would have remained in a awful uncertainty whether they should ever be restored at all, and whether there was not an end to the Jewish polity. But the distinct intimation, that seventy years would terminate their bondage, and bring them back to the land of their fathers, was as life from the dead. It was a voice from the future, pro-way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to escape.

36 A voice of the °cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock, shall be heard: for the LORD hath spoiled their pasture.

37 And Pthe peaceable habitations are cut down because of the fierce anger of the LORD.

38 He °hath forsaken his covert, as the lion: for their land is °desolate because of the fierceness of the oppressor, and because of his fierce anger.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Jeremiah, exhorting to repentance, 8 is apprehended, 10 and arraigned. 12 His apology, 16 and acquittal.

IN °the beginning of the reign of Jehoia-kim the son of Josiah king of Judah, came this word from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, °Stand in the court of the LORD's house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in the LORD's house, °all the words that I command thee to speak unto them;
°diminish not a word:

3 If so be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may repent me of the evil which I purpose to do unto them, because of the evil of their doings.

4 And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, °If ye will not hearken to me, to walk in my law, which I have set before you,

5 To hearken to the words of °my servants the prophets, whom I sent unto you, both rising up early, and sending them, but ye have not hearkened;

6 Then °will I make this house like Shiloh, and will make this city °a curse to all the nations of the earth.

7 So the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD.

8 ¶ Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die.

9 ¶ Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? °And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

10 ¶ When °the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat down °in the entry of °the new gate of the LORD's house.

11 Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes, and to all the people, °saying, °This man is worthy to die; °for he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears.

12 ¶ Then spake Jeremiah unto all the princes, and to all the people, saying,
°The LORD sent me to prophesy against this house, and against this city, all the words that ye have heard.

13 Therefore now °amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the LORD your God; and the LORD will °repent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you.

14 As for me, behold, °I am in your hand; do with me °as seemeth good and meet unto you:

15 But know ye for certain, that, if ye put me to death, ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof: °for of a truth the LORD hath sent me unto you, to speak all these words in your ears.

16 ¶ Then said the princes and all the people unto the priests, and to the prophets, This man is not worthy to die: for he hath spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.

17 Then rose up certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly of the people, saying,

18 °Micah the Morasthite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spake to all the people of Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, °Zion shall be plowed like a field, and °Jerusalem shall become heaps, and °the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest.

19 Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him at all to death? did he not fear the LORD, and besought °the LORD, and °the LORD repented him of the evil which he had pronounced against them?
b Thus might we procure great evil against our souls.

20 And there was also a man that prophesied in the name of the LORD, Urijah the son of Shemaiah of °Kirjath-jearim, who prophesied against this city, and claiming liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that were bound. This prophecy was delivered in the fourth year of Jehoia-kim, and in the first of Nebuchadnezzar, who lost no time in invading Judea, and taking Jerusalem. Seventy years from that period carries us down to the first year of Cyrus, when he made a proclamation for the restoration of the Jews.

and the rebuilding of the Temple:—thus exactly and wonderfully does the providence of God further the purposes of his mercy! The king of Babylon, as the destroyer of the Jewish nation, while he had subverted the purposes of Divine Providence, gratified his own ambition—thus contracting the guilt which was now to be avenged by his utter destruction. However, for a season, the wicked may seem to prosper, the day of vengeance never fails, at length, to arrive; and however the Church of God, as the punishment of her sins, may be chastened, she will not be ultimately destroyed.

The covenant will stand, and He that made it will do all his pleasure.

Chap. XXVI. 1-10. The Great Court in which the prophet was ordered to stand was the place where both sexes, and all classes, ordinarily worshipped, when they brought no sacrifice; for when they did, they were required to bring it into the Inner Court, where the priests performed their duties. Ver. 6 intimates, that as God had forsaken Shiloh, he would forsake the Temple of Jerusalem. When the spirit of true worship had departed from the heart of the nation, the Temple, for the time being, served no further purpose. Ver. 11-16.
These verses present one of the most remarkable facts against this land, according to all the words of Jeremiah:

21 And when Jehoiakim the king, with all his mighty men, and all the princes, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death: but when Urijah heard it, he was afraid, and fled, and went into Egypt;

22 And Jehoiakim the king sent men into Egypt, namely, Elnathan the son of Achbor, and certain men with him into Egypt:

23 And they fetched forth Urijah out of Egypt, and brought him unto Jehoiakim the king; ^awho slew him with the sword, and cast his dead body into the graves of the ^bcommon people.

24 Nevertheless the hand of Ahikam the son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah, ^cthat they should not give him into the hand of the people to put him to death.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Under the type of bonds and yokes, Jeremiah prophesieth the subjection of the neighbouring kings to Nebuchadnezzar.

IN the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, came this word unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus ¹saith the LORD to me, ^a"Make thee bonds and yokes, and put them upon thy neck,

3 And send them ^bto the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of ^cthe messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah;

4 And command them ^dto say unto their masters, Thus saith ^ethe LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Thus shall ye say unto your masters;

5 I have ^fmade the earth, the man and the beast that ^gare upon the ground, by my great power, and by my outstretched arm, ^hand have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me.

6 And now have ^aI given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, ^bmy servant; ^cand the beasts of the field have I given him also to serve him.

7 And ^dall nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, until the very time of his land come; and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him.

8 And it shall come to pass, that the nation and kingdom which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, ^ethat nation will I punish, saith the LORD, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence, until I have consumed them by his hand.

9 Therefore ^fhearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners, nor to your ^gdreamers, nor to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon:

10 For ^hthey prophesy a lie unto you, to remove you far from your land; and that I should drive you out, and ye should perish.

11 But the nations that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him, ⁱthose will I let remain still in their own land, saith the LORD; and they shall till it, and dwell therein.

12 ^jI spake also to Zedekiah king of Judah according to all these words, saying, Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live.

13 ^kWhy will ye die, thou and thy people, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as the LORD hath spoken against the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon?

14 Therefore hearken not unto the words of the prophets that speak unto in history. Nothing would serve the priests, and the prophets, whose wickedness Jeremiah had reproved, but that he must perish as the penalty of his fidelity; and to this end they betook themselves to the princes and the people. The prophet, under these circumstances, conducted himself with peculiar dignity. Unintimidated by the threatening of destruction, he exhorts them to repent; in that case promising them pardon, but threatening them with vengeance in the event of their putting him to death. The noble appeal of the faithful prophet was successful. The princes and all the people, addressing the priests and the prophets, said, "This man is not worthy to die; for he hath spoken to us in the name of the Lord our God." The priests, and the prophets, as the expositors of truth, ought ever to have been the patrons of justice; these men, however, were not so; but the princes and the people, of whom much less was to have been expected, as a higher court, reversed the judgment of these perverse and infatuated men. Ver. 17-24. "A word fitly spoken, how good it is!" The elders of the land, in their address to the assembly, while they acted an honourable part, made a happy use of history. The conduct of Jehoiakim, however, was wicked and cruel in the extreme; but the death of the man of God cost him dear. It is of small importance where the dust of the faithful may repose; the Divine Head of the Church will find it in the morning of the resurrection. The wicked king, when he had slain the prophet, and acted ignominiously towards his dead body, could do no more; the immortal spirit bade defiance to the madness of the monarch.

Chap. XXVII. 1-11. A fresh lesson was now to be emblematically set before the misguided people. Jeremiah, wearing the yoke he made upon his neck, could hardly fail to excite attention, since he was a living type of the thralldom into which the nation would speedily be plunged. It would seem as if Jeremiah made several yokes in addition to that which he wore himself; and the delivery of the awful prophecy may be viewed as sending the yokes to the princes mentioned, since it is not probable that the ambassadors would receive the yokes from the prophet's hands, and carry them to their several masters. These images, to men who were not utterly blinded by unbelief, and hardened by guilt, must have been peculiarly affecting. It is the business of human laws to establish the government by which they are executed; but He who is higher than the highest may change governments and kings at pleasure, in furtherance of his providential purposes, and to promote the interests of his Church. Ver. 12-22. To refuse you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon: for they prophesy a lie unto you.

15 For I have not sent them, saith the LORD, yet they prophesy ^aa lie in my name; ^bthat I might drive you out, and that ye might perish, ^cye, and the prophets that prophesy unto you.

16 Also I spake to the priests, and to all this people, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hearken not to the words of your prophets that prophesy unto you, saying, ^d"Behold, the vessels of the LORD's house shall now shortly be brought again from Babylon: for they prophesy a lie unto you.

17 Hearken not unto them; ^e"serve the king of Babylon, and live: ^f"wherefore should this city be laid waste?

18 But if they ^gbe prophets, and if the word of the LORD be with them, ^hlet them now make intercession to the LORD of hosts, that the vessels which are left in the house of the LORD, and ⁱin the house of the king of Judah, and at Jerusalem, go not to Babylon.

19 ¶ For thus saith the LORD of hosts ^j"concerning the pillars, and ^k"concerning the sea, and concerning the bases, and concerning the residue of the vessels that remain in this city, 20 Which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took not, when he carried away captive ^l"Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah from Jerusalem to Babylon, and all the nobles of Judah and Jerusalem;

21 Yea, thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels that remain ^min the house of the LORD, and ⁿin the house of the king of Judah and of Jerusalem;

22 They shall be ^ocarried to Babylon, and there shall they be ^p"until the day that I visit them, saith the LORD: ^qthen will I bring them up, and restore them to this place.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Hananiah's false prophecy: 10 he breaketh Jeremiah's yoke. 12 Jeremiah foretelleth of an iron yoke, 15 and Hananiah's death.

AND it came to pass the same year, ^ain the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year, and in the fifth month, ^bthat ^cHananiah the son of Azur ^dthe prophet, which ^ewas of Gibeon, spake unto me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests, and of all the people, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, ^f"I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon.

3 Within two ^gfull years will I bring again into this place ^hall the vessels of the LORD's house ⁱthat Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from this place, and carried them to Babylon:

4 And I will bring again to this place ^j"Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with all the ^kcaptives of Judah, that went into Babylon, saith the LORD: for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.

5 ¶ Then the prophet Jeremiah said unto the prophet Hananiah, in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood ^lin the house of the LORD,

6 Even the prophet Jeremiah said, ^m"Amen: the LORD do so: ⁿ"the LORD perform thy words which thou hast prophesied, to bring again the vessels of the LORD's house, and all that is carried away captive, from Babylon into this place.

7 Nevertheless, hear thou now this word that I speak in thine ears, and in the ears of all the people;

8 The prophets that have been before me and before thee of old, ^o"prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence.

9 The prophet which prophesieth of submission to the invader was to choose death. The blockade of the Chaldean army could not be raised, and the siege would infallibly result in the storming of Jerusalem, and the destruction of the people. The address delivered to Zedekiah was the more reasonable, since he was made king by Nebuchadnezzar, to whom he had taken an oath of fidelity. The pleasing intimation made in the last verse was realised, as we have already seen, by the raising up of Cyrus, king of Persia, who permitted the Jews to return to their own land, and to build their Temple, at the same time delivering into the hands of the priests of Judah the vessels which had been carried away. With prophets as with individuals, conduct is the test of character; the flattering assurances of the bad prophets were in the end all found to be lies, whereas the predictions of the persecuted men of God were fulfilled in their season, vindicating alike their character and their mission.

Chap. XXVIII. 1-7. Among the self-deceived multitudes of the Jewish Church, a first place in point of enormity was due to the false prophet, who stood up in the presence of the priests and the people, like Hananiah, speaking in the name of the Lord when the Lord had given him no message. Divine truth, like genuine gold, is its own voucher. The language of this infatuated man required no contradiction; it violated reason. Such promises as he made to a wicked and impious nation could not be from God, and their fulfilment was impossible. To the wicked there is only one promise—that of pardon in the case of penitence. Pardon once obtained, then "all the promises are yea and amen" to them. There is no separating between character and privilege. To the wicked belong the threatenings; to the righteous, the promises. Hananiah, however, was a man to the taste both of the court and the nation; he prophesied "smooth things," and set at naught the menaces of Jeremiah. But the pleasure derived from falsehood is short-lived, and the disappointment is great in proportion to the promise. Ver. 8-14. Only a false prophet could speak good to a wicked people. Jeremiah was hated for the truth, but the day soon declared on which side safety lay. Where prophecy, like testimony, is directly conflicting, both sides cannot be true. Thus it was with Jeremiah and his opponents. The conduct of Hananiah was rude as well as impious. The spirit which ruled him was too light and too lofty to comport with inspiration. He was a mere man of the world, and the world heard him; but they did so to their own destruction. Ver. 15-17. It was proper that a man who had sought such prominence as Hananiah should be made an example to all that might succeed. The Spirit of the Lord, therefore, immediately followed up his false assurances by a terrible prediction, which was to be fulfilled within a period so short, that nearly all that heard might live to see it. Thus inspired Jeremiah said, peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, ¹⁰then shall the prophet be known, that the LORD hath truly sent him.

10 ¶ Then Hananiah the prophet ¹¹took the yoke from off the prophet Jeremiah's neck, and brake it.

11 And Hananiah spake in the presence of all the people, saying, ¹²Thus saith the LORD, ¹³Even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years. And the prophet Jeremiah went his way.

12 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the prophet, (after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah,) saying, 13 Go and tell Hananiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, ¹⁴Thou hast broken the yokes of wood; but thou shalt make for them yokes of iron.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, ¹⁵I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these nations, ¹⁶that they may serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and they shall serve him: ¹⁷and I have given him the beasts of the field also.

15 ¶ Then said the prophet Jeremiah unto Hananiah the prophet, Hear now, Hananiah; ¹⁶The LORD hath not sent thee; but thou makest this people to trust in a lie.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will cast thee from off the face of the earth: ¹⁷this year thou shalt die, because thou hast taught ¹⁸rebellion against the LORD.

17 So ¹⁹Hananiah the prophet died the same year, in the seventh month.

all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon,

2 (After that Jeconiah the king, and the queen, and the ³eunuchs, the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, and the carpenters, and the smiths, were departed from Jerusalem.)

3 By the hand of Elasah the son of Shaphan, and Gemariah the son of Hilkiyah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) saying,

4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, unto all that are carried away captives, ⁵whom I have caused to be carried away from Jerusalem unto Babylon;

5 Build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them;

12 Then shall ye call upon me, and ye

"Hear now, Hananiah, the Lord hath not sent thee; and thou makest this people to trust in a lie." Here the charge is precise and explicit; then followed the dreadful threat: "I will cast thee from off the face of the earth: this year thou shalt die, because thou hast taught rebellion against the Lord!" A message so emphatic and fearful could not fail to strike deep into the heart even of this hardened man, as it must also have startled the auditory. Month succeeded month, till the seventh month had arrived, when Hananiah was summoned to the judgment-seat to give an account of the deeds done in the body!

Chap. XXIX. 1-19. So far as can be judged, there was no true prophet at Babylon when this letter was sent, except Ezekiel and Daniel, who had but newly entered on their Divine office. There were, nevertheless, individuals, from their wisdom and piety, accounted prophets, who had much influence with the people, and, therefore, they were recognised along with the priests and the elders. The object of the communication here made was to soothe the spirit of the exiles, and to reconcile them to their captivity for the appointed time. This was necessary, not simply to their comfort, but to their spiritual welfare; a cup was placed in their hands, and it was their wisdom to make up their minds, with humble submission, to drink it. They were, therefore, taught that the first generation, having no prospect of returning, were to reconcile themselves to die there, and, therefore, to build houses, acquire possessions, and enter into the marriage state. At the same time, along with this counsel, they received encouragement, by a re-assurance touching the restoration at the appointed time, when the seventy years should have been fulfilled. Then the Lord would once more visit his people, and bring them back to the land of their fathers. The first generation had, of course, no personal interest in the promise, nor had the second much, since the seventy years would remove the great body of them; but the promise would be fulfilled to the joy of their children. Ver. 20-32. The peculiarly turbulent character of the Jews rendered them, of all mankind, the most impatient of slavery. They were, therefore, always prepared for insurrections, and looked with peculiar favour on demagogues and false prophets, who expatiated on their wrongs, and promised them emancipation. Then, as now, the agreeable was shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you.

13 And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart.

14 And ¹I will be found of you, saith the LORD; ²and I will turn away your captivity, and I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

15 ¹¶ Because ye have said, ²The LORD hath raised us up prophets in Babylon;

16 Know that thus saith the LORD of the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity;

17 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will send upon them the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, and will ¹make them like vile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

18 And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, ¹and will deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, ²to be a curse, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, among all the nations whither I have driven them:

19 Because ¹they have not hearkened to my words, saith the LORD, which I sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the LORD.

20 ¹¶ Hear ye therefore the word of the LORD, all ye of the captivity, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon;

21 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, of Ahab the son of Kolaiah, and of Zedekiah the son of Maaseiah, which prophesy a lie unto you in my name, Behold, I will deliver them into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall slay them before your eyes:

22 And of them ¹shall be taken up a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The LORD make thee like Zedekiah, and like Ahab, whom the king of Babylon ²roasted in the fire;

23 Because they have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives, and have spoken lying words in my name, which I have not commanded them; ¹even I know, and am a witness, saith the LORD.

24 ¹¶ Thus shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the ²Nehelamite, saying,

25 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, ¹Because thou hast sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, and to ²Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, and to all the priests, saying, 26 The LORD hath made thee priest in the stead of Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be ¹officers in the house of the LORD, for every man that is mad, ²and maketh himself a prophet, ³that thou shouldst put him in prison, and in the stocks.

27 Now ¹therefore why hast thou not reprov'd Jeremiah of Anathoth, ²which maketh himself a prophet to you?

28 For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, ¹This captivity is long: build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

29 And ¹Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

30 ¹¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

31 Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the LORD concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite, ¹Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, and I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie;

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed: ¹he shall not have a man to dwell among this people; neither shall he behold the good that I will do for my people, saith the LORD; because he hath taught ²rebellion against the LORD.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 The return of the Jews. 10 Jacob comforted. 18 Their return shall be gracious.

THE ¹word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, always preferred to the truthful. They who preached patience were deemed unpatriotic, and leagued with the oppressor; whereas such as encouraged plots and rebellions, which only tended to bring down vengeance, and to rivet fetters more strongly, were favoured as friends and benefactors. Then, as now, faithful were the wounds of a friend, the kisses of an enemy deceitful.

2 Thus speaketh the LORD God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book.

Chap. XXX. 1-11. From the quotations contained in the New Testament, it is clear that the prophecy of this chapter, and that which follows, points to the days of the Messiah or the Christian Church. It may be doubtful, therefore, whether the people understood the full import of the prediction; it is clear that in many instances such was the fact, as is testified by the Apostle Peter. The prophet was instructed to transmit his prophecies to future ages, and with that view to write them in a book. These predictions, however slighted by the men of that generation, would be interesting and edifying in no common degree in after ages. They are, indeed, full of instruction even now, and they will continue to be so until the history of redemption shall have been completed. The assurance given in ver. 11 is very remarkable; the fulfilment of the prediction is beyond dispute, so far as time has admitted of it, and that which remains will be fulfilled in its season. Although the Jews are dispersed, they are not destroyed; they are still a great nation, and at the period appointed they will be collected together to form a special community. Not so the contemporary kingdoms. Of these the Lord hath made "a full end;" nothing survives of them but the name. The great monarchies of Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome have all passed away; but the seed of Abraham continue witnesses for God amongst every people. Ver. 12-24. The words of the prophet are peculiarly cheering. Notwithstanding the devastation which then covered Palestine, the temple, the city, the towns, the villages, all would be rebuilt, and the ancient

3 For, lo, the days come, saith the LORD, ^bthat I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the LORD; ^cand I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 ¶ And these are the words that the LORD spake concerning Israel, and concerning Judah.

5 For thus saith the LORD, We have heard a voice of trembling, ¹of fear, and not of peace.

6 Ask ye now, and see whether ²a man doth travail with child? wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness?

7 Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: ^dit is even the time of Jacob's trouble: ^ebut he shall be saved out of it.

8 For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that 'I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him:

9 But they shall ^fserve the LORD their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them.

10 ¶ Therefore fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the LORD; neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, lo, ^hI will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, ⁱand shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid.

11 For I ^kam with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee; but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished.

12 For thus saith the LORD, Thy bruise is incurable, and thy wound is grievous.

13 There is none to plead thy cause, ^lthat thou mayest be bound up: ^mthou hast no healing medicines.

14 All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not: for ⁿI have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, with the chastisement of a cruel one, for the multitude of thine iniquity; ^obecause thy sins were increased.

15 ^pWhy criest thou for thine affliction? thy sorrow is incurable ^qfor the multitude of thine iniquity: because thy sins were increased, I have done these things unto thee.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The restoration of Israel. 22 Christ is promised. 27 His care over the church.

AT the same time, saith the LORD, ^awill I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people.

2 Thus saith the LORD, The people which were left of the sword ^bfound grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest.

3 The LORD hath appeared ^cof old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee ^dwith an everlasting love; therefore ^ewith loving-kindness have I drawn thee.

worship re-established. The result of this would be a season of rejoicing equal to those which distinguished the happiest periods of the nation's history. The badge of thralldom would be removed; their nobles would be "of themselves," not foreign conquerors; and their governor proceed "from the midst of them." These cheering words had more of a spiritual than a temporal bearing. Even after the Captivity, they were frequently subject to strangers and oppressed by them, and a portion of their rulers were not of the character here described; but when the Lord Jesus had finished the work which had been given him to do, and ascended to his Mediatorial Throne, then, in the highest sense, these beautiful predictions were realised; and when the children of Israel shall receive their King, rejoicing in his righteousness, and shall have been restored to the land of their fathers' sepulchres, the whole prophecy will be completed.

Chap. XXXI. 1-17. A touching view of evangelical sentiment pervades these verses, which are intended to temper the severity of the foregoing predictions. In the day of darkness they were directed to look forward to the bright light which would break forth. The return of a portion of the Jews to Palestine would be a partial fulfilment of the prophecy; but the completion was to be 4 Again I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy ³tabrets, and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry.

5 Thou shalt yet plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria: the planters shall plant, and shall ⁴eat them as common things.

6 For there shall be a day, that the watchmen ⁴upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, ⁵Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the LORD our God.

7 For thus saith the LORD, Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, 'O LORD, save thy people, ⁶the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, ¹I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither.

9 They shall come with weeping, and with ⁶supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters ¹in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble; ²for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born.

10 ¹Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, 'He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd ²doth his flock.

11 For the LORD hath ³redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he.

12 Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, ²and shall flow together to the goodness of the LORD, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd; ³and their soul shall be as a watered garden: ⁴and they shall not sorrow any more at all.

13 Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together: for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow.

14 And I will ¹satisfiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and ²my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the LORD.

15 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children, ¹refused to be comforted for her children, ²because they were not.

16 Thus saith the LORD, ³Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: ⁴for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the LORD; ⁵and they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

17 And ⁶there is hope in thine end, saith the LORD, that ⁷thy children shall come again to their own border.

18 ¶ I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself ⁸thus; ⁹Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: ¹⁰turn thou me, and I shall be turned; ¹¹for thou art the LORD my God.

19 Surely ¹²after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, ¹³I smote upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth.

20 ¹⁴Is Ephraim my dear son? ¹⁵is he a pleasant child? ¹⁶for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still; therefore my bowels are ¹⁷troubled for him: ¹⁸I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the LORD.

21 Set thee up way-marks, make thee high heaps: set thine heart toward the highway, ¹⁹even the way ²⁰which thou wentest: ²¹turn again, O virgin of Israel, turn again to these thy cities.

22 ¶ How long wilt thou go about, O thou ²²backsliding daughter? for the LORD hath ²³created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man.

23 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, As yet they shall use this speech in the land of Judah, and in the cities thereof, when I shall bring again their captivity, The LORD bless thee, O habitation of justice, ²⁴and mountain of holiness.

24 And there shall dwell ²⁵in Judah itself, and in all the cities thereof together, husbandmen, and they ²⁶that go forth with flocks.

25 For I have satiated the weary soul, and I have replenished every sorrowful soul.

26 Upon this I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet unto me.

27 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, ²⁷that I will sow the house of Israel, looked for in the salvation of Israel, when the fulness of the Gentiles should be brought in. The perpetuity of the Father's love is affecting set forth in ver. 3 and 8; the principle there implied pervades the economy of redemption. The love wherewith God has loved his people is indeed everlasting, and, therefore, he has drawn them to the Cross by his loving-kindness, through the power of the Holy Ghost. The breaking of the Assyrian power was a great matter for the Jews, and a beautiful emblem of the breaking of the yoke of Satan by the power of Christ. The return of the Jews to Mount Zion, with songs of praise, and their flowing together to behold, and share in the goodness of the Lord, are terms expressive of an extraordinary influence of the Divine Spirit. A deep spirit of religion is clearly indicated, which would display its force in the building of the City and Temple, and in every other appropriate method connected with the common good. The language of the prophet is full of the Divine goodness—so full that no language is at all adequate to express it. Not until the Jews have been restored to the Divine favour, and the fulness of the Gentiles brought in, will its import have been completely realised. Ver. 18-21. Under this language we have a fine delineation of the working of grace in a contrite heart. The true penitent will be at no loss to understand it; and the child of God who has departed through an evil heart of unbelief, on being recovered by sovereign grace, will have a still more impressive conception of it. Ver. 22-40. The event referred to in ver. 22 is full of wonder; the man to be "compassed" was none other and the house of Judah, with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast.

28 And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; ^aso will I watch over them, to build, and to plant, saith the LORD.

29 In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

30 But ^bevery one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

31 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that ^cI will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah;

32 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand, to bring them out of the land of Egypt; (which my covenant they brake, ^dalthough I was an husband unto them, saith the LORD;)

33 But ^ethis shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, ^fI will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; ^gand will be their God, and they shall be my people.

34 And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, "Know the LORD: ^hfor they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: ⁱfor I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.

35 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; ^jThe LORD of hosts is his name:

36 If ^kthose ordinances depart from before me, saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.

37 Thus saith the LORD, If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, ^lI will also cast off all the seed of Israel, for all that they have done, saith the LORD.

38 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, ^mthat the city shall be built to the LORD, from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner.

39 And the measuring-line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Jeremiah's imprisonment; 16 his complaint to God. 26 The captivity confirmed. 36 A promise of a gracious return.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD ^ain the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was ^bthe eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar.

2 For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem: and ^cJeremiah the prophet was shut up in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.

3 For ^dZedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, ^eWherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, ^fBehold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;

4 And ^gZedekiah king of Judah shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes;

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be ^huntil I visit him, saith the LORD: ⁱthough ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper?

6 ¶ And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel the son of Shallum, thine uncle, shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in ^jAnathoth; ^kfor the right of redemption is thine to buy it.

8 So Hanameel, mine uncle's son, came to me ^lin the court of the prison, according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. ^mThen I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel, my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and weighed him the money, even ⁿseven-teen shekels of silver.

10 And I ^osubscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, ^pand weighed him the money in the balances.

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed ^qac-than Emmanuel, God with us—an event the result of Divine power, contrary to the established order of things. The covenant mentioned is easily explained; it implies nothing less than the New Covenant, which would be brought into full operation, and applied in all its blessings to the heart of the nation. The description here given of the work of grace on the soul, is one of the most precious in the Old Testament Scriptures. That work once wrought in the heart of every soul of the seed of Abraham, the redemption of Israel will be complete.

Chap. XXXII. 1-35. The king and the princes, as if bent on their own destruction, spurning the counsel of Jeremiah, determined to hold out to the last. The scenes which followed were terrific in an unusual degree. The king's sons were slain before his eyes; and then, to add to his misery, he was himself the subject of inhuman indignities. Ver. 24 describes the process by which the siege was carried on. A mount was raised so high as to equal, if not to overtop, the walls of the city. Moveable towers of wood also were usually placed upon these mounts, admitting of being carried from one spot to according to the law and custom, and that which was open :

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto ^aBaruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel, mine uncle's son, ^aand in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 ¶ And I charged Baruch before them, saying,

14 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, (both which is sealed,) and this evidence which is open, and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days :

15 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, ^aHouses, and fields, and vineyards, shall be possessed again in this land.

16 ¶ Now, when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, ^aI prayed unto the LORD, saying,

17 Ah Lord God! behold, ^athou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched-out arm, and ^athere is nothing ^atoo hard for thee ;

18 Thou shewest loving-kindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them : ^aThe Great, the Mighty God, ^athe LORD of hosts, is his name ;

19 Great in counsel, and mighty in ^awork : ^a(for thine eyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men : ^ato give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings :)

20 Which hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men ; ^aand hast made thee a name, as at this day ;

21 And hast ^abrought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and ^awith a strong hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with great terror ;

22 And hast given them this land, ^awhich thou didst swear to their fathers to give them, a land flowing with milk and honey ;

23 And they came in, and possessed it ; ^abut they obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law : they have done nothing of all that thou commandedst them to do ; ^atherefore thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them.

24 Behold the ^amounts, they are come unto the city to take it ; and the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans that fight against it, because of the sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence : and ^awhat thou hast spoken is come to pass ; and, behold, thou seest it.

25 And thou hast said unto me, O Lord God, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses ; ^afor the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

27 Behold, I am the LORD, the God of all flesh : ^ais there any thing too hard for me ?

28 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it.

29 And the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come and ^aset fire on this city, and burn it with the houses ^aupon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink-offerings unto other gods, to provoke me to anger.

30 For the children of Israel, and the children of Judah, have only done evil before me from their youth : for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the LORD.

31 For ^athis city hath been to me as ^aa provocation of mine anger and of my fury, from the day that they built it even unto this day, ^athat I should remove it from before my face ;

32 Because of all the evil of the children of Israel, and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, ^athey, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

33 And they have ^aturned unto me the ^aback, and not the face : though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction.

34 But they ^aset their abominations in the house which is called by my name, to defile it.

35 And ^athey built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech, ^awhich I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, ^ato cause Judah to sin.

36 ¶ And now therefore thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city, whereof ye say, ^aIt shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence ;

37 Behold, ^aI will gather them out of all countries whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in another, as might best further the objects of the assailants. Ver. 36-44. We have here another of those bright evangelical outbursts which mark even the most appalling predictions. Nothing can be more comforting and assuring than the language here held concerning the people; the gift of "one heart, and one way to fear the Lord, for the good of themselves and their children," implied everything. The promise to make an everlasting covenant with them, that the Lord would not turn away from them to do them good, but put his fear in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, ^aand I will cause them to dwell safely;

38 And ^athey shall be my people, and I will be their God:

39 And I will give them one heart, and one way, ^bthat they may fear me ^cfor ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them:

40 And ^cI will make an everlasting covenant with them, ^dthat I will not turn away ^efrom them, to do them good; ^fbut I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me.

41 Yea, ^gI will rejoice over them to do them good, ^hand I will plant them in this land ⁱassuredly with my whole heart, and with my whole soul.

42 For thus saith the LORD, ^jLike as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them.

43 And fields shall be bought in this land, whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

44 Men shall ^kbuy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them, and take witnesses ^lin the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south: ^mfor I will cause their captivity to return, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 A return from captivity is promised. 15 Christ the Branch of righteousness.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the second time, (while ⁿhe was yet shut up in the court of the prison,) saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the maker thereof, the LORD that formed it, to establish it; ^oThe LORD is his name;

3 ^pCall unto me, and I will answer thee, and ^qshew thee great and ^rmighty things, which thou knowest not.

4 For thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city, and concerning the houses of the kings of Judah, which are thrown down by the mounts, and by the sword;

5 They come to fight with the Chaldeans, but it is to fill them with the dead bodies of men, whom I have slain in mine their hearts that they should not depart from him, was so full of mercy and goodness as to assuage grief, subdue fear, and inspire hope. The Divine displeasure was now removed, and the Most High would "rejoice over them to do them good, and to plant them in the land with his whole heart, and with his whole soul." What language! How inspiring and consolatory! We have here the Gospel covenant, developed and applied, and mercy rejoicing amidst judgment.

Chap. XXXIII. 1-15. Jeremiah, while abounding in prophecy, was a man mighty in prayer, and his prayers were those of faith and affection to an extraordinary degree. The encouragement given him in ver. 3 to persevere is very remarkable. The language here addressed to him, however, may be applied by every pastor to him-anger, and in my fury, and for all whose wickedness ^cI have hid my face from this city.

6 Behold, I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, ^dand will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth.

7 And I ^ewill cause the captivity of Judah, and the captivity of Israel, to return, ^fand will build them, as at the first.

8 And ^gI will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me.

9 And it shall be to me ^ha name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them: and they shall ⁱfear and tremble for all the goodness, and for all the prosperity, that I procure unto it.

10 ^jThus saith the LORD, Again there shall be heard in this place, ^kwhich ye say shall be desolate without man and without beast, even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, that are desolate, without man, and without inhabitant, and without beast,

11 The ^lvoice of joy, and the voice of gladness; the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride; the voice of them that shall say, Praise the LORD of hosts: for the LORD is good; for his mercy ^mendureth for ever: and of them that shall bring ⁿthe sacrifice of praise into the house of the LORD. ^oFor I will cause to return the captivity of the land, as at the first, saith the LORD.

12 ^pThus saith the LORD of hosts, Again in this place, which is desolate without man and without beast, and ^qin all the cities thereof, shall be an habitation of shepherds causing their flocks to lie down.

13 In the cities of the mountains, in the cities of the vale, and in the cities of the south, and in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, shall the flocks pass again under the hands of him that telleth them, saith the LORD.

14 ^rBehold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will perform that good thing self, and taken as a rule of supplication by every Church. The wounds Jehovah had inflicted he alone could heal; and he graciously promised to bring "health and cure." His providence and his grace would so combine and work together as to effect the people's emancipation from darkness, corruption, and misery. The notice even of the heathen would be attracted by these signal displays of mercy: even they would acknowledge that the Lord had done great things for them; and they themselves would take up the statement, exultingly repeating, "The Lord hath done great things for us." Ver. 16-28. "The Lord our righteousness" is one of the most precious expressions in the Old Testament; that is the righteousness in which his people stand, and they rejoice in it; they deprecate the thought of any other. Christ is the king and priest of his Church, and through him, which I have promised unto the house of Israel, and to the house of Judah.

15 ¶ In those days, and at that time, will I cause ¹the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land.

16 In those days ²shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem ³shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, ⁴The LORD our Righteousness.

17 ¶ For thus saith the LORD, ⁴David shall ⁵never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel;

18 Neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt-offerings, and to kindle meat-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually.

19 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, saying,

20 Thus saith the LORD, ²If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season;

21 ³Then ⁴may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, ⁵that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers.

22 As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me.

23 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, saying,

24 Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which the LORD hath chosen, he hath even cast them off? ²Thus they have despised my people, that they should be no more a nation before them.

25 Thus saith the LORD, ³If my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth;

26 Then ⁴will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David my servant, so that I will not take ⁵any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, ⁶and have mercy on them.

6 Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem, 7 When the king of Babylon's army fought ¹against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against ²Lachish, and against Azekah: for these defended cities remained of the cities of Judah.

8 ¶ This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, ¹to proclaim liberty unto them;

9 That every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free; that none should ²serve himself of them, ³to wit, of a Jew his brother.

10 Now, ⁴when all the princes, and all the people, which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his man-servant, and every one his maid-servant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more; then they obeyed, and let ⁵them go.

11 But ⁶afterward they turned, and caused the servants and the handmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.

12 ¶ Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, the covenant of royalty made with David, and with his seed, is fulfilled, and the sacrifices of the dispensation which has passed away, will be superseded by his one offering, which, having magnified the law, and made it honourable, is effectual for ever to all that believe. It is for his people, however, to remember that they, too, through him, are "a royal priesthood," and that it behoves them, as such, to cultivate intelligence and purity, that they may "shine as lights in the world," and that the truth of the Gospel may sound forth from them into all the nations of the earth.

Chap. XXXIV. 1-17. It was the practice among the Jews, at the funeral of their kings, to prepare a bed of spices, of which they made a perfume by burning them, and therein to deposit the body. By the law of Moses, the children of Israel were not allowed to detain their brethren in perpetual bondage. After a service of six years they were compelled to liberate them. From ver. 8 and 9, it would seem that this law had been neglected; and Zedekiah, on the approach of the enemy, with a view to command the services of the bondmen, enjoined their masters to liberate them. A policy resembling this has frequently been pursued by nations where slavery

13 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, ¹I made a covenant with your fathers ²in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondmen, saying, 14 At ¹the end of seven years let ye go every man his brother an Hebrew, which hath ²been sold unto thee; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee: ³but your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear.

15 And ye were ⁴now turned, and had done right in my sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbour: ⁵and ye had made a covenant before me in the house ⁶which is called by my name:

16 But ⁷ye turned, and ⁸polluted my name, and caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom he had set at liberty at their pleasure, to return, and brought them into subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Ye have not hearkened unto me, in proclaiming liberty, every one to his brother, and every man to his neighbour: behold, ¹I proclaim a liberty for you, saith the LORD, to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and ²I will make you ³to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.

18 And I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, which have not performed the words of the covenant which they had made before me, ⁴when they cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof,

19 The princes of Judah, and the princes of Jerusalem, the eunuchs, and the priests, and all the people of the land, which passed between the parts of the calf;

20 I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, ⁵and into the hand of them that seek their life: ⁶and their dead bodies shall be for meat unto the fowls of the heaven, and to the beasts of the earth.

21 And Zedekiah king of Judah, and his princes, will I give into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 By the obedience of the Rechabites, 12 the Jews' disobedience is condemned.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, ¹in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,

2 Go unto ²the house of the Rechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the LORD, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

3 Then I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites;

4 And I brought them into the house of the LORD, ³into the chamber of the sons of Hanan the son of Igdaiah, ⁴a man of God, which ⁵was by ⁶the chamber of the princes, which ⁷was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, the keeper of the ⁸door.

5 And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups; and I said unto them, ⁹Drink ye wine.

6 But they said, We will drink no wine: ¹⁰for Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, commanded us, saying, ¹¹Ye shall drink no wine, ¹²neither ye, nor your sons for ever:

7 Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have ¹³any: but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; that ye may live many days in the land where ye ¹⁴be strangers.

8 Thus have ¹⁵we obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters; prevailed. In the present case, however, so soon as fear was removed by the retreat of the Chaldeans, faith was treacherously broken with these emancipated men, and the yoke was imposed afresh. A deed so iniquitous might well call down the Divine displeasure. Even among the heathen nations it would have been held as a cruel outrage; but occurring among a nation of brothers, and running in the face of an express law, the enormity and the injustice were extreme. Ver. 18-22. This dividing of the sacrifice, and passing between the parts, implied a sort of imprecation on the persons forming the covenant—if they broke it—that they themselves might be thus cut asunder, and sacrificed to the Divine justice. There was something peculiarly affecting in the transaction. It was a most impressive form of taking a mutual oath of each other, and adjudging themselves to death in the event of breaking it! When this was done, then the contracting parties feasted on the victim—an act which embodied and expressed the principle of friendship.

Chap. XXXV. 1-11. The family of Rechab has obtained great distinction from the instruction he left to his posterity, which indicated a lively concern to promote their moral and religious welfare. He enjoined them, not merely to abstain from the use of wine, but to live as the patriarchs of old had done—and, indeed, as many of their countrymen, the Arabs, continue to do at this day—without any fixed habitations or possessions, far from the society of cities, which are deemed the seeds and sources of immorality and disease—in the open country, feeding their flocks, and living on their produce. It was, of course, well that they had rules peculiar to themselves; but the trial was made to test their decision in adhering to them, and the reasons which they assigned for it were intended to expose the disobedience of the Jews. Jonadab lived about 300 years before this time; and there seems reason to believe that he himself had practised the rules he gave to his children, whom he trained up to habits of abstemiousness. The case is not a little remarkable, and its influence on subsequent generations was great. Injunctions given by parents on the brink of eternity can hardly fail to make an impression; for although they have no Divine authority in

9 Nor to build houses for us to dwell in; ¹neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed:

10 But we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.

11 But it came to pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

12 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Go and tell the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD.

14 The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment: notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; ¹but ye hearkened not unto me.

15 I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, ^mReturn ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers: but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

16 Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not hearkened unto me:

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, ⁿI will bring upon Judah, and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, all the evil that I have pronounced against them: because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered.

18 ¶ And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab

CHAPTER XXXVI.

¹ Baruch writeth Jeremiah's prophecy. ²⁰ Jehoiakim burneth the roll; ²⁷ his judgment. ³² Baruch writeth a new copy.

AND it came to pass, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that this word came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Take thee a roll of a book, and ^{*}write therein all the words that I have spoken unto thee against Israel, and against Judah, and ^bagainst all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, ^cfrom the days of Josiah, even unto this day.

3 It ^dmay be that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that ^ethey may return every man from his evil way; ^fthat I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.

4 Then Jeremiah called ^gBaruch the son of Neriah: and Baruch ^hwrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book.

5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I ⁱam shut up; I cannot go into the house of the LORD:

6 Therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, ^jthe words of the LORD, in the ears of the people, in the LORD's house upon the fasting-day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities.

7 It ^kmay be ^lthey will present their supplication before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way: ^mfor great ⁿis the anger and the fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people.

8 And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

9 And it came to pass, ⁿin the fifth year them, they yet take a strong hold on the susceptibilities of affectionate children. The Rechabites and the Nazarites bore some resemblance to what are called the Religious Orders of the Romish Church, more than any other persons in the Old Testament. It is to be observed, however, that they were neither "forbidden to marry," nor commanded to "abstain from meats," as is the case with Popery. They were under no restriction in these respects. Ver. 12-19. The Rechabites were, meanwhile, dwelling at Jerusalem, not because they had transgressed the rules of their family, but from fear of the invader. The lesson supplied by their refusal to take wine in obedience to their father Jonadab, was meant as a reproof to the Jews for their disobedience to the Divine commands. If Jonadab, an earthly parent, should thus for ages secure the obedience of his children, it was humbling indeed to Israel, that they were so ungrateful, depraved, and selfish, as to reject the commands of the Lord who brought them out of Egypt into Canaan, and who had done such great things for them. It is curious to observe the happy results of the obedience of the Rechabites. They appear to have preserved their piety and their morality in a high state of purity. Their habits were favourable to religion, and tended to promote their highest interests.

Chap. XXXVI. 1-19. We clearly learn from the opening verses of this chapter, that the foreknowledge of God implies no restraint on the will of men, whose liberty of action is in no degree affected. The case of Baruch writing from the mouth of Jeremiah is peculiarly interesting. The embodiment of the predictions in one record was much fitted to impress the thoughtless king and the princes; seeing that the prophet had laboured in the nation so long, and was continually uttering Divine admonitions. The past were apt to be overlaid by the present, and thus forgotten; but when the whole was brought together, it was fitted to produce an extra-of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, ^athat they proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

10 Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, in the chamber of ^cGemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the ²entry of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.

11 ¶ When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of ^pShaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD, 12 Then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber: and, lo, all the princes sat there, ^{even} ^qElishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and ^rElnathan the son of Achbor, and ^sGemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes.

13 Then Michaiah ^udeclared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of ^vNethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of ^wCushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah ^xtook the roll in his hand, and came unto them.

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, ^ythey were afraid, both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words.

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

18 Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote ^zthem with ink in the book.

19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, ^{aa}Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.

20 ¶ And they went in to the king into the court, but ^{bb}they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

21 So the king sent ^{cc}Jehudi to fetch the roll; and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber: ^{aa}and Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

22 Now the king sat in the winter-house, in the ninth month: and ^{bb}there was a fire on the hearth burning before him.

23 And it came to pass, ^{cc}that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, ^{dd}he cut it with the penknife, and cast ^{ee}it into the fire that ^{ff}was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that ^{gg}was on the hearth.

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, ^{hh}neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words.

25 Nevertheless ⁱⁱElnathan, and Delaiah, and Gemariah, had ^{jj}made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll; but he would not hear them.

26 But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son of ^{kk}Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, ^{ll}to take Baruch the scribe, and Jeremiah the prophet: ^{mm}but the LORD hid them.

27 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, (after that the king had burnt the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah,) saying, 28 Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burnt.

29 And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD, ⁿⁿThou hast burnt this roll, saying, ^{oo}Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king of Judah, ^{pp}He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: ^{qq}and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.

31 And I will ^{rr}punish him, and his seed, and his servants, for their iniquity; and ^{ss}I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them: but they hearkened not.

32 ¶ Then ^{tt}he took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah; ^{uu}who wrote therein, from the mouth of Jeremiah, all the words of the ordinary effect on men not entirely hardened. Accordingly, we find the princes were "afraid, both one and other," and deemed it expedient to communicate with the king. Ver. 20-32. The Winter House was a warm apartment suited to the winter months in Palestine, where there was frequently snow on the ground, although it did not last long; and such is the case at the present day. The king's conduct on this occasion shewed that he, at least, was ripe for destruction. He despised Jehovah in his servant, the prophet. The same spirit which prompted the burning of the sacred roll would have led to the destruction of the man that dictated it, if required by a wicked policy. To aggravate his conduct, a portion of Jeremiah's predictions had been already fulfilled, such as the captivity of Jehoiakim, and his subjection to Nebuchadnezzar. It deserves notice, that the chief of the princes shuddered at the king's impiety, imploring him not to burn the roll. When men have learned to despise the Word of God, it is a proof that they have no reverence for its Author, and that they are intent on transgressing its injunctions. Each man may estimate his own spiritual condition by ascertaining the light in which he views the Holy Scriptures. He who prizes them above rubies, and to whom they are sweeter book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burnt in the fire: ¹and there were added besides unto them many ⁶like words.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

¹ The Egyptians having caused the Chaldeans to raise the siege of Jerusalem, Zedekiah sendeth to Jeremiah, 6 who prophesieth the Chaldeans' return and victory. 11 He is beaten, and put in prison.

AND king Zedekiah the son of Josiah reigned instead of ²Coniah the son of Jehoiakim, whom Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon ¹made king in the land of Judah.

² But ²neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, which he spake by ¹the prophet Jeremiah.

⁴ Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people; ¹for they had not put him into prison.

⁶ ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

⁸ And the Chaldeans shall come again, and ¹fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire.

⁹ Thus saith the LORD, ²"Deceive not ³yourselves, saying, The Chaldeans shall surely depart from us: for they shall not depart.

Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, to ²separate himself thence in the midst of the people.

¹³ And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah; and he took Jeremiah the prophet, saying, ²"Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans.

¹⁴ Then said Jeremiah, It is ¹false; I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes.

¹⁵ Wherefore ¹the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, and ²put him in prison, in the house of Jonathan the scribe; for they had made that the prison.

¹⁶ ¶ When Jeremiah was entered into the dungeon, and into the ¹cabins, and Jeremiah had remained there many days;

¹⁷ Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out; and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.

¹⁹ Where are now ¹your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land?

²⁰ Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: let my supplication, I pray thee, ²be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there.

²¹ Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah ¹into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

¹ Jeremiah is put into the dungeon. 7 Ebed-melech getteth him some enlargement. 14 His counsel to the king.

THEN Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and Pashur than honey, and the honeycomb, needs no further proof that he is Divinely taught, and that his heart is right with God.

Chap. XXXVII. 1-12. Nebuchadrezzar having made Zedekiah king, entered into an agreement with him, in the name of Jehovah, to pay allegiance to Babylon. He was, therefore, bound to keep faith even with the invader. But Zedekiah despised his oath, and, determining to burst his fetters and assert the liberties of his country, he formed an alliance with the king of Egypt, and rebelled against Nebuchadrezzar. Pharaoh fulfilled his engagement to the extent of sending an army to relieve Jerusalem, which led the Chaldeans to raise the siege, and for a season to remove from the city. It was during this solemn interval that Zedekiah sent his message to Jeremiah, who had, during the preceding part of his reign, been left at liberty. The hope inspired by this event was not to be fulfilled. Jeremiah distinctly assured the king that nothing could prevent the vengeance to which the nation was doomed; and that the Lord, rather than suffer his purposes to be disappointed, would work miracles on behalf of the invader. Jeremiah's counsel was deemed treason; but had it been taken, it would have prevented much calamity and a fearful amount of slaughter. Ver. 13-21. The prisons of the East bear no resemblance to ours. They are not simply separate buildings, but complex edifices, supplying accommodation both for the prisoners and the criminal judges. Jonathan's house, perhaps, had become a prison in consequence of his being the Royal Scribe, or, as we would term him, the Secretary of State.

Chap. XXXVIII. 1-13. It is not a little remarkable the son of Malchiah, ^aheard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, ^bHe that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

3 Thus saith the LORD, ^c'This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

4 Therefore the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, let this man be put to death; for ^dthus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them: for this man seeketh not the ^ewelfare of this people, but the hurt.

5 Then Zedekiah the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not ^fhe that can do any thing against you.

6 Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him ^ginto the dungeon of Malchiah the son of ^hHammelech, that was in the court of the prison: ⁱand they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon ^jthere was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

7 ¶ Now, when ^kEbed-melech ^lthe Ethiopian, one of the eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon, (the king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin,)

8 Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's house, and spake to the king, saying,

9 My lord the king, ^mthese men have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and he ⁿis like to die for hunger in the place where he is: for ^othere is no more bread in the city.

10 Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty men ^pwith thee, and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts, and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah.

12 And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said unto Jeremiah, Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine arm holes under the cords. And Jeremiah did so.

13 So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: ^aand Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

14 ¶ Then Zedekiah the king ^bsent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the ^cthird entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.

15 Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare ^dit unto thee, ^ewilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me?

16 So Zedekiah the king ^fswore secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, ^gAs the LORD liveth, ^hthat made us this soul, I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand ⁱof these men that seek thy life.

17 Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, ^jIf thou wilt assuredly go forth unto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burnt with fire; and thou shalt live, and thine house:

18 But ^kif thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, ^lthen shall this city be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and thou shalt not escape out of their hand.

19 And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, ^mI am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they ⁿmock me.

20 But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee. ^oObey, I beseech thee, the voice of the LORD, which I speak unto thee: so it shall be well unto thee, and thy soul shall live.

21 But ^pif thou refuse to go forth, ^qthis is the word that the LORD hath shewed me:

22 And, behold, ^rall the women that are left in the king of Judah's house ^sshall be brought forth to the king of Babylon's princes, and those ^twomen shall say, ^u'Thy friends ^vhave set thee on, and have pre-that the only friend of Jeremiah, under these most perilous circumstances, was an Ethiopian, who acted a part which will endear his name to all generations. It is probable, however, that this compassionate man was a slave, which would greatly add to the merit of his conduct. Josephus tells us that slaves were brought in Solomon's time from Ethiopia; a practice which was subsequently followed by the Greeks and the Romans. The kings of the East had their wardrobes always well furnished, since garments were a usual present to ambassadors and others who happened to visit the palace. The reasonable and earnest pleading of Ebed-melech was irresistible; and having obtained the king's authority, he lost no time in effecting his compassionate purpose. It is not a little strange that such inhumanity should have prevailed amongst the Jews towards prisoners their brethren, accused of no immorality. One would have supposed that of all places a well was the most unsuited for a human being; indeed, in ordinary circumstances, it was but a prolonged species of execution. It is a fact, however, that, in the East, wells are still used as prisons. So lately as 1842, the servants of Captain Conolly were imprisoned at Bokhara, in a place termed the "Black-well." This horrible dungeon is a circular pit about seventeen feet deep and twenty-one feet in diameter. It has a brick roof, with a hole in it, through which the criminals are lowered down by a rope. There were no fewer than eighty alleged criminals in the well! This horrid pit, which was very damp, was cleansed only once in every fifteen days! The food of the captives was a small piece of bread in the morning, and the same at night. It is difficult to conceive of anything more ailed against thee; ^cthy feet are sunk in the mire, and they are turned away back.

23 So ^dthey shall bring out all thy wives and thy children to the Chaldeans: and thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon; and thou ^eshalt cause this city to be burnt with fire.

24 ¶ Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if ^fthe princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death; also what the king said unto thee:

26 Then thou shalt say unto them, ¶ I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan's house, to die there.

27 Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: ^gand he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. So they ^hleft off speaking with him; for the matter was not perceived.

28 So Jeremiah ⁱabode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 Jerusalem is taken. 4 Zedekiah is made blind, and sent to Babylon. 8 The city is ruined, 9 and the people carried into captivity.

IN ^athe ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

2 And in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in ^bthe fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city ^cwas broken up.

3 And ^dall the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate, even ^eNergal-sharezzer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris, Nergal-sharezzer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls: and he went out the way of the plain.

5 But the ^a'Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and overtook Zedekiah ^bin the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon ^cto Riblah, in the land of Hamath, where he ^dgave judgment upon him.

6 Then the king of Babylon ^eslew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes: also the king of Babylon ^fslew all the nobles of Judah.

7 Moreover, ^ghe put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him with ^hchains, to carry him to Babylon.

8 ¶ And the Chaldeans ⁱburnt the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, ^jand brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

9 Then ^kNebuzar-adan the ^lcaptain of the guard ^mcarried away captive into Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

10 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard ⁿleft of the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields ^oat the same time.

11 ¶ Now Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon ^pgave charge concerning Jeremiah ^qto Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying, 12 Take him, and ^rlook well to him, and do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

13 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-sharezzer, Rab-mag, and all the king of Babylon's princes;

14 Even they sent, and ^stook Jeremiah out of the court of the prison, and committed him unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home: so he dwelt among the people.

15 ¶ Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, ^twhile he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying, dreadful. There the poor wretches were to spend their time, night and day, awake or asleep, without even a pallet of straw to lie on! Ver. 14-28. Zedekiah might well be afraid of mockery, since he had acted a part alike false and base, and by so doing had become the author of his country's destruction; for it was his rebellion which caused the invasion of the Chaldeans. While, therefore, the king was in peril from his foes, he was without the support of inward rectitude, opposed by the prophet, and execrated by the people.

Chap. XXXIX. 1-8. There were two roads from Jerusalem to Jericho. One passed over the Mount of Olives, and as this might have retarded the king's flight, he chose the way of the plain, and was overtaken near Jericho, probably about sixteen or eighteen miles from Jerusalem. He seems to have proposed passing the Jordan on his way to Egypt, as the Egyptians were his professed but useless allies. The unhappy fugitive, on being seized, was at once carried to the presence of the conquering invader, who seems to have instituted a sort of formal trial, by which Zedekiah was convicted of treachery and rebellion, and condemned accordingly. Nothing can exceed the barbarity of the whole affair. The slaughter of his sons, and of all the nobles of Judah, was an act of wanton inhumanity; and the putting out of Zedekiah's eyes, after beholding these horrible scenes, was the consummation of his misery. The prolongation of such a life was far worse than death. This putting out the eyes of great offenders was common. In some cases the eye was torn out, in others the vision was destroyed by certain corrosive applications. It is a fact that even now, in the East, the eyes of captives are often scooped from the sockets, or destroyed by passing a red-hot iron over them! Ver. 9-18. Good deeds are never thrown away. When things had reached a climax, the benevolent Ebed-melech was not forgotten for his humanity to the prophet, whose life he was the means 17 But "I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD; and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, "but thy life shall be for a prey unto thee; "because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER XL

¹ Jeremiah, being set free by Nebuzar-adan, goeth to Gedaliah. ⁷ The dispersed Jews repair to him. ¹³ Ishmael's conspiracy.

THE word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, "after that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go from ^bRamah, when he had taken him, being bound in "chains among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon.

2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and said unto him, "The LORD thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place.

3 Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath said: "because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you.

4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which "were upon thine hand. If it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come, and I will "look well unto thee; but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear: behold, "all the land is before thee: whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go.

5 Now, while he was not yet gone back, he said, "Go back also to Gedaliah the son of "Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people; "or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard "gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go.

6 Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to "Mizpah, and dwelt of preserving. He appears to have been afraid of the princes, whom he had offended by this act; but the Lord assured him that, come what might, he should be safe even amidst surrounding and all-pervading destruction. It is worthy of note, that his kindness to the prophet and his confidence in God are the special reasons of this gracious promise of special protection. It is clear that he was influenced by no inferior motive. He hazarded his life for the prophet, and he received a prophet's reward.

Chap. XL. 1-6. For a little there is a suspension of prophecy, which gives place to history. The Jews were so infatuated that they could not be brought to acknowledge the hand of the Lord, and the truth of Jeremiah's with him among the people that were left in the land.

7 ¶ Now, when "all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of "the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon;

8 Then they "came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, "even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and "Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai "the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of "a Maachathite, and their men.

9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, "swore unto them, and to their men, saying, "Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, to "serve the Chaldeans which will come unto us; but ye, "gather ye wine, and "summer-fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.

11 Likewise, "when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan;

12 Even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer-fruits very much.

13 ¶ Moreover, "Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, 14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that Baalis the king of the "Ammonites hath sent "Ishmael the son of Nethaniah to "slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam "believed them not.

15 Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, "Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: "wherefore predictions, even after they were realised. The Gentiles, however, the instruments of God's vengeance, clearly perceived it, and powerfully argued upon it. Even they felt that they were but instruments in the hand of God for accomplishing the purposes of his displeasure. Jerusalem once taken, the conquest of Judaea easily followed, which led to the flight of the Jewish army. Ver. 7-16. Johanan displayed a laudable spirit of fidelity to the governor. The intelligence he had received left on his mind no doubt of the danger which impended over Gedaliah. Believing this, and full of alarm, he was prepared to hazard his own life to avert such a calamity; but Gedaliah, conscious of integrity, was confident in the absence of sufficient grounds. He displayed a noble magnanimity at the expense of his life. Under the cir-should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish?

16 But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, "Thou shalt not do this thing; for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

CHAPTER XLI.

1 Ishmael treacherously killeth Gedaliah and others.

11 Johanan recovereth the captives.

NOW it came to pass in the seventh month, that ^aIshmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed-royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; ^band there they did eat bread together in Mizpah.

2 Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and ^csmote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, with the sword, and slew him, ^dwhom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

3 Ishmael also ^eslew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.

4 And it came to pass, the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it,

5 That there came certain from ^fShechem, from ^gShiloh, and from ^hSamaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them ⁱto the house of the LORD.

6 And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, ^jweeping all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam.

7 And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah ^kslew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him.

8 But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, ^lSlay us not; for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbore, and slew them not among their brethren.

9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men (whom he had slain ^abecause of Gedaliah) was it which ^bAsa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over ^cto the Ammonites.

11 ¶ But when ^dJohanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done, 12 Then they took all the men, and went ^eto fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by ^fthe great waters that are in Gibeon.

13 Now it came to pass, that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, then they were glad.

14 So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about, and returned, and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah.

15 But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah ^gescaped from Johanan with ^height men, and went to the Ammonites.

16 Then took Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom he had recovered from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, (after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam,) ⁱ*even* mighty men of war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he had brought again from Gibeon:

circumstances, he ought, doubtless, to have examined very closely into the foundation of Johanan's report, and to have acted accordingly. After such an intimation, it was the height of imprudence to invite his intending murderer, with his associates, to banquet with him. The event, however, while it served to illustrate character, brought additional judgments on the incorrigible remnant of Israel. The portraiture here presented of Ishmael is one of the most revolting to be found anywhere in the Word of God. Rarely has there been such a blending of the tender with the ferocious. While his hands were stained by the blood of innocence, he commingled his tears and lamentations with those of fresh victims, whom, under the mask of kindness, he conducted to slaughter. Lord, what is man?

Chap. XLI. 1-18. In the East hospitality is deemed a pledge of amity and protection, and, therefore, held sacred. These circumstances peculiarly enhance the wickedness of Ishmael, and the men that accompanied him. The shaving the beard was a sign of mourning, for which there was ample grounds in the destruction which had overtaken the country. Ishmael seemed particularly at home in the accomplishment of perfidious designs. He hastens to join the mourning multitude, by which he commands their confidence; thus putting them off their guard, and preparing them for destruction. It is strange that men, with history before them, and the world around them, should require any further demonstrations of the utter depravity of human nature!

CHAPTER XLII.

1 Johanan and others, promising obedience, desire Jeremiah to enquire of God. 7 Jeremiah's answer. 19 Their hypocrisy reproved.

THEN ^aall the captains of the forces, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and ^bJezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people, ^cfrom the least even unto the greatest, ^dcame near,

2 And said unto Jeremiah the prophet, Let, we beseech thee, our supplication ¹be accepted before thee, ^eand pray for us unto the LORD thy God, ^feven for all this remnant; (for we are ¹left but a few of many, as thine eyes do behold us;)

3 That the LORD thy God ^gmay shew us the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that we may do.

4 Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard ^hyou; behold, ⁱI will pray unto the LORD your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that ^jwhatsoever thing the LORD shall answer you, I will declare ^kit unto you; ^lI will keep nothing back from you.

5 Then they said to Jeremiah, ^mThe LORD be a true and faithful witness between us, ⁿif we do not even according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us.

6 Whether ^oit be good, or whether ^pit be evil, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; ^qthat it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.

7 ¶ And it came to pass ^rafter ten days, that the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah.

8 Then called he ^sJohanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces which ^twere with him, and all the people, from the least even to the greatest,

9 And said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, ^uunto whom ye sent me to present your supplication before him;

10 If ye will still abide in this land, ^vthen will I build you, and not pull ^wyou down; and I will plant you, and not pluck ^xyou up: for ^yI repent me of the evil that I have done unto you.

11 Be not ^zafraid of the king of Babylon, of whom ye are afraid; be not afraid of him, saith the LORD: ^{aa}for I am with you to save you, and to deliver you from his hand.

12 And I will shew mercies unto you, ^{ab}that he may have mercy upon you, and cause you to return to your own land.

Chap. XLII. 1-6. Johanan, notwithstanding his magnanimous conduct on the occasion already referred to, was clearly a man without piety. Notwithstanding fair appearances, he and the people soon gave proofs that they were without the fear of God. The encouragements presented by the prophet to repentance were great indeed, but all thrown away on a perverse people. Ver. 7-22. In the present instance the Divine answer was delayed to such a period as gave the inquirers time to cool. Had it come earlier, it is probable they might have displayed less of a spirit of rebellion; although, with hearts unchanged, the result would have been the

CHAPTER XLIII.

1 Johanan carrieth Jeremiah into Egypt. 8 Jeremiah prophesieth the conquest of Egypt by the Babylonians.

AND it came to pass, ¹that when Jeremiah ²had made an end of speaking unto all the people ³all the words of the same. They appear, at the first, to have pleased the prophet, who hoped better things of them than they deserved; but his Master soon enabled him to unmask them—"Ye dissemble in your hearts," was language which served to shew their true character. They employed his intercession, with an assurance of prompt obedience, whatever the answer might be; but they did not obey the voice of the Lord; and, accordingly, they brought upon themselves destruction by the sword, the famine, and the pestilence. The goodness of wicked men is as the morning cloud, and the early dew, which soon pass away. Nothing is more common in seasons of LORD their God, for which the LORD their God had sent him to them, even all these words.

2 Then spake ^aAzariah the son of Hoshaiah, and ^aJohanan the son of Kareah, and ^aall the proud men, saying unto Jeremiah, 'Thou speakest falsely; the LORD our God hath not sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there:

3 But ^aBaruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for ^ato deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they might put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon.

4 So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, ¹obeyed not the voice of the LORD, ¹to dwell in the land of Judah;

5 But Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, ¹took all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations whither they had been driven, to dwell in the land of Judah;

7 So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD. Thus came they even to ^oTahpanhes.

8 ¶ Then ^pcame the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,

9 Take ^qgreat stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brick-kiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;

10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will send and take Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid; and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.

11 And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver such as are for death, to death; and such as are for captivity, to captivity; and such as are for the sword, to the sword.

12 And I will kindle a fire ^rin the houses of the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away cap-

CHAPTER XLIV.

¹ The desolation of Judah for idolatry. ¹⁵ The Jews' obstinacy, ²⁰ threatened. The destruction of Egypt foretold.

THE word that came to Jeremiah ^aconcerning all the Jews which dwell in the land of Egypt, which dwell at ^bMigdol, and at ^cTahpanhes, and at ^dNoph, and in the country of ^ePathros, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, 'Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and, behold, this day they are ^aa desolation, and no man dwelleth therein;

3 Because ^hof their wickedness which they have committed, to provoke me to anger, in that they went to burn incense, and to serve other ¹gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

4 Howbeit ⁱI sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not ¹this abominable thing that I hate.

5 But ^mthey hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to ⁿburn no incense unto other gods.

6 Wherefore ^omy fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are ^pwasted and desolate, as at this day.

7 Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, Wherefore commit ye this great evil ^qagainst your souls, to cut off from you ^rman and woman, child ^aand suckling, out of ¹Judah, ^tto leave you none to remain;

8 In that ^uye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, ^vthat ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might be ^wa curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have ^xye forgotten the wickedness of suffering and alarm, than for the wicked to be all prostration, penitence, and promise. The hour of trial once gone, they will be found still true to their own perversity. No mere judgments can change the heart of stone into a heart of flesh.

Chap. XLIII. 1-7. "All the proud men" acted a part agreeable to their character, insulting the prophet, and charging him with falsehood! Notwithstanding that his chief predictions had been fulfilled in a manner the most terrible, they treated him as an impostor, declaring, "Thou speakest falsely: the Lord our God hath not sent thee." We have nothing more awfully impious than the language of these men, whom no judgments could either teach or subdue. The most affecting part of the narrative is, that "all the people" united in the rejection of the prophet and the message of his Lord.

Ver. 8-13. This new course on the part of the remnant of Israel brought forth a new prediction touching Egypt. The Jews had fled thither for safety; but there Nebuchadnezzar, as the instrument of Divine Providence, would follow, find, and destroy them! Where God has a purpose to accomplish, instruments are always ready, and their use is always efficient. Egypt was a great and wealthy nation; but neither its numbers nor its riches were of the slightest avail when the scourge of Providence arrived. The invading power burnt their temples and their idols; thus giving them practical proof of the utter impotence of their false deities to save them.

Chap. XLIV. 1-18. The peculiar depth of the depravity of the nation at this time is strikingly indicated by the conduct of the women, who appear to have been the chief agents in promoting the worship of idols. The your fathers, and the ²wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and ^athe wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

10 They ^bare not ³humbled even unto this day, ^cneither have they feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you, and before your fathers.

11 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, ^dI will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

12 And ^eI will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine; and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 For ^fI will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence:

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the ^hwhich they ⁱhave a desire to return to dwell there: ^jfor none shall return but such as shall escape.

15 ¶ Then ^kall the men which knew that their wives had burnt incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, ^la great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the LORD, ^mwe will not hearken unto thee:

17 But we will certainly do ⁿwhatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the ^oqueen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her, ^pas we have done, we, and ^qour fathers, our kings, and our princes, ^rin the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for ^sthen had we plenty of ^tvictuals, and were well, and saw no evil.

18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her, ^uwe have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.

19 And when we burnt incense to the prophet's rebukes, therefore, came on them the more heavily, producing, not repentance, but resentment. It is remarkable that in some parts of the East, such as Georgia, remnants of this practice remain to the present hour: before feasting it is customary to go out and raise the eyes to the heavens, and to pour out a cup of wine on the ground. Ver. 19-30. This language is full of impiety, which becomes the more revolting as proceeding from the lips of gentle woman. Their hearts appear to have been so filled with the love of idolatry as to exclude queen of heaven, and poured out drink-offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink-offerings unto her, without our men?

20 ¶ Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,

21 The incense that ye burnt in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind?

22 So that the LORD could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day.

23 Because ye have burnt incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

24 Moreover, Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, ^uHear the word of the LORD, ^vall Judah that are in the land of Egypt;

25 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, ^wYe and your wives have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, ^xWe will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.

26 Therefore hear ye the word of the LORD, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt; Behold, ^yI have sworn by my great name, saith the LORD, ^zthat my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, ^aThe Lord God liveth.

27 Behold, I ^bwill watch over them for evil, and not for good; and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt ^cshall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them.

28 Yet ^da small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of ^eEgypt into the land of Judah; and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose words shall stand, mine, or theirs.

29 ¶ And this shall be a sign unto you, every sentiment even of natural religion. There was no hope of a people whose females were so far gone; for, as a matter of course, they would instil their own principles into the hearts of the children, thus rearing successively generations of idolaters. A people who deliberately affirmed, "We will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth," is ready for destruction. The prophet's message despised, and himself insulted, nothing remained but vengeance. The domestic relation involves contact so close, that if the saith the LORD, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall surely stand against you for evil:

30 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will give Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life, as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life.

CHAPTER XLV.

1 Baruch being dismayed, 4 Jeremiah instructed and comforted him.

THE word that Jeremiah the prophet spake unto Baruch the son of Neriah, when he had written these words in a book at the mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto thee, O Baruch;

3 Thou didst say, Woe is me now! for the LORD hath added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest.

4 Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus, Behold, that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not: for, behold, I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the LORD; but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

mothers and the wives be steeped in idolatry, all hope of reformation is shut out. The influence exerted by them on their husbands and on their children is only for evil; and the result is, to prepare nations for destruction.

Chap. XLV. 1-5. The Divine condescension is here manifested towards Baruch, the amanuensis of Jeremiah, who appears to have been a young man of education and talents, enjoying the confidence of the prophet, and aiding him in the record of his predictions. His service was perilous, and he seems to have been afraid of the consequences which might flow from it. The assurance given him, however, was such as to soothe his sorrow and to inspire hope. The promise given him as to his life was absolute, wherever he might go; but in such a day of rebuke, blasphemy, and desolation, it was not for him to "seek great things for himself." It behoved him to be satisfied with the pledge of Divine power for his personal preservation. They who will serve the Lord in seasons of peculiar danger, may sometimes peril, if not sacrifice, their own interests; but let them assure themselves that in the end they will be no losers. The Lord knows what is best for them, and he will not fail to give it.

Chap. XLVI. 1-12. The nations now doomed to destruction had all taken a prominent part, at some time or other, in injuring Israel. The predictions here set forth were not all delivered at the same period. To some the date is annexed, but in the case of others it is left uncertain. "The day of the Lord," mentioned in ver. 10, was a day of vengeance to Pharaoh and his army 18 As I live, saith the King, whose name is The LORD of hosts, Surely as Tabor is among the mountains, and as Carmel by the sea, so shall he come.

19 O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt, furnish thyself to go into captivity: for Noph shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant.

20 Egypt is like a very fair heifer, but destruction cometh; it cometh out of the north.

21 Also her hired men are in the midst of her like fattened bullocks; for they also are turned back, and are fled away together: they did not stand, because the day of their calamity was come upon them, and the time of their visitation.

22 The voice thereof shall go like a serpent; for they shall march with an army, and come against her with axes, as hewers of wood.

23 They shall cut down her forest, saith the LORD, though it cannot be searched; because they are more than the grasshoppers, and are innumerable.

24 The daughter of Egypt shall be confounded; she shall be delivered into the hand of the people of the north.

25 The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saith, Behold, I will punish the multitude of No, and Pharaoh, and Egypt, with their gods, and their kings; even Pharaoh, and all them that trust in him:

26 And I will deliver them into the hand of those that seek their lives, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of his servants; and afterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old, saith the LORD.

27 ¶ But fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel: for, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid.

CHAPTER XLVII.

The destruction of the Philistines.

THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Philistines, before that Pharaoh smote Gaza.

2 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, waters rise up out of the north, and shall be an overflowing flood, and shall overflow the land, and all that is therein; the city, and them that dwell therein: then the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl.

3 At the noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his strong horses, at the rushing of his chariots, and at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers shall not look back to their children for feebleness of hands;

4 Because of the day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines, and to cut off from Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remaineth; for the LORD will spoil the Philistines, the remnant of the country of Caphtor.

5 Baldness is come upon Gaza; Ashkelon is cut off with the remnant of their valley: how long wilt thou cut thyself?

6 O thou sword of the LORD, how long wilt it be ere thou be quiet? Put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still.

7 How can it be quiet, seeing the LORD hath given it a charge against Ashkelon, and against the sea-shore? there hath he appointed it.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

1 The judgment of Moab for several corruptions; 47 her restoration.

AGAINST Moab thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Woe unto Nebo! for it is spoiled; Kiriathaim is confounded and taken; Misgab is confounded and dismayed.

2 There shall be no more praise of for their transgressions against the Lord, and especially for the part they had acted toward the Jews. "The day of the Lord," in this way, comes to signify the day of judgment in the New Testament, of which all other days of vengeance are but the earnest and forerunners. Ver. 13-28. While the foregoing prophecy doubtless relates to Nebuchadnezzar's success in Egypt, it also points to the invasion of the country by the king of Babylon, and his entire conquest of it, which took place about seventeen years after the destruction of Jerusalem. As had been foretold by Jeremiah, those unbelieving Jews who took shelter in Egypt were, with few exceptions, cut off. The repetition, therefore, of former promises to the nation, made in ver. 27, was doubtless intended to revive hope of better times, of a return to the land of their fathers.

Chap. XLVII. 1-7. Among the other nations exposed to the hostility of Nebuchadnezzar, the Philistines are enumerated; and the disasters here set forth probably befell them during the siege of Tyre, when Nebuchadnezzar ravaged their country. Tyre, when Jeremiah is of all the prophets the most tender, ver. 6 presents one of the most remarkable strokes of pathos anywhere to be found in his writings. He here apostrophises the sword, imploring it to cease from its ravages; but he instantly checks himself by the counter question, "How can it be quiet till it shall have accomplished the work to which thou hast appointed it?" The miseries of war, in every age, have been such as to render it a principal curse of the nations. The ravages even of famine and of pestilence have been small compared with it. The principle of war is inherent in human nature, and there is no sure guarantee for the peace of the world but the universal diffusion of the Gospel of Christ, which will, without fail, produce peace on earth and good will among men.

Chap. XLVIII. 1-47. The most remarkable of these verses is the 10th, invoking a curse on the man that does the "work of the Lord deceitfully," and that "keeps back his sword from blood." The imprecation is terrible, implying the peculiar guilt of those to be punished, and the temptations to which the instruments might be exposed to deal unfaithfully. The expression has been frequently applied to the office of the Christian ministry, and, doubtless, the principle has great force in that direction; at the same time it must be remembered Moab: in ^bHeshbon they have devised evil against it; ^ccome, and let us cut it off from being a nation: also thou shalt be ^dcut down, O Madmen; the sword shall ^epursue thee.

3 A voice of crying shall be from Horonaim, spoiling and great destruction.

4 ^dMoab is destroyed; her little ones have caused a cry to be heard.

5 For in the going up of ^eLuhith ^fcontinual weeping shall go up; for in the going down of Horonaim the enemies have heard a cry of destruction.

6 Flee, save your lives, and be like ^gthe heath in the wilderness.

7 ^hFor ⁱ'because thou hast trusted in thy works, and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken; and ^j'Chemosh shall go forth into captivity with ^khis priests and his princes together.

8 And the spoiler shall come upon every city, and no city shall escape: the valley also shall perish, and the plain shall be destroyed, as the LORD hath spoken.

9 Give wings unto Moab, that it may flee and get away: for ^l'the cities thereof shall be desolate, without any to dwell therein.

10 ^m'Cursed be he that doeth the work of the LORD ⁿ'deceitfully, and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.

11 ^oMoab hath been at ease from his youth, and he hath settled on his lees, and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity: therefore his taste ^p'remained in him, and his scent is not changed.

12 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will send unto him wanderers, that shall cause him to wander, and shall empty his vessels, and break their bottles.

13 And Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, ^q'as the house of Israel was ashamed of Beth-el their confidence.

14 ^rHow say ye, ^s'We are mighty and strong men for the war?

15 Moab is ^t'spoiled, and gone up out of her cities, and ^u'his chosen young men are ^v'gone down to the slaughter, saith the King, whose name is The LORD of hosts.

16 The calamity of Moab is near to come, and his affliction hasteth fast.

17 All ye that are about him, ^w'bemoan him; and all ye that know his name, say, ^x'How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod!

18 Thou daughter that dost inhabit ^y'Dibon, come down from thy glory, and sit in thirst; for the spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee, and he shall destroy thy strong holds.

19 O ^c'inhabitant of ^d'Aroer, stand by the way, and espy; ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done?

20 Moab is confounded; for it is broken down: howl and cry; tell ye it in ^e'Arnon, that Moab is spoiled,

21 And judgment is come upon the plain country; upon Holon, and upon ^f'Jahazah, and upon Mephaath,

22 And upon ^g'Dibon, and upon Nebo, and upon Beth-diblathaim,

23 And upon ^h'Kiriathaim, and upon Beth-gamul, and upon ⁱ'Beth-meon, 24 And upon ^j'Kerioth, and upon ^k'Bozrah, and upon all the cities of the land of Moab, far or near.

25 The horn of Moab is cut off, and his arm is broken, saith the LORD.

26 ^lMake ye him drunken; ^m'for he magnified himself against the LORD: Moab also shall ⁿ'wallow in his vomit, and he also shall be in derision.

27 For was not Israel a derision unto thee? was he found among thieves? for since thou spakest of him, thou ^o'skippedst for joy.

28 O ye that dwell in Moab, ^p'leave the cities, and dwell in the rock, and be ^q'like the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth.

29 We have heard the pride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud,) his loftiness, and his arrogance, and his pride, and the haughtiness of his heart.

30 I ^r'know his wrath, saith the LORD: but it shall not be so; ^s'his lies shall not so effect it.

31 Therefore ^t'will I howl for Moab, and I will cry out for all Moab; mine heart shall mourn for the men of ^u'Kir-heres.

32 O vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of ^v'Jazer: thy plants are gone over the sea, they reach even to the sea of Jazer: ^w'the spoiler is fallen upon thy summer-fruits, and upon thy vintage.

33 And ^x'joy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field, and from the land of Moab; and I have ^y'caused wine to fail from the wine-presses: none shall tread with shouting; their shouting shall be no shouting.

34 From ^z'the cry of Heshbon even unto ^{aa}'Elealeh, and even unto ^{ab}'Jahaz, have they uttered their voice, from ^{ac}'Zoar even unto Horonaim, as an heifer of three years old: for the waters also of ^{ad}'Nimrim shall be ^{ae}'desolate.

35 Moreover, I will cause to cease in Moab, saith the LORD, ^{af}'him that offereth in the high places, and him that burneth incense to his gods.

36 Therefore ^{ag}'mine heart shall sound that this was not its original import. It is well that the Sunday-school teacher also should lay it to heart, forasmuch as it is impossible for him to overdo in the way of prayerful, painstaking preparation for his noble office. He who thus prepares most will in the end succeed best; whereas they who neglect such preparation may be viewed as men who run unsent, and who will never profit those among whom they labour. If they that bear the vessels of the sanctuary should be pure, they who devote themselves to the diffusion of truth, with a view to the conversion of men, ought to be lovers of souls, and zealous for the glory of the Saviour.

for Moab like pipes, and mine heart shall sound like pipes for the men of ²Kirheres: because ³the riches that he hath gotten are perished.

37 For every head shall be bald, and every beard 'clipped: upon all the hands shall be 'cuttings, and 'upon the loins sackcloth.

38 There shall be lamentation generally upon all the house-tops of Moab, and in the streets thereof: for I have broken Moab like a vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith the LORD.

39 They shall howl, saying, How is it broken down! how hath Moab turned the 'back with shame! so shall Moab be 'a derision and a dismaying to all them about him.

40 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, he shall fly as an eagle, and shall 'spread his wings over Moab.

41 'Kerioth is taken, and the strong holds are surprised, and the mighty men's hearts in Moab at that day shall be 'as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

42 And Moab shall be destroyed 'from being a people, because he hath 'magnified himself against the LORD.

43 'Fear, and the pit, and the snare, shall be upon thee, O inhabitant of Moab, saith the LORD.

44 He 'that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for I will bring upon it, even upon Moab, 'the year of their visitation, saith the LORD.

45 They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon, because of the force: but 'a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the midst of Sihon, and shall 'devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the 'tumultuous ones.

46 Woe be unto thee, O Moab! the people of Chemosh perisheth; for thy sons are taken 'captives, and thy daughters captives.

47 'Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days, saith the LORD. Thus far is the judgment of Moab.

CHAPTER XLIX.

1 The judgment of the Ammonites, 7 of Edom, 23 of Damascus, 28 of Kedar, 30 of Hazor, 34 and of Elam.

CONCERNING 'the Ammonites, thus saith the LORD, Hath Israel no sons? hath he no heir? why then doth ²their king 'inherit Gad, and his people dwell in his cities?

2 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, 'that I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in Rabbah of the Ammonites; and it shall be a desolate heap, and her daughters shall be burnt with 4 Wherefore gloriest thou in the valleys, 'thy flowing valley, 'O backsliding daughter! that 'trusted in her treasures, saying, Who shall come unto me?

Chap. XLIX. 1-39. The Ammonites often invaded Palestine, and committed serious ravages on the country. Jephthah successfully resisted them, and took twenty of their cities; the check, however, was not of long continuance, as they afterwards harassed the borders of Israel till their own capital was besieged by David, and their country rendered tributary. The enemies of the Church of God may pass for a season without rebuke, but their guilt, unless repented of, will, in due season, be visited with appropriate punishments. The Edomites were old enemies of God's people; they had long been endured, but their time was now come, and the hand of thou shouldest make thy nest as high as the eagle, I will bring thee down from thence, saith the LORD.

17 Also Edom shall be a desolation: every one that goeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss at all the plagues thereof.

18 As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD, no man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it.

19 Behold, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong: but I will suddenly make him run away from her; and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for who is like me? and who will appoint me the time? and who is that shepherd that will stand before me?

20 Therefore hear the counsel of the LORD that he hath taken against Edom, and his purposes that he hath purposed against the inhabitants of Teman: Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out; surely he shall make their habitations desolate with them.

21 The earth is moved at the noise of their fall; at the cry, the noise thereof was heard in the Red sea.

22 Behold, he shall come up and fly as the eagle, and spread his wings over Bozrah: and at that day shall the heart of the mighty men of Edom be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

23 Concerning Damascus. Hamath is confounded, and Arpad; for they have heard evil tidings: they are faint-hearted; there is sorrow on the sea; it cannot be quiet.

24 Damascus is waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her; anguish and sorrows have taken her, as a woman in travail.

25 How is the city of praise not left, the city of my joy!

26 Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, and all the men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD of hosts.

27 And I will kindle a fire in the wall of Damascus, and it shall consume the palaces of Ben-hadad.

thus saith the LORD, Arise ye, go up to Kedar, and spoil the men of the east.

29 Their tents and their flocks shall they take away: they shall take to themselves their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels; and they shall cry unto them, Fear is on every side.

30 ¶ Flee, get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the LORD; for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you.

31 Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation, that dwelleth without care, saith the LORD, which have neither gates nor bars, which dwell alone.

32 And their camels shall be a booty, and the multitude of their cattle a spoil: and I will scatter into all winds them that are in the utmost corners; and I will bring their calamity from all sides thereof, saith the LORD.

33 And Hazor shall be a dwelling for dragons, and a desolation for ever: there shall no man abide there, nor any son of man dwell in it.

34 ¶ The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against Elam, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, saying, 35 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will break the bow of Elam, the chief of their might.

36 And upon Elam will I bring the four winds from the four quarters of heaven, and will scatter them toward all those winds; and there shall be no nation whither the outcasts of Elam shall not come.

37 For I will cause Elam to be dismayed before their enemies, and before them that seek their life; and I will bring evil upon them, even my fierce anger, saith the LORD; and I will send the sword after them, till I have consumed them:

38 And I will set my throne in Elam, and will destroy from thence the king and the princes, saith the LORD.

39 ¶ But it shall come to pass in the latter days, that I will bring again the captivity of Elam, saith the LORD.

CHAPTER L

1, 9, 21, 35 The judgment of Babylon. 4, 17, 33 The redemption of Israel.

THE word that the LORD spake against Babylon, and against the land of the Chaldeans, by Jeremiah the prophet.

the Divine displeasure fell on them heavily. The Kedarites having contributed their share to oppress the Jews, were called to account, and justly visited for their iniquity. The Elamites, too, had come in for their portion, and they were not overlooked in the day of visitation.

Chap. L. 1-3. The Chaldeans had occupied a place of peculiar prominence in oppressing the Jews, and their cup was now well-nigh full. In proportion to their crime would be their judgment. As they had excelled all others in their cruel devastations, so the Divine wrath would be poured out upon them to the uttermost. Bel was the same with Baal, and one of the common idols of the East. When an idol is broken, the deity is supposed to have abandoned it. A special prominence is here given to the destruction of the idols of Babylon, and the prodigious treasures devoted to them. When the Persians arrived, they made short work with the images, appropriating to themselves the boundless treasures connected with the temples. Ver. 4-8. We have here one of those glorious evangelical passages which distinguish the writings of Jeremiah, and which boded the highest good for the children of Israel. The people are here represented as awakened to a sense of their condition, as bending under a load of guilt, and grieving over the loss of the Divine favour. Determined to leave Babylon and to return to Zion, they set out upon their journey; but their ignorance of the path leads them often to inquire the way. There is clearly under all this a most important spiritual bearing. The conversion of the Jews, the propagation of the Gospel among the Gentiles, and the 2 Declare ye among the nations, and publish, and ²set up a standard; publish, and conceal not: say, ^a"Babylon is taken, ^bBel is confounded, ^cMerodach is broken in pieces; ^dher idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces.

3 For out of the north there cometh up a nation against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein: they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

4 ¶ In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, ^e"the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, ^f"going and weeping: they shall go, and ^g"seek the LORD their God.

5 They shall ask the way to Zion, with their faces thitherward, saying, ^h"Come, and let us join ourselves to the LORD in a perpetual covenant ⁱthat shall not be forgotten.

6 My ^j"people hath been lost sheep; ^k"their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they ^l"have forgotten their ^m"resting-place.

7 All that found them ⁿ"have devoured them; and their adversaries said, We offend not, because they have sinned against the LORD, ^o"the habitation of justice; even the LORD, ^p"the hope of their fathers.

8 Remove out of the midst of Babylon, and go forth out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be as the he-goats before the flocks.

9 ¶ For, lo, ^q"I will raise, and cause to come up against Babylon, an assembly of great nations from the north country: and ^r"they shall set themselves in array against her; from thence she shall be taken: ^s"their arrows ^tshall be as of a mighty ^u"expert man; ^v"none shall return in vain.

destruction of everything anti-Christian, are significantly pointed out. That will be a glorious day which shall behold the seed of Abraham all turning heavenward, mourning for the Saviour, and the whole human race raised from their moral and intellectual prostration, and brought into the glorious fellowship of the people of God! Ver. 9-20. This last verse is full of comfort to the outcasts of Israel, inasmuch as it shows that the time will come when their transgressions will be forgiven, and when their iniquity, if sought for, shall not be found: for he will pardon them whom he reserves. Ver. 21-46. It has often to be lamented that the history of ancient times is so imperfect. Concerning the bulk of the nations nothing would have been known—no, not even their names—but for the Word of God. Had a competent historian existed contemporaneously with the destruction of Babylon, and recorded the matter in full, and for fifty years afterwards, when the desolation was complete, it would have presented a most affecting narrative. One thing is certain—all the nations Babylon had trodden under foot exulted in her fall. This is significantly expressed by the language of the prophet: "How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!" A time will come when the modern Babylon, the Church of Rome, between which and the ancient there is a close the Lord God of hosts in the land of the Chaldeans.

26 Come against her from ¹the utmost border, open her storehouses; ²cast her up as heaps, and destroy her utterly: let nothing of her be left.

27 Slay all her bullocks; let them go down to the slaughter: woe unto them! for their day is come, the time of their visitation.

28 The voice of them that flee and escape out of the land of Babylon, ³to declare in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God, the vengeance of his temple.

29 Call together the archers against Babylon: all ye that bend the bow, camp against it round about; let none thereof escape: ⁴recompense her according to her work; according to all that she hath done, do unto her: ⁵for she hath been proud against the LORD, against the Holy One of Israel.

30 Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets, and all her men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD.

31 Behold, ¹I am against thee, O thou most proud, saith the Lord God of hosts: for thy day is come, the time that I will visit thee.

32 And ²the most proud shall stumble and fall, and none shall raise him up: and I will ³kindle a fire in his cities, and it shall devour all round about him.

33 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together; and all that took them captives held them fast; they refused to let them go.

34 Their ⁴Redeemer is strong; The LORD of hosts is his name: he shall thoroughly ⁵plead their cause, ⁶that he may give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon.

35 ¶ A sword is upon the Chaldeans, saith the LORD, and upon the inhabitants of Babylon, and upon her princes, and upon her wise men.

36 A sword is upon the ¹liars; and they shall dote: a sword is upon ²her mighty men; and they shall be dismayed.

37 A sword is upon their horses, and upon their chariots, and upon all the mingled people that are in the midst of her; and they shall become ³as women: a sword is upon her treasures; and they shall be robbed.

38 ¶ A drought is upon her waters; and they shall be dried up: for it is ⁴the land of graven images, and they are ⁵mad upon their idols.

40 As ²God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD; so shall no man abide there, neither shall any son of man dwell therein.

41 Behold, a people shall come from the north, and a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

CHAPTER LI.

God's severe judgments against Babylon in revenge of Israel.

THUS saith the LORD, Behold, ¹I will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in the ²midst of them that ³rise up against me, ⁴a destroying wind;

2 And will send unto Babylon ⁵fanners, that shall fan her, and shall empty her land: for ⁶in the day of trouble they shall be against her round about.

resemblance. will occupy a similar place, and when all nations shall exult over her destruction.

Chap. LI. 1-19. The wealth, power, and glory of Babylon are meetly indicated by the term "a golden cup." During the reign of that all-grasping power, idolatry may be said to have reached a climax. Never did it present so imposing and dazzling an aspect to the nations of the earth. It was the palmy day of the Wicked One. Ver. 10 presents the language of triumph; the judgments which the Lord was to pour out on Babylon would be taken as the expression of his indignation at that arrogant, ambitious, and all-destroying kingdom. No power is strong when God blows upon it. Instruments are never wanting to accomplish his purposes in punishing the wicked. Darius the Mede was the uncle of Cyrus, whom he employed to conduct the expedition against Babylon. Persia at that time was but an insignificant portion of the Median empire, which Cyrus raised to dignity and power. The prophet significantly hints in ver. 12 that all efforts at resistance on the part of Babylon would be futile. The decree had gone forth, and ^bspare ye not her young men; destroy ye utterly all her host.

4 Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans, and they that are ¹thrust through in her streets.

5 For ¹Israel hath not been forsaken, nor Judah of his God, of the LORD of hosts; ¹though their land was filled with sin against the Holy One of Israel.

6 Flee ^mout of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul; be not cut off in her iniquity; ²for this is the time of the LORD's vengeance; he will render unto her a recompence.

7 Babylon hath been ^aa golden cup in the LORD's hand, that made all the earth drunken: ²the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations ^aare mad.

8 Babylon is ¹suddenly fallen and destroyed: ²howl for her; ¹take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed.

9 We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed: ²forsake her, and let us go every one into his own country; for ²her judgment reacheth unto heaven, and is lifted up even to the skies.

10 The LORD hath ¹brought forth our righteousness: come, and ²let us declare in Zion the work of the LORD our God.

11 Make ²bright the arrows; gather the shields: ²the LORD hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes: for ²his device is against Babylon, to destroy it; because it is the vengeance of the LORD, ²the vengeance of his temple.

12 Set up ^dthe standard upon the walls of Babylon, make the watch strong, set up the watchmen, prepare the ²ambushes: for ²the LORD hath both devised and done that which he spake against the inhabitants of Babylon.

13 O thou that ¹dwestest upon many waters, abundant in treasures, ²thine end is come, and the measure of thy covetousness.

14 The LORD of hosts hath ^bsworn by ⁴himself, saying, Surely I will fill thee with men, as with caterpillars; and they shall ⁶lift up a shout against thee.

15 He ¹hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world ²by his wisdom, ¹and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding.

16 When ^mhe uttereth his voice, ²there is a ⁶multitude of waters in the heavens; and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth: he maketh lightnings with rain, and ²bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.

17 Every man is ⁷brutish by his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image: ²for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

18 They are vanity, the work of errors: ²in the time of their visitation they shall perish.

19 The ¹Portion of Jacob is not like them; for he is ²the former of all things; and Israel is ²the rod of his inheritance: The LORD of hosts is his name.

20 Thou art my battle-axe and weapons of war: for ²with thee will I break in pieces the nations; and with thee will I destroy kingdoms;

21 And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;

22 With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid;

23 I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers.

24 And I will render unto Babylon, and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea, all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the LORD.

25 Behold, ¹I am against thee, O destroying mountain, saith the LORD, ²which destroyest all the earth; and I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and roll thee down from the rocks, ²and will make thee a burnt mountain.

26 And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner, nor a stone for foundations; but thou shalt be ²desolate for ever, saith the LORD.

27 Set ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, prepare the nations against her, call together against her the kingdoms of ²Ararat, Minni, and ²Ashchenaz; appoint a captain against her; cause the horses to come up as the rough caterpillars.

28 Prepare against her the nations, with ²the kings of the Medes, the captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof, and all the land of his dominion.

29 And the land shall tremble and sorrow: for ²every purpose of the LORD shall be performed against Babylon, to make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant.

30 The ²mighty men of Babylon have forborne to fight, they have remained in ²their holds: their might hath failed; they became as women: they have burnt her dwelling-places; her bars are broken.

31 ²One post shall run to meet another, and nothing could hinder its taking effect. Ver. 20-44. There is some difficulty as to the party signified by the "battle-axe." The idea would be fairly embodied either in the Babylonian power, which broke in pieces the nations, or in the Medo-Persian power, which broke in pieces Babylon. Spiritually viewed, it has been applied to the Church of Christ—a power which is destined to break in pieces the mystical Babylon, the Church of Rome. The bearing, however, of the words, taken literally, would seem to be towards Babylon. This point appears to be settled by the language of ver. 25. Babylon occupied a plain, while the mass of its buildings and its towering temples was such as at a distance to represent an artificial mountain, while the destruction which issued from its centre was likened to a volcano pouring its lava on every side. Ver. 45-64. The destruction of Babylon may be viewed as one of the most stupendous events in the history of nations, and one of the most sublime and and one messenger to meet another, 'to shew the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end;

32 And that ^{the} passages are stopped, and the reeds they have burnt with fire, and ^{the} men of war are affrighted.

33 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, The daughter of Babylon is like a thrashing-floor: ^{it} is time to thrash her: yet a little while, and ^{the} time of her harvest shall come.

34 Nebuchadrezzar ^{the} king of Babylon hath devoured me, he hath crushed me, ^{he} hath made me an empty vessel, he hath ^{swallowed} me up like a dragon, he hath filled his belly with my delicates, he hath cast me out.

35 ^{The} violence done to me and to my ^{flesh} be upon Babylon, shall the ^{inhabitant} of Zion say; and, My blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea, shall Jerusalem say.

36 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, ^I will plead thy cause, and ^{take} vengeance for thee; and ^I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry.

37 And Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling-place for dragons, an astonishment, and ^{an} hissing, without an inhabitant.

38 They shall ^{roar} together like lions: they shall ^{yell} as lions' whelps.

39 In their heat ^I will make their feasts, and ^I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the LORD.

40 ^I will bring them down ^{like} lambs to the slaughter, like rams with he-goats.

41 How is ^{Sheshach} taken! and how is ^{the} praise of the whole earth surprised! how is Babylon become ^{an} astonishment among the nations!

42 The sea is come up upon Babylon: she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof.

43 Her cities are a desolation, a dry land, and a wilderness, a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth ^{any} son of man pass thereby.

44 And ^I will punish Bel in Babylon; and ^I will bring forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed up: and the nations shall not flow together any more unto him; yea, ^{the} wall of Babylon shall fall.

45 My people, ^{go} ye out of the midst of her, and ^{deliver} ye every man his soul from the fierce anger of the LORD.

46 And ^{lest} your heart faint, and ye fear for the rumour that shall be heard in the land; ^a rumour shall both come one year, and after that in ^{another} year shall come a rumour, and violence in the land, ruler against ruler.

47 Therefore, behold, the days come, that ^I will ^{do} judgment upon the graven images of Babylon; and her whole land shall be confounded, and all her slain shall fall in the midst of her.

48 Then the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein, shall sing for Babylon: for the spoilers shall come unto her from the north, saith the LORD.

49 ^{As} Babylon hath caused the slain of Israel to fall, so at Babylon shall fall the slain of all the earth.

50 Ye that have ^{escaped} the sword go away, stand not still: ^{remember} the LORD afar off, and let Jerusalem come into your mind.

51 We ^{are} confounded, because we have heard reproach: ^{shame} hath covered our faces; ^{for} strangers are come into the sanctuaries of the LORD's house.

52 Wherefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, ^{that} I will do judgment upon her graven images; and through all her land the wounded shall groan.

53 Though Babylon should mount up to heaven, and though she should fortify the height of her strength, yet from me shall spoilers come unto her, saith the LORD.

54 A ^{sound} of a cry cometh from Babylon, and great destruction from the land of the Chaldeans:

55 Because the LORD hath spoiled Babylon, and ^{destroyed} out of her the great voice; when ^{her} waves do roar like great waters, a noise of their voice is uttered:

56 Because ^{the} spoiler is come upon her, even upon Babylon, and ^{her} mighty men are taken; ^{every} one of their bows is broken: for ^{the} LORD God of recompences shall surely requite.

57 And ^I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men: and they shall ^{sleep} a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith ^{the} King, whose name is The LORD of hosts.

58 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ^{The} broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly ^{broken}, and her ^{high} gates shall be burnt with fire; and ^{the} people shall labour in vain, and the folk in the fire, and they shall be weary.

59 ^{The} word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of ^{Neria}h, the son of Maaseiah, when he went ^{with} Zedekiah the king of Judah into Babylon, in the fourth year of his reign. And ^{this} Seraiah was a ^{quiet} prince.

60 So Jeremiah ^{wrote} in a book all the evil that should come upon Babylon, even all these words that are written against Babylon.

61 And Jeremiah said to Seraiah, awful fulfilments of prophecy. No place on earth has undergone transformation so complete and appalling. Recent discoveries have considerably added to the wonder. Infidelity itself stands abashed at the testimony which has been dragged from the bosom of the earth to the existence of places and powers thousands of years ago. There is no more doubt that such a city existed, of the dimensions and proportions set forth by the prophets, than that the sun and the moon rule the heavens.

When thou comest to Babylon, ^cand shalt see, and shalt ^dread all these words, 62 Then shalt thou say, O LORD, thou hast spoken against this place, ^eto cut it off, that none shall remain in it, neither man nor beast, but that it shall be ^ddesolate for ever.

63 And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, that ^fthou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates:

64 And thou shalt say, ^gThus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her; and ^hthey shall be weary. ⁱThus far are the words of Jeremiah.

CHAPTER LII.

1 Zedekiah rebelleth. 4 Jerusalem is besieged and taken.
8 Zedekiah's sons killed, and his own eyes put out.

ZEDEKIAH was ^aone and twenty years old when he ^bbegan to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of ^bLibnah.

2 And ^che did that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

3 For ^dthrough the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that ^eZedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, in ^fthe ninth year of his reign, ^gin the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, and ^hpitched against it, and built forts against it round about.

5 So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

6 And in the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, ⁱthe famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.

7 Then the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the gate between the two walls which was by the king's garden; (now the Chaldeans were by the city round about:) and they went by the way of the plain.

8 ¶ But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, ^kand overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him.

9 Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah, in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

10 And the king of Babylon ^aslew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: ^bhe slew also all the princes of Judah in Riblah.

11 Then ^che ^dput out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in ^echains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in ^fprison till the day of his death.

12 ¶ Now, in the ^gfifth month, in the tenth day of the month, (which was ^hthe nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) came Nebuzar-adan, ⁱcaptain of the guard, ^jwhich ^kserved the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem, 13 And ^lburnt the house of the LORD, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the houses of the great men, burnt he with fire.

14 And all the army of the Chaldeans, ^mthat ⁿwere with the captain of the guard, ^obrake down all the walls of Jerusalem round about.

15 Then Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, ^pcarried away captive certain of the poor of the people, and the residue of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the multitude.

16 But Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, left ^qcertain of the poor of the land for vine-dressers, and for husbandmen.

17 ¶ Also the ^rpillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and ^sthe bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon.

18 The ^tcaldrons also, and the ^ushovels, and ^vthe snuffers, ^wand the ^xbowls, and ^ythe spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away.

19 And the basons, and the ^zfire-pans, and the bowls, and the caldrons, ^{aa}and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups; that which was of gold in gold, and that which was of silver in silver, took the captain of the guard away.

20 The ^{ab}two pillars, one sea, and twelve brasen bulls that were under the bases, which king Solomon had made in the house of the LORD: ^{ac}the brass of all these vessels was ^{ad}without weight.

21 And ^{ae}concerning the pillars, the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits; and a ^{af}fillet of twelve cubits did compass it; and the thickness thereof was four fingers: it was hollow.

Chap. LII. 1-34. This chapter may be viewed as an appendix to the writings of Jeremiah. It was probably added by Ezra, after the return of the Jews from Babylon, when the Sacred Writings were collected into one book, or number of books. It comprises the facts of the history of the Captivity nearly in the same words as are contained in the 2d Book of Kings, chap. xxiv. 18-20, xxv., with some additional statements. The record possesses a special value as comprising a history of the fulfilment of the prophecies of Jeremiah, the two together being eminently calculated to impress the heart of the nation, and to inspire with astonishment and fear the candid observer among surrounding nations. Not one utterance of Jeremiah fell short of its accomplishment. The same almighty power which spake by his mouth secured the fulfilment of every prediction; while the false prophets, who fed the nation with "lies," and hurried them on to destruction, were overwhelmed in the common ruin, filled with shame, and covered with infamy. From this single portion of the inspired page we may form some conception of the whole of the mighty system of prophecy. A day will come when every jot and every tittle of it will 22 And a chapter of brass was upon it; and the height of one chapter was five cubits, ^awith net-work and pomegranates upon the chapters round about, all of brass: the second pillar also and the pomegranates were like unto these.

23 And there were ninety and six pomegranates on a side; and ^ball the pomegranates upon the net-work were an hundred round about.

24 ¶ And ^cthe captain of the guard took ^dSeraiah the chief priest, and ^eZephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the ^fdoor;

25 He took also out of the city ^gan eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war; and seven men of them that ^hwere near the king's person, which were found in the city; and the ⁱprincipal scribe of the host, who mustered the people of the land; and threescore men of the people of the land, that were found in the midst of the city.

26 So Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah.

27 And ^jthe king of Babylon smote them, and put them to death ^kin Riblah, in the land of Hamath. ^lThus Judah was carried away captive out of his own land.

28 This is the people whom Nebuchad-

THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

This wonderful composition stands alone, towering above everything of the sort that ever was penned. Nothing has equalled the emotion, the imagery, or the piety which pervade the whole. Its inspiration apart, it displays a genius for the tender, the lofty, and the sublime, which leaves everything else of this description at an immeasurable distance. But the primary element of its beauty and glory is its piety and its patriotism. Nothing can exceed the prophet's views of the evil of sin, and his estimate of the magnitude of the affliction which it had brought on the nation. To the end of time it will remain a monument of the events to which it points, inscribed with the manifold and matchless excellences of the wonderful man who produced it.

CHAPTER I.

1 Jerusalem's misery for her sins. 12 Her complaint, 18 and confession of God's righteous judgments.

HOW doth the ^acity sit solitary that was full of people! how is she become as a widow! she that was great among the nations, and princess among the provinces, ^b*how* is she become tributary!

2 She weepeth sore in the night, and her tears are on her cheeks; among all her lovers she hath ^cnone to comfort her: ^dall her friends have dealt treacherously with her; they are become her enemies.

3 Judah is gone into captivity because of affliction, and because of great servi-

4 The ^pways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate; her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

5 Her adversaries are the chief, her enemies prosper; for ^qthe LORD hath afflicted her for the multitude of her transgressions: ^rher children are gone into captivity before the enemy.

6 And ^sfrom the daughter of Zion ^tall her beauty is departed: her princes are have become history—demonstrating and illustrating, in a manner the most glorious, the omniscience and the omnipotence, the justice and the mercy, the wisdom and the goodness, which presided over all the affairs of this sublunary scene.

Chap. I. 1-17. Vespasian struck a coin on the capture of Jerusalem, on the obverse of which there was a palm-tree, the emblem of Judea; under the emblem a woman, the emblem of Jerusalem, bearing, as before described, the legend, "Judea is taken," which strikingly illustrates the opening exclamation of Jeremiah. Among the most cheering sights to the eye of the devout patriot, were the periodical gatherings of the people to the sacred solemnities appointed by Moses. These were always joyous seasons; but there was now an end of them. All become like ^mharts that find no pasture; and they are gone without strength before the pursuer.

7 Jerusalem ^mremembered in the days of her affliction, and of her miseries, all her ¹pleasant things that she had in the days of old, when her people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her: the adversaries saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.

8 Jerusalem ^ohath grievously sinned; therefore she is ²removed: ^oall that honoured her despise her, because they have seen her nakedness; yea, she sigheth, and turneth backward.

9 Her filthiness is in her skirts; ^oshe remembereth not her last end; therefore she came down wonderfully: ^oshe had no comforter. O LORD, ^obehold my affliction; ^ofor the enemy hath magnified himself.

10 The adversary hath ^ospread out his hand upon all her ³pleasant things: for she hath ²seen that the heathen entered into her sanctuary, ^owhom thou didst command that they should not enter into thy congregation.

11 All her people sigh, they seek bread; they have given their pleasant things for meat to ⁴relieve the soul: see, O LORD, and consider; for I am become vile.

12 [¶] ⁵Is it nothing to you, all ye that ⁶pass by? behold, and see ²if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the LORD hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger.

13 From above hath he sent fire into my bones, and it prevaileth against them: ^ohe hath spread a net for my feet; he hath turned me back; he hath made me desolate and faint all the day.

14 The ^oyoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand; they are wreathed, and come up upon my neck: he hath made my strength to fall; the LORD hath ^odelivered me into their hands, from whom I am not able to rise up.

15 The LORD hath ^otrodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me: he hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men: the LORD hath trodden ^othe virgin, the daughter of Judah, ^oas in a wine-press.

16 For these things I weep: mine eye, mine eye runneth down with water, because the comforter that should ^orelieve my soul is far from me: ^omy children are desolate, because the enemy prevailed.

CHAPTER II.

1 Jeremiah lamenteth Jerusalem's misery. 20 He complaineth thereof to God.

HOW hath the LORD ^ocovered the daughter of Zion with a cloud in his anger, ^oand cast down from heaven unto the earth ^othe beauty of Israel, and remembered not his footstool in the day of his anger!

2 The LORD hath swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob, and hath not pitied: ^ohe hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah; he hath ¹brought them down to the ground: he hath polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof.

3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger all ^othe horn of Israel: ^ohe hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, and ^ohe burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about.

4 He hath ^obent his bow like an enemy: he stood with his right hand as an adversary, and slew all ^othat were pleasant to the eye in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion: ^ohe poured out his fury like fire.

was solitary, sad, and afflictive—an awful silence reigned throughout the land! Heathen writers were accustomed to ridicule the Sabbath of the Jews as a mark of sloth and idleness. As idolaters, they could form no conception of its religious and moral uses, and the beneficial results which flowed from it. The remonstrance, "Is it nothing to you that pass by?" is full of pathos. Zion views herself as sold into slavery for her transgressions, robbed of her riches, and the subject of vengeance; a debased example of the awful consequences of a departure from the Lord. Ver. 18-22. The prophet displays a sense of sin of the most agonizing description. There is no murmur of injustice permitted to mingle with his lamentation. It is felt that all that had come upon the nation was deserved, and that the Divine forbearance had been magnified in sparing her so long. Against the Most High alone she had sinned, and he alone could raise her from her prostration. It became her, therefore, while the darkness continued, and the storms raged around her, to bow with submission, and to acknowledge it as due to sovereign mercy alone that she was not consumed. The case is full of practical bearing on the children of God suffering for their transgression.

Chap. II. 1-19. Women in the East wear veils, and often costly ones. The figure is applied to Zion, which is represented as veiled by the hand of the Lord with the cloud of his displeasure. The Chaldeans having removed the temple as a tent, in so doing destroyed it. Along with this they had also slain the worshippers, so

5 The LORD ^k was as an enemy: ^l he hath swallowed up Israel, he hath swallowed up all her palaces; he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.

6 And he hath violently taken away his ^m tabernacle, as if it were of a garden; he hath destroyed his places of the assembly: the LORD hath ⁿ caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised, in the indignation of his anger, the king and the priest.

7 The LORD hath ^o cast off his altar; he hath abhorred his sanctuary: he hath ^p given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; they have made a noise in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast.

8 The LORD hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion: he hath stretched out a line, ^q he hath not withdrawn his hand from ^r destroying: therefore ^s he made the rampart and the wall to lament; they languished together.

9 Her gates are sunk into the ground; he hath destroyed and broken her bars: her king and her princes ^t are among the Gentiles: ^u the law is no more; ^v her prophets also find no vision from the LORD.

10 The ^w elders of the daughter of Zion sit upon the ground, ^x and keep silence: they have ^y cast up dust upon their heads; ^z they have girded themselves with sackcloth: ^{aa} the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.

11 Mine ^{ab} eyes do fail with tears, ^{ac} my bowels are troubled, my liver is poured upon the earth, ^{ad} for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because the children and the sucklings ^{ae} swoon in the streets of the city.

12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.

13 What thing shall I take to witness for thee? what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? what shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? ^{af} for thy breach is great like the sea; ^{ag} who can heal thee?

14 Thy prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee; and ^{ah} they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have seen for

CHAPTER III.

The prophet bewaileth his own calamities.

I ^{cy} AM the man that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath.

2 He hath led me, and ^{cz} brought me into darkness, but not into light.

3 Surely ^{da} against me is he turned; he turneth his hand against me all the day.

4 My ^{db} flesh and my skin hath he made old; ^{dc} he hath broken my bones.

5 He hath builded against me, and compassed me with gall and travail.

that there was no longer a people or a place in which to praise the Lord. The anguish indicated in ver. 11 is the most intense conceivable. It would seem as if the springs of nature were giving way, and the prophet was about to perish under the burden of his sorrow. The false prophets were the most grievous objects that met the eyes of Jeremiah. He judged them as materially contributing to the sinful course which had brought destruction on the country. Ver. 20-22. The spirit which these verses breathe is one of the deepest humility; it indicates utter prostration before the Lord. The evil had now reached a climax, which was invested with a horror at which the prophet shuddered. The perusal of the whole is much fitted to promote godly sorrow, by aiding the saint in forming a right conception of the evil of sin.

Chap. III. 1-25. Jeremiah, while he endeavours to produce a spirit of meek submission in his countrymen, represents his own deportment under affliction in terms of a highly prophetic cast; so much so, that the reader is led to the analogical case of the Saviour in the hour of his tribulation. It may be that the prophet, in ver. 6 to 9 inclusive, refers to his own condition when thrust into 6 He hath set me in dark places, as they that be dead of old.

7 He hath ^ahedged me about, that I cannot get out; he hath made my chain heavy.

8 Also when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.

9 He hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone; he hath ^amade my paths crooked.

10 He was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places.

11 He hath turned aside my ways, and pulled me in pieces: ^ahe hath made me desolate.

12 He hath ^abent his bow, and set me as a mark for the arrow.

13 He hath caused the ^aarrows of his quiver to enter into my reins.

14 I was ^aa derision to all my people, and their song all the day.

15 He hath filled me with ^abitterness, he hath made me drunken with wormwood.

16 He hath also broken my teeth with gravel-stones, he hath ^acovered me with ashes.

17 And ^athou hast removed my soul far off from peace: ^aI forgot ^aprosperity.

18 And I said, My strength and my hope is perished from the LORD:

19 ^aRemembering mine affliction and my misery, ^athe wormwood and the gall.

20 My soul ^ahath them still in remembrance, and is ^ahumbled in me.

21 This I ^arecall to my mind, therefore have I hope.

22 ^aIt is ^aof the LORD's mercies that we are not consumed, ^abecause his compassions fail not.

23 They are ^anew every morning: ^agreat is thy faithfulness.

24 The LORD is ^amy portion, saith my soul; ^atherefore will I hope in him.

25 The LORD is ^agood unto them that wait for him, ^ato the soul that seeketh him.

26 It is good that a man should both hope and ^aquietly wait for the salvation of the LORD.

27 It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth.

28 He sitteth alone, and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him.

29 He ^aputteth his mouth in the dust, if so be there may be hope.

30 He giveth ^ahis cheek to him that smiteth him: he is ^afilled full with reproach.

the dungeon or placed in the stocks; at the same time it might be spiritually applied to the condition of the Church in seasons of great affliction. The barbarous practice of knocking out the teeth, referred to in ver. 16, is still an Oriental method of perpetrating cruelties on captives taken in war. The prophet sets an example to the people in throwing himself on the mercy of the Lord as their last and only hope. Conscious himself that he had chosen God for his portion, he was ready to relinquish the world, and to suffer the loss of whatever might stand between him and the Divine favour. They who make a similar choice, whatever else may befall them, will never lose their eternal treasure. Ver. 28-66. The sentiment that it is good for a man that he should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord, is one of extreme beauty, and peculiarly suited to the circumstances of the Church in times of persecution; and what applies to the whole has an equal bearing on the parts, so that the individual who is enduring affliction for sin, or suffering persecution for righteousness, may console himself with the fact that salvation is sure, inasmuch as there is forgiveness with the Lord, that he may be feared. He will not cast off for ever; and though he may cause grief, he will have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies. He doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men. Nothing could be more accurate than 58 O LORD, "thou hast pleaded the causes of my soul; "thou hast redeemed my life.

59 O LORD, thou hast seen my wrong; "judge thou my cause.

60 Thou hast seen all their vengeance, and all their imaginations against me:

the prophet's conception of the Divine character; it bespeaks inspiration in every part, and is in beautiful harmony with the other Divine penmen both of the Old and of the New Testament.

Chap. IV. 1-11. The temple was now completely demolished, and its stones mingled with the common rubbish of the wide-spread desolation. Even the "sons of Zion," who should have been precious as fine gold, were disregarded as objects common and contemptible. The portraiture of misery here drawn may be read by both small and great with edification. The blessings of peace are best understood when contrasted with the calamities of war. Ver. 12-22. The natural position of Jerusalem was so favourable to defence, that surrounding nations doubted whether Nebuchadnezzar would succeed in its capture; and the period which it required, even when favoured by Divine Providence, was so protracted as to indicate the great difficulty attending it. It is a fact deserving to be remembered, that, when last taken by the Romans, the general acknowledged that he owed success to Divine power. The words are striking: "God favouring us, we fought; God is he that has drawn the Jews out of these fortresses, for human hands or machines could have done nothing against these towers." But when the fear of the Lord had departed, such advantages became of no avail.

CHAPTER V.

A pitiful complaint of Zion in prayer to God.

REMEMBER, O LORD, what is come upon us: consider, and behold our reproach.

2 Our inheritance is turned to strangers, our houses to aliens.

3 We are orphans and fatherless, our mothers are as widows.

4 We have drunken our water for money; our wood is sold unto us.

5 Our necks are under persecution: we labour, and have no rest.

6 We have given the hand to the Egyptians, and to the Assyrians, to be satisfied with bread.

7 Our fathers have sinned, and are not; and we have borne their iniquities.

8 Servants have ruled over us: there is none that doth deliver us out of their hand.

9 We gat our bread with the peril of our lives, because of the sword of the wilderness.

10 Our skin was black like an oven, because of the terrible famine.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

Ezekiel belonged to the first body of captives, with whom he was located by the river Chebar, supposed to lie about two hundred miles north of Babylon. So far as can be gathered from the prophetic record, he must have been carried away with Jehoiachin, king of Judah, in the year of the world 3406, and before Christ 598. His prophecies, in a very extraordinary manner, support those of Jeremiah: they both dwelt on the same sins and foretold the same judgments, alike as to persons and to places. The particular prophecies of Ezekiel have been completely fulfilled, so far as time has permitted, and others at the present hour are in the course of fulfilment. Especially is this the fact in regard to Tyre and Egypt. The coincidence between him, Isaiah, Daniel, and the Revelation of John, is also remarkable. The entire book is peculiar,—as unlike the rest of the prophecies as can well be conceived; and notwithstanding the portions which are common to him and Jeremiah, there is yet an individuality about Ezekiel which separates him from the college of prophets, leaving him to stand alone in all the grandeur of his wonderful character and terrible mission. The energy of his expression is matchless, while a fearful grandeur rests on the whole of his communication.

CHAPTER I.

1 The time of Ezekiel's prophecy. 4 His vision of four cherubims, 16 of four wheels, 26 and of the glory of God.

NOW it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the captives by the river of Chebar, that the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God.

2 In the fifth day of the month, (which was the fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity.)

3 The word of the LORD came expressly unto Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans, by the river Chebar; and the hand of the LORD was there upon him.

4 ¶ And I looked, and, behold, a whirlwind came out of the north, a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the

They had thus forsaken their own mercies; and the wall of fire being no longer around them, they became a prey to the invader.

Chap. V. 1-22. The prophet still dwells on the depth of the public humiliation. While the king, the nobles, and multitudes of the people had been either slain or carried away captive, those who remained under the governor appointed by the Chaldeans were their slaves, and every event of social life but reminded them of their thralldom. They actually drank their own water for money! The very fountains which bubbled up in their own fields and meadows became a source of wealth to the invaders. Nothing could so painfully remind the people of their utter prostration. We have but to conceive of such an event among ourselves to form an idea of the unparalleled affliction which it indicates. In the East it is still common to hang up slaves and disobedient children by the hands. An offending slave is hoisted to the roof, where he remains till his spirit be broken, his guilt confessed, and forgiveness sought. Even schoolboys, especially those who play truant, are so treated. It is therefore to be inferred, that this treatment of Jewish princes in Babylon was an indignity of no ordinary character.

Chap. I. 1-14. Ezekiel, with the rest of his captive brethren, was stationed by the river of Chebar, probably midst thereof as the colour of amber, out of the midst of the fire.

5 Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures. And this was their appearance; they had the likeness of a man.

6 And every one had four faces, and every one had four wings.

7 And their feet were straight feet; and the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot: and they sparkled like the colour of burnished brass.

8 And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and their wings.

9 Their wings were joined one to another; they turned not when they went; they went every one straight forward.

10 As for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man and the face of a lion on the right side; and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; they four also had the face of an eagle.

11 Thus were their faces: and their wings were stretched upward; two wings of every one were joined one to another, and two covered their bodies.

12 And they went every one straight forward: whither the spirit was to go, they went; and they turned not when they went.

13 As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, and like the appearance of lamps: it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning.

14 And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

15 ¶ Now, as I beheld the living creatures, behold one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces.

16 The appearance of the wheels and their work was like unto the colour of a beryl: and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel.

17 When they went, they went upon their four sides; and they turned not when they went.

18 As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their rings were full of eyes round about them four.

19 And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them; and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.

20 Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.

21 When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.

22 And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above.

23 And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one toward the other: every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies.

24 And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, like the noise of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host: when they stood, they let down their wings.

25 And there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads when they stood, and had let down their wings.

26 ¶ And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire-stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it.

to cultivate waste lands, or to carry forward other operations for the benefit of the government. It was there he received his commission in beholding the heavens opened, and seeing the visions of God. The objects which successively presented themselves to him were of a nature difficult to describe; and when language, even in the mouth of Inspiration, has done its utmost, the idea the reader forms is necessarily vague and general. Imagination has, accordingly, taken the place of judgment, and a multitude of fanciful meanings have been assigned to the various aspects of the visions of the prophet. The living creatures have by some been viewed as Ministers of the Word; by others, as the representatives of angels; and where the difference is so great, the conclusions are necessarily uncertain. The significations attached to the four faces are among the few things that have been generally agreed on. The face of the man implied knowledge, prudence, and philanthropy; that of the lion, boldness and energy in executing the will of God; that of the ox, strength, patience, and perseverance; that of the eagle, spiritual sagacity and heavenly affections soaring above created objects. Such explications are, at least, plausible and harmonious, and if uncertain, yet they tend to edify. Ver. 15-28. The wheels have been considered as denoting the mysterious dispensations of Providence. There is something remarkably original and wonderful in the idea here presented. The figure of the wheels, their aptitude for continual motion, may represent the constant revolutions of human affairs under the conduct of Divine Providence. From the peculiar aptness, there is a probable truth in the assumption. Those persons or nations which to-day are at the top of the wheel may to-morrow be at the bottom, beyond all human calculation or possibility of prevention. Thus, certainly, it has been with the centres of power and the seats of commerce. In the midst of much seeming confusion there is yet order, unity, and development, all furthering the accomplishment of the Divine plans. One thing noticeable in the wheels is, that when they moved, they went on "their four sides," proceeding steadily in their proper places, without any deviation from their appointed course; and in particular they never went backward, to signify that Providence does nothing in vain, but always realises its objects. The magnitude of the rings rendered them terrible; and the terror was increased by the intelligence displayed by the eyes with which they were full—supposed to indicate infinite knowledge. The image is one 27 And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it; from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about.

28 As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. ^aThis was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.

CHAPTER III.

¹ Ezekiel eateth the roll. ¹⁵ God sheweth him the rule of prophecy. ²² and shutteth and openeth the prophet's mouth.

MOREOVER, he said unto me, Son of man, ^eeat that thou findest; eat this roll, and ^fgo speak unto the house of Israel.

2 So ^gI opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat that roll.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, ^hand fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. ⁱThen did I eat it; and ^jit was in my mouth as honey for sweetness.

4 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, ^kgo, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them.

5 For ^lthou art not sent to a people ¹of a strange speech, and of an hard language, but to the house of Israel:

6 Not to many people of a strange speech, and of an hard language, whose words thou canst not understand: ²surely, had I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee.

7 But the house of Israel ³will not hearken unto thee; for they will not hearken unto me: for ⁴all the house of Israel are ⁵impudent and hard-hearted.

8 Behold, ⁶I have made thy face strong against their foreheads.

9 As an adamant, harder than flint, have I made thy forehead: fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.

10 Moreover, he said unto me, Son of man, all my words that I shall speak unto thee receive in thine heart and hear with thine ears.

11 And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them, Thus saith the Lord God, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.

of unparalleled grandeur, presenting a corresponding idea of the height and depth of the counsels of the Great Eternal, which far surpassed all created comprehension.

Chap. II. 1-10. The expression "son of man" is applied to only three persons in the sacred Scriptures: once to Daniel, some eighty times or more to Ezekiel, and upwards of forty times to the Lord Jesus Christ. One reason for the frequency of its occurrence in Ezekiel may have been to remind him of his mortality, and the infinite distance between him and the Most High. With respect to its application to the Lord Jesus Christ, it served to shew forth his humiliation in assuming our nature. All ancient books were written on skins, so as to be rolled up, which was generally done on cylinders of wood or ivory. The writing was usually confined to one side. In the present case, however, it was written within and without, contrary to custom, implying the awful amount of the matter which he had to communicate, and which predicted the deepest disaster to the people, since the roll would be filled with lamentation, mourning, and woe. We have already seen in Jeremiah how fully the history realised the prediction. The chastisements and afflictions were such, for number and magnitude, as never fell upon any nation.

Chap. III. 1-14. The eating of the roll, in vision, implied the entrance of the Divine Word into the prophet's soul, that it might be digested, and so nourish him, and prepare him for the terrible work to which he was called. Every part of the roll was to be meditated, that the whole, so to speak, might be assimilated to his understanding. The resemblance which this bears to John's vision in the Revelation is remarkable. He ate the little roll, which he found sweet as honey in his mouth, but afterwards it became bitter in his stomach—signifying, it may be, that it was painful to publish truths, which would be a savour of death unto death to 12 Then ^mthe spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing, saying, "Blessed be the glory of the LORD from his place."

13 I heard also ^othe noise of the wings of the living creatures that ^ttouched one another, ^pand the noise of the wheels over against them, and a noise of a great rushing.

14 So ^qthe spirit lifted me up, and took me away, and I went ⁱin bitterness, in the heat of my spirit; ^rbut the hand of the LORD was strong upon me.

15 ¶ Then I came to them of the captivity at Tel-abib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and I sat where they sat, and remained there astonished among them seven days.

16 And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 17 Son of man, I have made thee ^aa watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me.

18 When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

19 Yet ^tif thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, ^uhe shall die in his iniquity; ^vbut thou hast delivered thy soul.

20 Again, ^wWhen a righteous man doth turn from his ^xrighteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumblingblock before him, he shall die: ^ybecause thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, ^zand his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; ^{aa}but his blood will I require at thine hand.

21 Nevertheless, ^{ab}if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; ^{ac}also thou hast delivered thy soul.

22 ¶ And ^{ad}the hand of the LORD was there upon me; and he said unto me,

CHAPTER IV.

By the type of a siege is shewed the time from Jeroboam's defection to the captivity.

THOU also, son of man, ^atake thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and pour-tray upon it the city, ^beven Jerusalem:

2 And ^clay siege against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount against it; set the camp also against it, and set ^dbattering-rams against it round about.

3 Moreover, take thou unto thee ^ean iron pan, and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city; and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. ^fThis shall be a sign to the house of Israel.

4 Lie thou also ^gupon thy left side, ^hand lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: ⁱaccording to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it ^jthou shalt bear their iniquity.

5 For ^kI have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, ^lthree hundred and ninety days: so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the house of Israel.

6 And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and wicked men. Ver. 15-27. The language here addressed to the prophet, at the outset of his ministry, was eminently calculated to rouse his spirit to a deep sense of the responsibility which attached to him. The passage is one of fearful import to the present hour. It behoves the Christian teacher to familiarise his mind with the principle and the facts here set forth, since it will materially contribute to his fidelity and consequent success. The wicked will frequently continue impenitent in spite of faithfulness, but in that case their blood will be upon their own heads; the hands of the teacher will be pure. The statement of the prophet has led to considerable dispute amongst divines, touching the perseverance of the saints; but closely examined, it will be found entirely to harmonise with those views which are generally believed amongst Protestant Christians in these nations. It is, indeed, perfectly harmonious with the New Testament representations of the subject. Paul told his hearers, that if they "lived after the flesh they should die," but, "if they, through the Spirit, mortified the deeds of the body, they should live." This statement is quite in keeping with that of Ezekiel. If true Christians, spirits born of God, should depart from the faith, and die in their sins, they would doubtless perish; but the covenant of grace amply provides against a result so fearful. The Divine Author of that Covenant has expressly promised to put his fear into the hearts of his people, so that they should not depart from him. The Scriptures, moreover, are written in a popular style; common sense is everywhere the handmaid of the inspired teacher. It is enough for God's people to know that He who has begun the good work in them will carry it on till the day of Christ.

Chap. IV. 1-17. The events set forth in this chapter are all figurative, indicating the circumstances which were to attend the siege and destruction of Jerusalem. The prophet, of course, represents the Jews, which is a thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah ⁴forty days: I have appointed thee ⁵each day for a year.

7 Therefore thou shalt ¹set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, ²and thine arm shall be uncovered, and thou shalt prophesy against it.

8 And, behold, ¹I will lay bands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee ⁶from one side to another, till thou hast ended the days of thy siege.

9 ¹Take thou also unto thee ^mwheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and millet, and ⁷fitches, and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof, according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon thy side; three hundred and ninety days shalt thou eat thereof.

10 And thy meat which thou shalt eat shall be ²by weight, twenty shekels a day: from time to time shalt thou eat it.

11 Thou shalt drink also water by measure, the sixth part of an hin: from time to time shalt thou drink.

12 And thou shalt eat it as barley cakes, and thou shalt bake it with dung that cometh out of man, in their sight.

13 And the LORD said, ⁶Even thus shall the children of Israel eat their defiled bread among the Gentiles, whither I will drive them.

14 Then said I, ⁹Ah Lord God! behold, ⁹my soul hath not been polluted; for from my youth up, even till now, ¹have I not eaten of that which dieth of itself, or is torn in pieces: neither came there ²abominable flesh into my mouth.

15 Then he said unto me, Lo, I have given thee cow's dung for man's dung, and thou shalt prepare thy bread therewith.

16 Moreover, he said unto me, Son of man, behold, ¹I will break the staff of bread in Jerusalem: and they shall ²eat bread by weight, and with care; and they shall drink water by measure, and with astonishment:

17 That they may want bread and water, and be astonished one with another, ²and consume away for their iniquity.

9 And I will do in thee ¹that which I have not done, and whereunto I will not do any more the like, because of all thine abominations.

10 Therefore the fathers shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers: and I will execute judgments in thee, and the whole remnant of thee will I scatter into all the winds.

11 Wherefore, ²as I live, saith the Lord God, Surely, because ²thou hast defiled my sanctuary with all thy detestable things, and with all thine abominations, therefore ²will I also diminish thee; ²neither shall mine eye spare, neither will I have any pity.

12 ¹A ¹third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee; and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; ²and I will scatter a third part into all the winds; ²and I will draw out a sword after them.

key to the doings, sufferings, and sacrifices here enumerated. There is difficulty in determining, with respect to some of these points, whether the instructions were literal or metaphorical. Be this as it may, if figures, they must represent facts in the history of the Jews of great moment. Images make a deeper impression on the mind than words; and the Jewish economy provided largely for this species of pictorial representation. The object of the whole was to admonish the people of their guilt, and to warn them of their doom, in order to bring them to repentance. The very threatenings of the Word originate in love.

Chap. V. 1-17. The picture drawn of the public distress might well have impressed the heart of the people; but it was to no purpose, they were wedded to their idols, and no severity of punishment could sever them from their evil courses. The very idea of distress so great, that the fathers should eat the sons, and the sons the fathers, would have made the ears of a people, not hopelessly hardened, to tingle! But they rushed madly on, heedless of warning, and even despising the man who gave it. As a nation, they are but too meet an emblem of multitudes of individuals in so-called Christian countries, whom nothing can move in the way of fear, or 13 Thus ^bshall mine anger be accomplished, and ^cI will cause my fury to rest upon them, ^dand I will be comforted: and they shall know that I the LORD have ^espoken it in my zeal, when I have accomplished my fury in them.

14 Moreover, ^fI will make thee waste, and a reproach among ^gthe nations that are round about thee, in the sight of all that pass by.

15 So it shall be a reproach and a taunt, ^han instruction and an astonishment, unto the nations that are round about thee, ⁱwhen I shall execute judgments in thee in anger and in fury, and in furious rebukes. ^jI the LORD have spoken it.

16 When I shall send upon them ^kthe evil arrows of famine, which shall be for ^ltheir destruction, and which I will send to destroy you: and I will increase the famine upon you, and will break your staff of bread:

17 So will I send upon you famine and evil beasts, and they shall bereave thee; ^mand pestilence and blood shall pass through thee; ⁿand I will bring the sword upon thee. ^oI the LORD have spoken it.

attract in the way of hope. They are alike dead to threats and to promises. They seem sold to iniquity, and intent upon their own destruction.

Chap. VI. 1-14. The prophet, turning from the infatuated people, by a sublime figure of speech is commanded to address himself to the mountains and the valleys and other parts of the country. The language implied the severest reproof of the Jews, seeing that Nature herself might be addressed with no less hope of a hearing than they, while professing to be rational creatures. The conclusion of the last verse is peculiarly emphatic. Mercy having been thrown away upon them, they would now have judgment upon judgment, each more terrible and crushing than its predecessor, until they were compelled to acknowledge the Most High. The word that had gone forth from the mouth of the Lord would not return void, but accomplish that which he pleased, and prosper in the thing whereto he sent it. Men who will not submit to the allurements of the Gospel, must lay their account with the terrors of the Law. Sooner or later, in this world or in the next, all that live and move will be compelled to listen to the voice of the Judge. Such as will not have him to reign over them, must submit to the alternative of being "cut in pieces!"

Chap. VII. 1-15. Buying and selling are the occupations of peaceful times, and do not comport with seasons of fear and peril. The buyer would soon be driven from his possessions, and the seller would only part with that which he could not long retain. Two events awaited the bulk of the proprietors of Judea; they would either perish by the sword or be carried away into captivity, so that in either event property would cease to be available end, the end is come upon the four corners of the land.

3 Now is the end come upon thee, and I will send mine anger upon thee, and will judge thee according to thy ways, and will ¹recompense upon thee all thine abominations.

4 And ^bmine eye shall not spare thee, neither will I have pity: ^cbut I will recompense thy ways upon thee, and thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

5 Thus saith the Lord God, ^dAn evil, an only evil, behold, is come.

6 An ^eend is come, the end is come: it ^fwatcheth for thee; ^gbehold, it is come.

7 The ^hmorning is come unto thee, O thou that dwellest in the land: ⁱthe time is come, ^jthe day of trouble is near, and not the ^ksounding again of the mountains.

8 Now will I shortly ^lpour out my fury upon thee, and accomplish mine anger upon thee; and I will judge thee according to thy ways, and will recompense thee for all thine abominations.

9 And mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: I will recompense ^mthee according to thy ways and thine abominations that are in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that I am ⁿthe LORD that smiteth.

10 Behold the day, ^obehold, it is come; the morning is gone forth; the rod hath blossomed; ^ppride hath budded.

11 ^qViolence is risen up into a rod of wickedness; none of them shall remain, nor of their ^rmultitude, nor of any of ^stheirs; neither shall there be wailing for them.

12 The time is come, the day draweth near: ^tlet not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn; for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.

13 For ^uthe seller shall not return to that which is sold, although ^vthey were yet alive: for the vision is touching the whole multitude thereof, which shall not return; neither shall any strengthen himself ^win ^xthe iniquity of his life.

14 They ^yhave blown the trumpet, even to make all ready; but none goeth to the battle: ^zfor my wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.

15 The ^{aa}sword is without, and the pestilence and the famine within: he that is in the field shall die with the sword; and he that is in the city, famine and pestilence shall devour him.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Ezekiel's vision of the image of jealousy, 7 and of the chambers of imagery.

for them. With respect to the first generation and most of the second, the captivity would be hopeless, since before the seventy years had passed away the bulk of them would have been gathered to their fathers. Ver. 16-27. The temple was not only the prime ornament of Jerusalem, but the wonder of the whole earth. No nation, whatever its wealth or power, possessed such a gem of architectural richness and beauty. Notwithstanding its peerless magnificence on its first erection, the successors of Solomon had expended large sums in further decoration. But the glory had departed. Kings and princes, priests and people, had alike forsaken the God of Abraham, and the temple was no longer the holy place and the habitation of the Most High. The departure from it of the Divine presence was a significant intimation of the departure of the Spirit of the Lord from the heart of the nation. Nothing remained, therefore, but defeat, disaster, and destruction. As the guilt of idolatry was all-pervading, so would be the chastisement; all classes would be involved in one common ruin. Punishment must follow transgression. There is no eluding the Divine vengeance. He who threatens has the know-the hand of the Lord God fell there upon me.

2 Then "I beheld, and lo a likeness as the appearance of fire: from the appearance of his loins, even downward, fire; and from his loins, even upward, as the appearance of brightness, as the colour of amber.

3 And "he put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and "the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north; where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy.

4 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I saw in the plain.

5 ¶ Then said he unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold northward at the gate of the altar this image of jealousy in the entry.

6 He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, "that I should go far off from my sanctuary? But turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see "greater abominations.

7 ¶ And he brought me to the door of the court; and, when I looked, behold a hole in the wall.

8 Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and, when I had digged in the wall, behold a door.

9 And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here.

10 So I went in and saw; and, behold, "every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, pourtrayed upon the wall round about.

11 And there stood before them "seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of "Shaphan, with every man his censer in his hand: and a thick cloud of incense went up.

12 Then said he unto me, Son of man, ledge and the power necessary to fulfil His threats. The cup which He presents, the wicked must drink to the very dregs.

Chap. VIII. 1-18. The figurative language of this chapter is strongly expressive of the idolatrous infatuation of the people. Its spirit appears to have obtained a complete embodiment in the nation. The practice of worshipping with the face to the East is specially noticed. The parties here mentioned in ver. 16 turned their backs on the Temple of God to worship the rising sun. The act was intensely significant of their renunciation of the God of Abraham, and their determination to adore material nature. The Holy of Holies was at the west of the sanctuary, which was westward of the altar, so that they could not worship the sun with their faces to the East, without turning their backs on the Lord and his Holy Place. It may, perhaps, be inferred, that the practice

1 A vision, whereby is shewed the preservation of some, 5 and the destruction of the rest. 8 God cannot be entreated for them.

HE cried also in mine ears with a loud voice, saying, "Cause them that have charge over the city to draw near, even every man with his destroying weapon in his hand.

2 And, behold, six men came from the way of "the higher gate, which "lieth toward the north, and every man a "slaughter-weapon in his hand; "and one man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn "by his side: and they went in, and stood beside the brazen altar.

here specified, which is still retained by a portion of professing Christians, was originally derived from the worshippers of the sun. This fact is worthy the attention of all who attach importance to the posture. When men have gone so far as to turn their backs on the simple scriptural institutions of the Gospel, there are no lengths they are not prepared to go. There is no need to wonder at their extravagances. Infidelity leads to superstition, and superstition is a fountain so ample as to furnish a multitude of streams.

Chap. IX. 1-11. The men with the destroying weapons probably represent the Chaldeans commissioned to destroy the city. The Oriental inkhorn is thrust slantingly into the girdle, and sometimes it has a chain. The Turks, Arabs, and others, are distinguished by an inkhorn as a badge of office. The mark alluded to in ver. 4, would seem to indicate that there were still some who sighed

3 And ⁴the glory of the God of Israel was gone up from the cherub, whereupon he was, to the threshold of the house; and he called to the man clothed with linen, which had the writer's inkhorn by his side;

4 And the LORD said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and ⁴set a mark upon the foreheads of the men ⁴that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof.

5 ¶ And to the others he said in mine ⁵hearing, 'Go ye after him through the city, and smite; let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity:

6 Slay ⁶utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women; but come not near any man upon whom is the mark; ⁶and begin at my sanctuary. Then they began at the ancient men which were before the house.

7 And he said unto them, Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain: go ye forth. And they went forth, and slew in the city.

8 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were slaying them, and I was left, ⁸that I fell upon my face, and cried, and said, Ah Lord God! wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?

9 Then said he unto me, 'The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great, ⁹and the land is full of blood, and the city full of ⁹perverseness: for they say, 'The LORD hath forsaken the earth, and the LORD seeth not.

over the city. And he went in in my sight.

3 Now the cherubims stood on the right side of the house when the man went in; ³and the cloud filled the inner court.

4 Then ⁴the glory of the LORD ⁴went up from the cherub, and ⁴stood over the threshold of the house; and the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the LORD's glory.

5 And the sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the outer court, as ⁵the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh.

6 And it came to pass, ⁶that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubims; then he went in, and stood beside the wheels.

7 And one cherub ⁷stretched forth his hand from between the cherubims ⁷unto the fire that was between the cherubims, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen; who took it, ⁷and went out.

8 ¶ And there appeared in the cherubims ⁸the form of a man's hand under their wings.

9 And when I looked, ⁹behold the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was ⁹as the colour of a beryl-stone.

10 And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, ¹⁰as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.

11 When they went, ¹¹they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place ¹¹whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went.

12 And their whole ¹²body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, ¹²were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had.

13 As for the wheels, ¹³it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel!

14 And ¹⁴every one had four faces: the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle.

15 And the cherubims were ¹⁵lifted up. ¹⁵This is the living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar.

16 And ¹⁶when the cherubims went, the and cried over the reigning abominations. It was common for the worshippers of particular idols to have the mark of their god on their foreheads, arms, or other parts of their bodies. These are called "sectarian marks" among the Hindus and others in India at the present time. The action imports, that God, in the midst of general judgments, will make a distinction between the innocent and the guilty, devising means to preserve the one, while the other is left to perish. Thus Lot was removed from Sodom before the fire and brimstone descended. Whoso is wise, and will understand these things, have only to observe the facts of history and of biography, to meet with countless illustrations of the same providential care over those who fear the Lord in every age and country.

Chap. X. 1-22. The wheels may denote the unity of design and operation which mark the countless dispensations of Providence, and combine them into one grand and harmonious whole. The portraiture drawn of these angelic beings is probably symbolical. The four faces, wings, and arms, may denote the sublime qualities of these immediate servants of the Most High: the face of a man, as indicated in the note on a former chapter, may signify intelligence, the lion courage, the ox patience, and the eagle penetration, and a disposition to ascend into wheels went by them; and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them.

17 When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: ^afor the spirit ^bof the living creature was in them.

18 Then ^bthe glory of the LORD departed from off the threshold of the house, ^cand stood over the cherubims.

19 And ^dthe cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them; and every one stood at the door ^eof the east gate of the LORD's house; ^fand the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

20 This is ^gthe living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by the river of Chebar; ^hand I knew that they were the cherubims.

21 Every one ⁱhad four faces apiece, and every one four wings; ^kand the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings.

22 And ^lthe likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themselves: ^mthey went every one straight forward.

MOREOVER, ^athe spirit lifted me up, and brought me unto the east gate of the LORD's house, which looketh eastward: and behold at the door of the gate five and twenty men; among whom I saw ^bJaazaniah the son of Azur, and ^cPelatiah the son of Benaiah, princes of the people.

2 Then said he unto me, Son of man, ^dthese are the men that devise mischief, and give wicked counsel in this city;

Israel: ^ffor I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them.

6 Ye have multiplied your slain in this city, and ye have filled the streets thereof with the slain.

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, ^gYour slain, whom ye have laid in the midst of it, they are the flesh, and this city is the caldron: ^hbut I will bring you forth out of the midst of it.

8 Ye have feared the sword; and I will bring a sword upon you, saith the Lord God.

9 And I will bring you out of the midst thereof, and deliver you into the hands of strangers, ⁱand will execute judgments among you.

10 Ye shall ^kfall by the sword: I will judge you in the border of Israel; ^land ye shall know that I am the LORD.

11 This ^mcity shall not be your caldron, neither shall ye be the flesh in the midst thereof; ⁿbut I will judge you in the border of Israel:

12 And ye shall know that I am the LORD: ^ofor ye have not walked in my statutes, neither executed my judgments, ^pbut have done after the manners of the heathen that are round about you.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, ^qwhen I prophesied, that Pelatiah the son of Benaiah died: ^rthen fell I down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said, ^s'Ah Lord God! wilt thou make a full end of the remnant of Israel?

14 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

15 Son of man, ^tthy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, ^u'Get you far from the LORD; ^vunto us is this land given in possession.

16 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God, Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them ^was a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come.

17 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God, I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the coun-heavenly regions. The wings outstretched imply preparedness to obey the commands of the Lord, while the wings bent down imply holy reverence of Jehovah. The need, and the fact of spiritual power giving effect to human agency, is clearly set forth. It is the Spirit of the Lord that acts in the wheels. We are here taught to connect everything good with Divine grace, and to ascend beyond the instrument to the Agent, from the creature to the Creator. They are blind, indeed, who see nothing of the Spirit in any wheel or in any motion, in success or failure, profit or loss, life or death.

Chap. XI. 1-12. In all national departures from God there are leaders whose position and conduct entail upon them peculiar guilt. The prophet is here shewn twenty-five men meeting together to devise mischief, and give wicked counsel to the city. Thus it is with evil as with good; great results may flow from the counsel and the action of a limited number of individuals. They ridiculed

Ezekiel's vision of a seething pot, perverting it into an impious jest—"The city is the caldron, and we be the flesh." Their impiety, however, was not suffered to pass unrebuked. The city being the caldron, and they the flesh, was a state of things but too substantially realised. Many of them perished there; and for such it was a caldron, and they the flesh boiled in it; but they who did not so perish were carried elsewhere, and there destroyed. The prophet charges them with shedding the blood of the righteous by their persecutions, and also with murdering the Jews, who had either been slain or would subsequently be cut off in the capture. Ver. 13-25. The sudden death of Pelatiah seems to have deeply affected the prophet, who was much alarmed and distressed, and led to inquire whether the Lord would destroy the remnant of his people. Amid the fearful gloom under which the prophet had conducted his observation and inquiry, a streak of glorious light is darted across the sky. In ver. 19 and 20 we have a definition tries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel.

18 And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof, and all the abominations thereof, from thence.

19 And ^aI will give them one heart, and ^aI will put a new spirit within you; ^aand I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh;

20 That ^athey may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: ^band they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

21 But as for them ^cwhose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, ^dI will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord God.

22 ^eThen did ^ethe cherubims lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

23 And ^fthe glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city.

24 ^gAfterwards ^gthe spirit took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit of God ^hinto Chaldea, to them of the captivity: ⁱso the vision that I had seen went up from me.

25 Then ^jI spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the LORD had shewed me.

8 ¹¹And in the morning came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, hath not the house of Israel, ¹²the rebellious house, said unto thee, ¹³What doest thou?

10 Say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, ¹⁴This burden concerneth the prince in Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that are among them.

13 My ¹⁸net also will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare: ¹⁹and I will bring him to Babylon, to the land of the Chaldeans; yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there.

14 And ²⁰I will scatter toward every wind all that are about him to help him, and all his bands; ²¹and I will draw out the sword after them.

15 And ²²they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall scatter them among the nations, and disperse them in the countries.

16 But I ²³will leave ²⁴a few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence; ²⁵that they may declare all their abominations among the heathen whither they come; ²⁶and they shall know that I am the LORD.

17 ²⁷Moreover, the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

18 Son of man, ²⁸eat thy bread with at once full and beautiful of spiritual conversion. We have had nothing like this in Ezekiel before, and it derives peculiar importance from the awful enunciations which have preceded it. It is as the morning star, after a night of darkness and of tempest, indicating the approach of the rising sun.

Chap. XII. 1-16. The types of this chapter bode terrible evils to the rebellious house of Israel; every event set forth was but too completely realised in the catastrophe which followed. It is foretold that the enemies of the prince should encompass him and stop his flight, as when a wild beast is entangled in a net. Jeremiah had foretold that Zedekiah should "see the eyes of the king of Babylon." There is here an apparent contradiction between the prophecies, which may have induced Zedekiah to discredit both; but the day declared that the predictions of both were true. He saw the eyes of the king of Babylon, not at Babylon, but at Babel, where his eyes were put out, after which he was carried to Babylon, which he did not see: and thus the predictions of both prophets were verified in a very remarkable manner, and the enigmas of Ezekiel fully explained. Ver. 17-28. The previous calamities which had overtaken the nation were all lost on the remnant, who only became more wicked than before. Their characters were such that even the heathen beheld a divine judgment in their punishment; and in this way they became acquainted with the truth, holiness, and justice of the God of Abraham. The Jews believed the judgments were still afar off, while the prophet told them they were at hand. In their impiety they said, "Every vision faileth;" the quaking, and drink thy water with trembling and with carefulness;

19 And say unto the people of the land, Thus saith the Lord God of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel, They shall eat their bread with carefulness, and drink their water with astonishment, that her land may be desolate from all that is therein, because of the violence of all them that dwell therein.

20 And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and the land shall be desolate; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

21 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

22 Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?

23 Tell them therefore, Thus saith the Lord God, I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel; but say unto them, The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision.

24 For there shall be no more any vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel.

25 For I am the LORD: I will speak, and the word that I shall speak shall come to pass; it shall be no more prolonged: for in your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord God.

26 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

27 Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off.

28 Therefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, There shall none of my words be prolonged any more; but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith the Lord God.

the foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing!

4 O Israel, thy prophets are like the foxes in the deserts.

5 Ye have not gone up into the gaps, neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle in the day of the LORD.

6 They have seen vanity and lying divination, saying, The LORD saith; and the LORD hath not sent them: and they have made others to hope that they would confirm the word.

7 Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination, whereas ye say, The LORD saith it; albeit I have not spoken?

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord God.

9 And mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies: they shall not be in the assembly of my people, neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel, neither shall they enter into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

10 Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, Peace; and there was no peace; and one built up a wall, and, lo, others daubed it with untemper'd mortar:

11 Say unto them which daub it with untemper'd mortar, that it shall fall: there shall be an overflowing shower; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall; and a stormy wind shall rend it.

12 Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it?

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury; and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and great hailstones in my fury, to consume it.

14 So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untemper'd mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

15 Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon them that have daubed it with untemper'd mortar; and will say unto you, The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it; prophet replied, "Every vision shall take effect." While they cried peace and safety, the prophet replied by crying destruction.

Chap. XIII. 1-16. The prophet here launches out against the deceivers of the nation, whom he likens to foxes in the desert, crafty, ravenous, and fierce. These men spoiled the vineyard of the Lord, and devoured the flock, as the foxes did the vineyards and the sheepfolds of Canaan. Such conduct received the punishment which it merited. These men were not only teachers of evil, but patterns of the lessons they taught, and therefore deserving of a double chastisement. The false prophets were reckoned amongst the dead, and compared to trees torn up to be planted no more, but left to wither and perish. They were likened to a builder erecting a wall with loose stones, and without cement. Such structures would not stand long, however they might be daubed over with mortar; there was but little contact and no cohesion, and, therefore, the building could serve no substantial purpose. Ver. 17-23. The pillows here referred to signify cushions—an article extensively used in Eastern countries. There are drawings of ladies in the East, represented on sofas with their arm thrown 16 To wit, the prophets of Israel, which prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which ¹see visions of peace for her, ²and there is no peace, saith the Lord God.

17 ¹ Likewise, thou son of man, ²set thy face against ³the daughters of thy people, which ⁴prophesy ⁵out of their own heart; and prophesy thou against them,

18 And say, Thus saith the Lord God, Woe to the women that ¹saw pillows to all ²arm-holes, and make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature, to ³hunt souls! Will ye hunt the souls of my people, and will ye save the souls alive that come unto you?

19 And will ye pollute me among my people for handfuls of barley, and for pieces of bread, ²to slay the souls that should not die, and ³to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to my people that hear your lies?

20 Wherefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against your pillows, where-with ye there hunt the souls ²to make them fly, and I will tear them from your arms, ³and will let the souls go, even the souls that ye hunt to make them fly.

21 Your kerchiefs also will I tear, and deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

22 Because with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, ²by ³promising him life;

23 Therefore ye shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations; ²for I will deliver my people out of your hand; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER XIV.

Hypocrites reproved, who enquire of God with idolatry in their heart.

THEN came certain of the elders of Israel unto me, and sat before me.

2 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, ²these men have set up their idols in their heart, ³and put the stumblingblock of their iniquity before their face: ⁴should I be enquired of at all by them?

4 Therefore speak unto them, and say over the pillow, which is thereby pressed close to the side, and against which they recline. The posture is one of ease and effeminacy, and to this the prophet seems to point. It is the evidence of a careless, voluptuous life, such as that which distinguished the bulk of the Asiatics. Travellers tell us that in Asia comfits and cushions are carried everywhere, for the accommodation of great people who desire repose. It is a token of peace, therefore, and security. The "hunting of souls" was a terrible employment even for the men, and still more for the gentler sex. The hunters spread their nets, and then drive the prey into them: so did these false teachers; they deceived the people, whom they ensnared with their lies, their divinations, and feigned visions, seducing them from the truth, and binding them to the chariot-wheels of idolatry.

unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet, ²I the LORD will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his idols;

5 That ²I may take the house of Israel in their own heart, because they are all ³estranged from me through their idols.

6 ¹ Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God, ²Repent, and turn ³*yourselves* from your idols; and ⁴turn away your faces from all your abominations.

7 For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, ²and cometh to a prophet to enquire of him concerning me; I the LORD will answer him by myself:

11 That the house of Israel may go no more astray from me, ²neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; but ³that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the Lord God.

12 ¹ The word of the LORD came again to me, saying,

13 Son of man, ²when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, ³and will cut off man and beast from it:

14 Though these three men, ²Noah, ³Daniel, and ⁴Job, were in it, they should ⁵deliver but their own souls by their righteousness, saith the Lord God.

Chap. XIV. 1-11. These elders seem to have been dishonest in their inquiries, and hence the exposure which was made of them by the Holy Spirit. With all their pretended reverence for the communications of the prophet, their hearts were full of idolatry. Notwithstanding what they had seen and suffered as the chastisement of that great sin, they were still impenitent, and wedded to the worship of their false gods. No answer was so confounding to these false teachers as the facts which convicted them of lying, and established the testimony of the true servants of Jehovah. Ver. 9 has been the subject of some carping; but the import is sufficiently clear to obviate all candid objection. The deceiving here mentioned partook of the character of a judicial sentence against the false prophet, who was given up to his own delusions, and left to be the victim

15 ¶ If I cause noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they ²spoil it, so that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts:

16 Though these three men were ³in it, ⁴as I live, saith the Lord God, ⁵they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only shall be delivered, but the land shall be desolate.

17 ¶ Or if I bring a sword upon that land, and say, Sword, go through the land; ⁶so that I cut off man and beast from it:

18 Though these three men were in it, ⁷as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, but they only shall be delivered themselves.

19 ¶ Or if I send a pestilence into that land, ⁸and pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast:

20 Though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, ⁹as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall but deliver their own souls by their righteousness.

21 For thus saith the Lord God, ¹⁰How much more when I send ¹¹my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast?

22 ¶ Yet, ¹²'behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters; behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ¹³'ye shall see their way and their doings: and ¹⁴'ye shall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it.

23 And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings: and ye shall know ¹⁵that I have not done without cause all that I have done in it, saith the Lord God.

CHAPTER XVI.

¹ By a wretched infant is shewed the original state of Jerusalem. ² God's love to her. ³ She is threatened with severe judgments.

AGAIN the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ¹'cause Jerusalem to know her ²'abominations,

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem, ³'Thy ⁴'birth and thy nativity ⁵is of the land of Canaan; thy father ⁶was an ⁷'Amorite, and thy mother an ⁸'Hittite.

4 And ⁹as ¹⁰'for thy nativity, in the day thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water ¹¹to supple ¹²thee: thou wast not salted at all, ¹³'nor swaddled at all.

5 None ¹⁴'eye pitied thee, to do any of these unto thee, to have compassion upon thee; but thou wast cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born.

6 ¶ And when I passed by thee, and saw thee ¹⁵'polluted in thine own blood, I said of his own deceived heart. Ver. 12-23. The iniquity of these men was so great that no intercession could avail for them so long as they continued hardened and impenitent. The cup of Jerusalem was full, and both the honour of the Divine government, and the people's own welfare, required that chastisement should follow sin; nothing but the fires of captivity could cleanse them from the filth of idolatry; and it is a fact, alike remarkable and gratifying, that that awful means answered the desired end. After the Restoration, we never again hear of idol-worship; whatever sins and transgressions may attach to them, they no longer worshipped the sun or moon, stock or stone, the workmanship of their own hands.

Chap. XV. 1-8. The nation of Israel had often been compared to a vine, which, if fruitful, is valuable as well as beautiful; but otherwise, it is unattractive, and without value. Of all trees which produce fruit, none are more worthless for any useful purpose. In the East, however, where wood is scarce, the vine is frequently used for the purpose of fuel. By the ruin of the Ten Tribes, and the preceding judgments executed upon Judah, both ends of the vine were already burned, so that the middle was not worth preserving. Israel was now without knowledge, without piety, and every way a tree that cumbered the ground. By "going out from one fire to another," is meant successive trials, each tending to scorch and consume, but, under the guidance of a merciful Providence, resulting in purification, not destruction. People who have once escaped the pollutions of the world through faith in the Gospel, on returning to their evil course become objects offensive to the moral eye, and reflect discredit on that very Gospel which they once adorned. In that case the vine has lost its sweetness; it is degenerate and worthless. It therefore behoves Christians to take heed lest there be in any of them an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God. He that continueth to the end shall be saved; but if any man draw back, the Lord will have no pleasure in him. The grace that is true is persevering; the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

Chap. XVI. 1-63. This is one of the most fearful portions of the writings of Ezekiel. The figures are so unto thee, when thou wast in thy blood, ¹Live; yea, I said unto thee, when thou wast in thy blood, Live.

7 I have ⁴caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field, and thou hast increased and waxen great, and thou art come to ⁶excellent ornaments: thy breasts are fashioned, and thine hair is grown, ¹whereas thou wast naked and bare.

8 Now when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee, behold, thy time was the time of love; and I spread my skirt over thee, and covered thy nakedness: yea, ¹I swear unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee, saith the Lord God, and thou becamest mine.

9 Then washed I thee with water; yea, I thoroughly washed away thy ⁶blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil.

10 I ¹clothed thee also with ²broidered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and ¹I girded thee about with fine linen, and I ¹covered thee with silk.

11 I decked thee also with ornaments, and ¹I put bracelets upon thy hands, and ¹a chain on thy neck.

12 And I put a jewel on thy ⁷forehead, and ear-rings in thine ears, ²and a beautiful crown upon thine head.

13 Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and broidered work: ¹thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil; ²and thou wast exceeding beautiful, ²and thou didst prosper into a kingdom.

14 And ⁷thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty: for it was perfect ⁷through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, and playedst the harlot because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by: his it was.

16 And ²of thy garments thou didst take, and deckedst thy high places with divers colours, and playedst the harlot thereupon: the like things shall not come, neither shall it be so.

17 Thou ²hast also taken thy fair jewels of my gold and of my silver, which I had given thee, and madest to thyself images of ²men, ⁶and didst commit whoredom with them;

18 And tookest thy broidered garments, and coveredst them: and thou hast set mine oil and mine incense before them.

19 My ⁴meat also which I gave thee, fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee, thou hast even set it before them for ²a sweet savour: and thus it was, saith the Lord God.

20 Moreover, thou hast taken ⁶thy sons and thy daughters, whom thou hast born unto me, ¹and these hast thou sacrificed unto them ¹to be devoured. ²*Is this* of thy whoredoms a small matter, 21 That thou hast slain my children, and delivered them to cause them ²to pass through the fire for them?

22 And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms ¹thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in thy blood.

23 And it came to pass, after all thy wickedness, ¹(woe, woe unto thee! saith the Lord God.)

24 That ¹thou hast also built unto thee an ²eminent place, ²and hast made thee an high place in every street.

25 Thou hast built thy high place ²at every head of the way, ²and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy whoredoms.

26 Thou hast also committed fornication ²with the Egyptians thy neighbours, great of flesh; and hast increased thy whoredoms, to provoke me to anger.

27 Behold, therefore ¹I have stretched out my hand over thee, ¹and have diminished thine ordinary food, ²and delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee, ¹the ²daughters of the Philistines, which are ashamed of thy lewd way.

28 Thou ²hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast unsatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldest not be satisfied.

29 Thou hast moreover multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan unto Chaldea; and yet thou wast not satisfied herewith.

30 How ²weak is thine heart, saith the Lord God, seeing thou doest all these things, ²the work of an imperious whorish woman;

31 ¹In that thou buildest thine eminent place in the head of every way, and ¹makest thine high place in every street; and hast not been as an harlot, ²in that thou scornest hire;

32 But as ²a wife that committeth adultery, which taketh strangers instead of her husband!

33 They ⁶give gifts to all whores; ⁴but thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and ⁵hirest them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom.

34 And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms: and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee, therefore thou art contrary.

35 ¶ Wherefore, ⁶O harlot, hear the word of the LORD:

36 Thus saith the Lord God, ¹'Because very strong, that nothing but facts of a stupendous character could require or warrant them. They indicate depravity such as had never before disgraced any nation, and of necessity were followed by stroke upon stroke, calamity upon calamity, till at length the nation was cut in pieces. The state of mind and moral feelings indicated in the chapter is such as to present a soil in which all manner of iniquity grows. There are no lengths of transgression for which they were not prepared — no depths of impiety they could not sound. Great thy filthiness was poured out, ^aand thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers, and with all the idols of thy abominations, ^band by the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them;

37 Behold, therefore I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated; I will even gather them round about against thee, and will discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness.

38 And I will judge thee, ^cas women that break wedlock and ^dshed blood are judged; and I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy.

39 And I will also give thee into their hand, and ^ethey shall throw down thine eminent place, and shall break down thy high places: they shall strip thee also of thy clothes, and shall take ^fthy fair jewels, and leave thee naked and bare.

40 They shall also bring up a company against thee, and they shall stone thee with stones, and thrust thee through with their swords.

41 And they shall ^gburn thine houses with fire, ^hand execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women: ⁱand I will cause thee to cease from playing the harlot, and thou also shalt give no hire any more.

42 So ^jwill I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, ^kand will be no more angry.

43 Because thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast fretted me in all these things; behold, therefore ^lI also will recompense thy way upon thine head, saith the Lord God: and thou shalt not commit this lewdness above all thine abominations.

44 ¶ Behold, ^mevery one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, ⁿAs is the mother, so is her daughter.

45 Thou art thy mother's daughter, ^othat loatheth her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which loathed their husbands and their children: your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite.

46 And thine ^pelder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand: and ^qthy younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand, is Sodom and ^rher daughters.

47 Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, nor done after their abominations; but, ^sas if that were a very little thing, thou wast corrupted more than they in all thy ways.

48 As I live, saith the Lord God, ^tSo-dom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done, thou and thy daughters.

49 Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, ^afulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy.

50 And they were haughty, ^band committed abomination before me: ^ctherefore I took them away as I saw good.

51 Neither hath ^dSamaria committed half of thy sins; but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and hast justified thy sisters in all thine abominations which thou hast done.

52 Thou also, which hast judged thy sisters, bear thine own shame, for thy sins that thou hast committed more abominable than they: ^ethey are more righteous than thou; yea, be thou confounded also, and bear thy shame, in that thou hast justified thy sisters.

53 When I shall ^fbring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them;

54 That thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded in all that thou hast done, in that thou art a comfort unto them.

55 When thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate.

56 For thy sister Sodom was not ^gmentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy ^hpride, 57 Before ⁱthy wickedness was discovered, as at the time of thy ^jreproach of the daughters of ^kSyria, and all that are round about her, the daughters of the Philistines, which ^ldespise thee round about.

58 ^mThou hast borne thy lewdness and thine abominations, saith the LORD.

59 For thus saith the Lord God, ⁿI will even deal with thee as thou hast done, ^owhich hast despised the oath in breaking the covenant.

60 ¶ Nevertheless, ^pI will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and ^qI will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant.

61 Then thou shalt ^rremember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger: and I will give them unto thee for daughters, ^sbut not by thy covenant.

62 And ^tI will establish my covenant and unparalleled as was the punishment, it came still short of the iniquity; and, but for the grace of God, it would have had no effect in changing the hearts of so corrupt a people.

CHAPTER XVII.

¹ By two eagles and a vine, 11 is shewed God's judgment upon Zedekiah for his revolting from Babylon to Egypt. ²² A promise of Christ's kingdom.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ³put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel;

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God, ⁴A great eagle with great wings, long-winged, full of feathers, which had ¹divers colours, ²came unto Lebanon, and took the highest branch of the cedar:

4 He cropped off the top of his young twigs, and carried it into a land of traffick; he set it in a city of merchants.

5 He took also of the seed of the land, and ²planted it in a fruitful field; ³he placed it by great waters, and set it as a willow-tree:

6 And it grew, and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him: so it became a vine, and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs.

7 There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers; and, behold, this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation.

8 It was planted in a good ²soil by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine.

9 Say thou, Thus saith the Lord God, ¹'Shall it prosper? shall he not pull up the roots thereof, and cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither? it shall wither in all the leaves of her spring, ²'even without great power, or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof.

10 Yea, behold, ¹being planted, shall it prosper? ²'shall it not utterly wither when the east wind toucheth it? it shall wither in the furrows where it grew.

11 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Say now to the rebellious house, ¹'Know ye not what these things mean? tell them, ²'Behold, the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, ²and led them with him to Babylon;

13 And hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, and hath ¹taken an oath of him: he hath also taken the mighty of the land:

14 That the kingdom might be base, that it might not lift itself up, ²'but that ¹by keeping of his covenant it might stand.

15 But ¹he rebelled against him, ²'in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, that they might give him horses and much people: shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? ³'or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?

16 As I live, saith the Lord God, surely in the place ¹where the king dwelleth that made him king, ²'whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, ³'even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die.

17 Neither ¹'shall Pharaoh, with his mighty army and great company, make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons:

18 Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant, when, lo, he had given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, As I live, ¹'surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head.

20 And ¹'I will spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare; and I will bring him to Babylon, and will plead with him there for his trespass that he hath trespassed against me.

21 And all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds; and ye ²'shall know that I the LORD have spoken it.

22 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; ¹I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon an high mountain and eminent:

23 In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; ²'and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell.

24 And all the trees of the field shall aids memory, also, by appealing to the imagination; it quickens the affections, and clothes truths in an attractive garb. It is a powerful way of communicating truth indirectly, as was exemplified in the case of David and Nathan. Had the charge of the faithful prophet against the erring king been direct, it would have failed to produce the remorse and repentance which immediately ensued. Nebuchadnezzar was meekly represented by an eagle, with its voracity, strength, and towering ambition. He went on conquering and to conquer, trampling in the dust everything that opposed his dominion, absorbing it into his own prodigious empire. The king of Egypt was also suitably shadowed forth by a great eagle; he was not less ambitious and rapacious than the king of Babylon, but his power was more limited. When Zedekiah planned a revolt from the king of Babylon, he entered into an alliance with the king of Egypt, hoping either to assert the independence of his own country, or at least to change his master; for he would rather have been the vassal of Egypt than of Babylon. The picture of these rival eagles is strikingly illustrative of human nature in the breasts of kings, shewing that it is neither in power nor wealth to satisfy the longings of humanity, and that they who have most would still have more; and know that I the LORD have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: ¹I the LORD have spoken, and have done it.

CHAPTER XVIII.

¹ God disalloweth the parable of sour grapes. ²⁵ He defendeth the equity of his dealings, ³¹ and exhorteth to repentance.

THE word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

² What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge?

³ As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel.

⁴ Behold, ^aall souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: ^bthe soul that sinneth, it shall die.

⁵ ¶ But ^cif a man be just, and do ^dthat which is lawful and right,

⁶ And hath not eaten upon the mountains, ^eneither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, ^fneither hath defiled his neighbour's wife, neither hath come near to a menstruous woman,

⁸ He ⁱthat hath not given forth upon usury, neither hath taken any increase, ^jthat ^khath withdrawn his hand from iniquity, ^lhath executed true judgment between man and man,

⁹ Hath ^mwalked in my statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly; he is just, ⁿhe shall surely live, saith the Lord God.

¹³ Hath given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase: shall he then live? he shall not live: he hath done all these abominations; he shall surely die; ^whis blood shall be upon him.

done, and considereth, and doeth not such like,

¹⁷ That hath taken off his hand from the poor, ^cthat hath not received usury nor increase, hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my statutes; ^dhe shall not die for the iniquity of his father, he shall surely live.

¹⁸ As for his father, because he cruelly oppressed, spoiled his brother by violence, and did ^ethat which is not good among his people, lo, ^feven he shall die in his iniquity.

¹⁹ ¶ Yet say ye, Why? doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live.

²⁰ The ^gsoul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: ^hthe righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

²² All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned unto him: ^lin his righteousness that he hath done he shall live.

²³ Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God; and ^mnot that he should return from his ways, and live?

²⁴ ¶ But when the righteous turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he live? All his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned: ⁿin his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die.

²⁵ ¶ Yet ye say, The way of the LORD is not equal. Hear now, O house of Israel, ^oIs not my way equal? ^pare not your ways unequal?

²⁶ When a righteous man turneth away that more obtained, instead of allaying, only increases the fever of a delirious ambition.

Chap. XVIII. 1-32. From the first, man has shewn a strange disposition to charge sin upon God; but conscience, fairly dealt by, will contradict the impious assertion, and charge home guilt upon its author. When impiety and infidelity have done their worst, all flesh will stand silent before God, feeling that the Judge of all the earth has done right. The sinner is conscious that he has transgressed the law, which is holy, just, and good; and feels that, in so doing, he acted freely and without compulsion, so that he is responsible for the thing he has done. Nothing can be more just than the ways of the Lord, and nothing more unjust than those of man. The case made out in the chapter before us so commends itself to the judgment and the conscience, as at once to cut short all objection. In the great day of account, every man will have to bear his own burden; none will be condemned for the doings of his fellows.

from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die.

27 Again, ^awhen the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, ^bhe shall save his soul alive.

28 Because he considereth, and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

29 Yet saith the house of Israel, The way of the LORD is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?

30 Therefore ^aI will judge you, O house of Israel, ^bevery one according to his ways, saith the Lord God. Repent, and turn ^cyourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin.

31 ^aCast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and ^bmake you a new heart and a new spirit: ^cfor why will ye die, O house of Israel?

32 For ^aI have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn ^byourselves, and live ye.

8 Then ^athe nations set against him on every side from the provinces, and spread their net over him: he was taken in their pit.

CHAPTER XX.

1 God refuseth to be consulted by the elders of Israel. 4 The story of their rebellions. 33 He threateneth to rule them with vigour, but promiseth to gather them.

AND it came to pass ^ain the seventh year, in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that certain of the elders of Israel came to enquire of the LORD, and sat before me.

2 Then came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Are ye come to enquire of me! ^aAs I live, saith the Lord God, I will not be enquired of by you.

4 ^aWilt thou ^bjudge them, son of man? wilt thou judge ^cthem? cause them to know the abominations of their fathers;

5 And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, ^aIn the day when I chose Israel, and ^blifted up mine hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob, ^cand made myself known unto them in the land of

The sole ground of condemnation is the rejection of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is the great transgression, and the penalty is death.

Chap. XIX. 1-14. A man is known by his companions; he that walketh with wise men shall be wise, but the companion of fools shall be destroyed. No man can be the intimate associate of the vicious without being contaminated. When men have once lost the fear of the Lord, the natural tenderness of the heart will be lessened, if not dried up, and an opposite affection will begin to manifest itself, preparing the soul for deeds, should circumstances prompt or favour, of cruelty and ferocity. Elevation to power is a test of character. Individuals who, while moving in an humble sphere, have been gentle and kind, on being exalted to wealth and power have become wicked and barbarous. It is a matter of sorrow rather than of astonishment, that devout and useful families often degenerate, till at length piety dies out in them. In such courses the downward progress may at first be unperceived; but at length it becomes fully developed, it may be, in a crash that fills the beholder with astonishment. No man becomes supremely wicked all at once. Grievous falls have often been preceded by long years of preparation.

Chap. XX. 1-28. The sovereign mercy of the Lord was the entire source of Israel's privileges. He who had redeemed them made known to them his will by his prophets and his providences when they had forgotten him, or turned to the worship of idols. He lifted up his hand to them, as was the custom in taking oaths, engag-

Egypt, when I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, I am the LORD your God;

6 In the day that I lifted up mine hand unto them, 'to bring them forth of the land of Egypt into a land that I had espied for them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands:

7 Then said I unto them, 'Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and ^adefile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

8 But ^athey rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me: ^athey did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt; ^athen I said, I will pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt.

9 But ^aI wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were, ^ain whose sight I made myself known unto them, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt.

10 Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness;

11 And ^aI gave them my statutes, and ^ashewed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them.

12 Moreover also, ^aI gave them my sabbaths, ^ato be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the LORD that sanctify them.

13 But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness: they walked not in my statutes, and they despised my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; ^aand my sabbaths they greatly polluted: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them in the wilderness, to consume them.

14 But ^aI wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out.

15 Yet also I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands;

16 Because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths: ^afor their heart went after their idols.

17 Nevertheless ^amine eye spared them from destroying them, ^aneither did I make an end of them in the wilderness.

18 But I said unto their children in the wilderness, Walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers, neither observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols:

19 I am ^athe LORD your God; ^awalk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them;

20 And ^ahallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God.

21 Notwithstanding the children rebelled against me: they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; they polluted my sabbaths: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them, to ^aaccomplish my anger against them in the wilderness.

22 Nevertheless ^aI withdrew mine hand, and ^awrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth.

23 I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, ^athat I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries;

24 Because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and ^atheir eyes were after their fathers' idols.

25 Wherefore ^aI gave them also statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live:

26 And I polluted them in their own gifts, ^ain that they caused to pass through the fire ^aall that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they might know that I am the LORD.

27 ¶ Therefore, son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Yet in this your fathers have blasphemed me, in that they have ^acommitted a trespass against me.

28 For ^awhen I had brought them into the land, for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering: there also they made their sweet savour, and poured out there their drink-offerings.

29 Then ^aI said unto them, What is the high place whereunto ye go? And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day.

30 Wherefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God, ^aAre ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations?

31 For when ye offer your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your ing himself to be their God, to deliver them, to bring them into the promised land, and there to preserve and bless them. But they forgot their mercies, and rebelled with a high hand in spite of warning, threatening, and chastisement. They received the gift of the holy Sabbath, the observance of which was fraught with boundless blessings, but they trampled it under foot. The Sabbath was not only a token of the relation of Jehovah to his people, seeing that at this time they met for worship and sacrifice; it also kept up the distinction of separation between them and the Gentiles—thus raising them, in point of privilege, high above all nations. Ver. 29-39. The love which chose the people, kept a merciful hold of them. While severely chastened, they were never destroyed. Although an end was made of the great prophetic empires, yet the seed of Abraham have been preserved. Ver. 40-49. These verses, as following those of a menacing character, which foretold judgments and idols, even unto this day: "and shall I be enquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord God, I will not be enquired of by you.

32 And that which cometh into your mind shall not be at all, that ye say, We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.

33 ¶ As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you:

34 And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out.

35 And "I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face.

36 Like "as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord God.

37 And I will cause you to "pass under the rod, and "I will bring you into "the bond of the covenant:

38 And I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me: I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and "they shall not enter into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

39 As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord God, Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me: "but pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols.

40 For in mine holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord God, "there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me: there will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the "first-fruits of your oblations, with all your holy things.

41 I will accept you with your "sweet savour, when I bring you out from the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; "and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen.

42 And "ye shall know that I am the LORD, "when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to your fathers.

43 And there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Ezekiel prophesieth the sword of the Lord against the land of Israel, sighing bitterly for a sign. 8 Another prophecy of a bright and sharp sword. 25 The fall of the profane prince of Israel, &c.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, "set thy face toward Jerusalem, "and drop thy word toward the holy places, and prophesy "against the land of Israel,

3 And say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the LORD, "Behold, I am against thee, and "will draw forth my sword out of his sheath, and will cut off from thee "the righteous and the wicked.

4 Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath against all flesh from the south to the north;

5 That "all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath: "it shall not return any more.

6 Sigh therefore, thou son of man, with the breaking of thy loins; and with bitterness sigh before their eyes.

7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For the tidings, because it cometh; "and every heart shall melt, and "all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall "faint, and all knees shall "be weak as water: behold, "it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord God.

8 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, desolation, were calculated to move and melt a repenting people. But all kindnesses were unavailing without an accompanying power to render them efficacious. Such a power, therefore, is here promised, and in due season it will be put forth. Great is the glory which awaits the seed of Abraham. The terrible severities of the prophet are eminently fitted to instruct and edify the Christian Church. Sin amongst God's own people, whether Jews or Gentiles, is peculiarly aggravated, and if not repented of it must be punished.

Chap. XXI. 1-23. The grace of God often makes a great difference, where Providence seems to make none. The expression, "I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked," cannot mean that every individual should be slain, since the fact was not so; it must, therefore, have signified removal from the land of Israel, not from the land of the living. But if a portion of the righteous should fall amid the terrible carnage arising from sword, famine, or pestilence, they would be removed to a better world, in mercy, and not in anger. All the 9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD; Say, A sword, a sword is "sharpened, and also furbished:

10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter; it is furbished that it may glitter: "should we then make mirth? "it contemneth ^Pthe rod of my son, as every tree.

11 And he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled: this sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, "to give it into the hand of the slayer.

12 Cry and "howl, son of man; for it shall be upon my people, it shall be upon all the princes of Israel: "terrors, by reason of the sword, shall be upon my people: smite therefore upon thy thigh.

13 "Because it is a trial, and what if the sword contemn even the rod? it shall be no more, saith the Lord God.

14 Thou therefore, son of man, prophesy, and smite thine "hands together, and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain: it is the sword of the great men that are slain, which "entereth into their privy chambers.

15 I have set the "point of the sword "against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied: ah! it is made bright, it is "wrapped up for the slaughter.

16 Go thee one way or other, "either on the right hand, "or on the left, whithersoever thy face is set.

17 I will also smite mine hands together, "and I will cause my fury to rest: I the LORD have said it.

18 ¶ The word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

19 Also, thou son of man, "appoint thee two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come: both twain shall come forth out of one land: and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city.

20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to "Rabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jerusalem the defenced.

21 For the king of Babylon stood at the "parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination: he made his "arrows bright, he consulted with "images, he looked in the liver.

22 At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint "captains, to open the mouth in the slaughter, to lift up the voice with shouting, to appoint

CHAPTER XXII.

1 A catalogue of sins in Jerusalem, and dispersion of the Jews. 17 God will burn them as dross in his furnace. 23 The general corruption of all orders of men.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, promises and emblems respecting them were abundantly verified. The plan delineated by the prophet was intended to point out the course of the invading army. There were three sorts of augury or divination used on such occasions: the names of the several cities intended to be assailed were written on several arrows, and then they were put all together, promiscuously, into a quiver, from which they were drawn out as lots are drawn; and the city whose name was written on the arrow first drawn was the first made war upon. Ver. 24-32. There is an awful dignity in the conduct of the prophet addressing the king, "Thou profane wicked prince!" Zedekiah was viewed as the head of the conspiracy; he had shewn his impiety by the violation of his solemn oath to the king of Babylon; but the time was come for visiting him with the Divine indignation in the shape of appropriate punishment. Jehovah caused him to be divested of his royal authority, and reduced to the miserable condition of a blind captive. Jeconiah, who was then in prison, was once more to be exalted, while Zedekiah, then on the throne, would be abased, and his family destroyed. The family of David and the government of Judah would be again and again overturned, till the coming of the Messiah, to whom the kingdom appertained, and whose right it was to rule the whole earth.

Chap. XXII. 1-17. Jerusalem, which had been usually described as the "holy," now became the "bloody" city. The prophet, therefore, was called to sit in judgment on her, while the Most High became the witness 2 Now, thou son of man, wilt thou judge, wilt thou judge the ^abloody city? ^ayea, thou shalt ^bshew her all ^cher abominations.

3 Then say thou, Thus saith the Lord God, The city sheddeth blood in the midst of it, that her time may come, ^aand maketh idols against herself to defile herself.

4 Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou hast shed; and hast defiled thyself in thine idols which thou hast made; and thou hast caused thy days to draw near, and art come even unto thy years: therefore ^ahave I made thee a reproach unto the heathen, and a mocking to all countries.

5 Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee, which art infamous and much vexed.

6 Behold, the princes of Israel, every one were in thee to their ^apower to shed blood.

7 In thee have they set light by father and mother; in the midst of thee have they ^adealt by ^boppression with the stranger; in thee have they vexed the fatherless and the widow.

8 Thou hast ^adespised mine holy things, and hast profaned my sabbaths.

9 In thee are ^amen that carry tales to shed blood; and in thee they eat upon the mountains; in the midst of thee ^athey commit lewdness;

10 In thee have they discovered their father's nakedness; in thee have they humbled her that was set apart for pollution.

11 And ^aone hath committed abomination with his neighbour's wife; and ^aanother hath ^blewdly defiled his daughter-in-law; and another in thee hath humbled his sister, his father's daughter.

12 In thee have they ^ataken gifts to shed blood; ^athou hast taken usury and increase, and thou hast ^agreedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion, ^aand hast forgotten me, saith the Lord God.

13 Behold, therefore ^aI have smitten mine hand at ^athy dishonest gain which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee.

14 Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with thee? ^aI the LORD have spoken it, and will do it.

15 And I will ^ascatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and will consume thy filthiness out of thee.

16 And thou shalt ^atake thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen, and ^athou shalt know that I am the LORD.

17 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, the house of Israel is to me become dross: all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are even the ^adross of silver.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore ^aI will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem.

20 As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you ^ain mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you.

21 Yea, I will gather you, ^aand blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, ^aand ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.

22 As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ^aye shall know that I the LORD have poured out my fury upon you.

23 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, say unto her, ^aThou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation.

25 There is a conspiracy of her prophets in the midst thereof, like a roaring lion ravening the prey: ^athey have devoured souls; they have taken the treasure and precious things; they have made her many widows in the midst thereof.

26 Her ^apriests have ^bviolated my law, and have ^bprofaned mine holy things: they have put no difference between the holy and profane, neither have they shewed difference between the unclean and the clean, and have ^ahid their eyes from my sabbaths, and ^aI am profaned among them.

27 Her princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, and to destroy souls, to get dishonest gain.

28 And her prophets have daubed them with untempered mortar, seeing vanity, and divining lies unto them, saying, Thus saith the Lord God, when the LORD hath not spoken.

29 The people of the land have used ^aoppression, and exercised robbery, and and accuser, shewing that she merited the condemnation denounced against her. The view here given of the state of Jewish society is deplorable in the extreme. The city of David, once distinguished for piety, truth, and justice, is now characterised by the murder of both old and young! Its children were sacrificed to idols, and its prophets slain because of their fidelity. Human life became of no value; the people, disregarding the interests of their own souls, no longer held the life of their fellow-creatures to be sacred. Originally, God had been the inheritance of his people; this, however, they now renounced, and looked to created things for comfort; they were, therefore, to be left to pursue their own course, and to comfort themselves as they best could. This is a sad condition for a people to be placed in; they who despise warning, must prepare to encounter the evils against which they have been cautioned, and to learn the value of their chief mercies by the loss of them. Ver. 18-31. Israel, in her better times, as compared with surrounding countries, buried in the darkness of idolatry, was fitly represented by fine gold as compared with the baser metals. But now the gold was gone, and little remained but the dross. They who ought to have been the leaders became the perverters of have vexed the poor and needy; yea, they have ^ooppressed the stranger ⁷wrongfully.

30 And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it; but I found none.

31 Therefore have I poured out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath: ⁷their own way have I recompensed upon their heads, saith the Lord God.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 The whoredoms of Aholah and Aholibah. 22 Aholibah is to be plagued by her lovers: 26 their adulteries reprov'd, 46 and their judgments declared.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, there were two women, the daughters of one mother;

3 And they committed ^awhoredoms in Egypt; they committed whoredoms in their youth: there were their breasts pressed, and there they bruised the teats of their virginity.

4 And the names of them were Aholah the elder, and Aholibah her sister; and ^bthey were mine, and they bare sons and daughters. Thus were their names; Samaria is ¹Aholah, and Jerusalem ²Aholibah.

5 And ^cAholah played the harlot when she was mine; and she doted on her lovers, ^don the Assyrians her neighbours,

6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, horsemen riding upon horses.

7 Thus she ^ecommitted her whoredoms with them, with all them that were ^fthe chosen men of Assyria, and with all on whom she doted: ^gwith all their idols she defiled herself.

8 Neither left she her whoredoms brought from Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.

9 Wherefore ^hI have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the Assyrians, upon whom she doted.

10 These discovered her nakedness: they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword: and she became ⁱfamous among women; for they had executed judgment upon her.

11 And when her sister Aholibah saw this, ^jshe was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms more than ^kher sister in her whoredoms.

12 She doted upon the Assyrians her neighbours, captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men.

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, ^cthat they took both one way;

14 And ^dthat she increased her whoredoms: for when she saw men ^epourtrayed upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with ^fvermilion,

15 Girded ^gwith girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads, ^hall of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity:

16 And ⁱas soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, ^jand sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.

17 And the ^kBabylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom; and she was polluted with them, ^land her mind was ^malienated from them.

18 So she ⁿdiscovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness; then ^omy mind was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister.

19 Yet she ^pmultiplied her whoredoms, in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.

20 For she doted upon their paramours, whose flesh ^qis as the flesh of asses, and whose issue ^ris like the issue of horses.

21 Thus thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.

22 ^sTherefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ^tI will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom thy mind is alienated, ^uand I will bring them against thee on every side;

23 The ^vBabylonians, and all ^wthe Chaldeans, ^xPekod, and Shoa, and Koa, and all the ^yAssyrians with them: all of them desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

24 And they shall come against thee ^zwith chariots, waggons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, ^{aa}which shall set against thee buckler, and shield, and helmet, round about: and ^{ab}I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments.

25 And ^{ac}I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall deal furiously with thee: they shall take away thy nose and thine ears; and thy remnant shall fall by the sword: they shall take thy sons the people, at once teaching rebellion and exemplifying it. The very temple was profaned by the most heinous crimes, and the religion of the true God lost by comparison with primitive idolatry.

Chap. XXIII. 1-27. The character of Ezekiel peculiarly fitted him for the painful work of reproofing the most aggravated iniquity. Pure in heart himself, his soul was filled with unutterable disgust at the profligacy of the nation; and setting aside false delicacy, he described things according to their actual existence, employing the most revolting figures to illustrate the most revolting facts. Ver. 23-49. The Chaldeans were formerly on good terms with Israel, but after the treachery of the king towards Babylon, their respect was turned into hatred and indignation, which led to the most destructive hostilities. The Princes of Judah, fond of heathen alliances, were ever ready to sacrifice their religion to their political projects. The idolatrous Ambassadors who came to Jerusalem saw but little difference between the princes and the nobles and the leading people, and the corresponding classes of their own country. The stones here referred to and thy daughters; and ^cthy residu shall be devoured by the fire.

26 They shall also ^dstrip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy ^efair jewels.

27 Thus ^ewill I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt; so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more.

28 For thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will deliver thee into the hand of them ^fwhom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated:

29 And they shall ^gdeal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and shall leave thee naked and bare; and the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

30 I will do these things unto thee, because ^hthou hast gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

31 Thou hast ⁱwalked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give ^kher cup into thine hand.

32 Thus saith the Lord God, Thou shalt ^ldrink of thy sister's cup deep and large: ^mthou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much.

33 Thou shalt be ⁿfilled with drunkenness and sorrow, ^owith the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria.

34 Thou shalt even ^pdrink it, and suck ^qit out, and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, ^rand pluck off thine own breasts: for I have spoken ^sit, saith the Lord God.

35 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, ^tBecause thou hast forgotten me, ^uand cast me behind thy back, ^vtherefore bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

36 ¶ The LORD said moreover unto me, Son of man, ^wwilt thou ^xjudge Aholah and Aholibah? yea, ^ydeclare unto them their abominations;

37 That they have committed adultery, ^zand blood is in their hands, and with their idols have they committed adultery, and ^{aa}have also caused their sons, whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire, to devour them.

38 Moreover, this they have done unto me: ^{ab}they have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, ^{ac}and have profaned my sabbaths.

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then ^{ad}they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and, lo, ^{ae}thus have they done in the midst of mine house.

40 And furthermore, that ^{af}ye have sent for men ^{ag}to come from far, unto whom a messenger was sent; and, lo, they came:

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 By a boiling pot, 6 is shewed Jerusalem's destruction. 15 By Ezekiel's not mourning for his wife, 19 is shewed the Jews' calamity to be beyond all sorrow.

AGAIN, in the ^aninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, Write thee the name of the day, even of this same day: the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem this same day.

3 And ^butter a parable unto ^cthe rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Set on a pot, set ^dit on, and also pour water into it:

4 Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder; fill ^eit with the choice bones.

5 Take the choice of the flock, and ^fburn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein.

6 ¶ Wherefore thus saith the Lord God, ^gWoe to the bloody city, to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum in ver. 47 may point to the proceedings of the Chaldeans during the siege, when, by means of their engines, they threw stones into the city, killing the people and beating down the houses. Forgetfulness of God inevitably leads to sin, and sin, when it is finished, brings destruction.

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and departure from evil is understanding.

Chap. XXIV. 1-14. This was the very day on which the king of Babylon commenced the siege of Jerusalem.

is not gone out of it! bring it out piece by piece; let no lot fall upon it.

7 For 'her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

8 That 'it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; 'I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

9 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, 'Woe to the bloody city! I will even make the pile for fire great.

10 Heap on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and spice it well, and let the bones be burnt.

11 Then set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and 'that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed.

12 She hath 'wearied herself with lies, and 'her great scum went not forth out of her: her scum shall be in the fire.

13 In 'thy filthiness is lewdness: 'because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, 'till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.

14 I 'the LORD have spoken it: it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, neither will I spare, neither will I repent: 'according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ Also the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

16 Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes 'with a stroke; yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears 'run down.

17 'Forbear to cry, 'make no mourning for the dead, bind the tire of thine head upon thee, and put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and cover not thy 'lips, and eat not the bread of men.

18 So I spake unto the people in the morning; 'and at even my wife died: and I did in the morning as I was commanded.

19 ¶ And the people said unto me, 'Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so?

CHAPTER XXV.

1 God's vengeance on the Ammonites declared for their malevolence to the Jews, 8 upon Moab and Seir, 13 upon Edom, 15 and upon the Philistines.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, 'set thy face against 'the Ammonites, and prophesy against them;

3 And say unto the Ammonites, Hear the word of the Lord God; Thus saith the Lord God, Because 'thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary, when it was profaned; and against the land of Israel, when it was desolate; and against the house of Judah, when they went into captivity;

4 Behold, therefore I will deliver thee to the 'men 'of the east for a possession,

The prophet, apprised of the awful fact by the Holy Spirit, made it known to the captives. The pot was intended to represent the city of Jerusalem, which was then placed in the furnace of affliction, meetly represented by water in a boiling state. This awful siege was continued throughout the long period of two years, involving an amount of affliction absolutely inconceivable. "Woe to the bloody city!" is a volume in itself. The cup of transgression had now been filled up to the brim, and nothing remained for the people but to drink the cup of judgment. Ver. 15-27. Things had now reached a crisis, and the prophet was directed to deliver his last message respecting the destruction of the city and the temple, which was introduced by a most affecting dispensation with respect to himself. He was apprised beforehand of the calamity which was coming upon him, and at the same time commanded to suppress the risings of natural affection. No utterance or token of sorrow or mourning was permitted to him. By this means the prophet's example would prove a lesson of submission to such of the people as were capable of receiving it. All events, whatever their character, are intended to promote the edification of God's people; and it is their wisdom to look for a blessing even from the grave itself, when closing over their dearest relatives.

Chap. XXV. 1-11. The enemies of the Jews rejoiced in the destruction of the temple, in particular, as the chief embodiment of their religious ordinances. No event which occurred in the course of the carnage was so gratifying to them. By the men of the East, the Chaldeans are of course intended, probably including the Ammonites, whom Jeremiah threatened with deliverance into the hands of the king of Babylon. The Ammonites, once a powerful people, have for many ages been utterly extinct; whereas the Jews, although and they shall set their palaces in thee, and make their dwellings in thee: ^athey shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk.

5 And I will make Rabbah ^aa stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching-place for flocks; ^aand ye shall know that I am the LORD.

6 For thus saith the Lord God, Because ^athou hast clapped ^{thine} hands, and stamped with the ^afeet, and ^arejoiced in ^aheart with all thy despite against the land of Israel;

7 Behold, therefore ^aI will stretch out mine hand upon thee, ^aand will deliver thee for ^aa spoil to the heathen; and I will cut thee off from the people, and I will cause thee to perish out of the countries: I will destroy thee; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

8 ^aThus saith the Lord God, Because that ^aMoab and ^aSeir do say, Behold, ^athe house of Judah is like unto all the heathen;

9 Therefore, behold, I will open the ^aside of Moab from the cities, from his cities ^{which are} on his frontiers, the glory of the country, ^aBeth-jeshimoth, ^aBaal-meon, and Kiriathaim, 10 Unto the men of the east ^awith the Ammonites, and will give them in possession, that the Ammonites ^amay not be remembered among the nations.

11 And ^aI will execute judgments ^aupon Moab; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

12 ^aThus saith the Lord God, ^aBecause that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah by ^ataking vengeance, and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them;

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, ^aI will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it; and I will make it desolate from ^aTeman; and they ^aof Dedan shall fall by the sword.

14 And I will lay my vengeance upon Edom ^aby the hand of my people Israel: and they shall do in Edom according to mine anger, and according to my fury; ^aand they shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord God.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Tyrus, for insulting over the distress of Jerusalem, is threatened. 7 Nebuchadnezzar's power against her. 15 Condemnation and mourning for her fall.

AND it came to pass in ^athe eleventh year, in the first ^aday of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem, ^aAha, she is broken that was ^athe gates of the people; ^ashe is turned unto me; I shall be replenished, ^anow she is laid waste:

3 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ^aI am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause ^amany nations to come up against thee, ^aas the sea causeth his waves to come up.

4 And they shall ^adestroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers: ^aI will also scrape her dust from her, ^aand make her like the top of a rock.

5 It shall be a ^aplace for ^athe spreading of nets in the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God; ^aand it shall become a spoil to the nations.

6 And her daughters which ^aare in the field shall be slain by the sword; ^aand they shall know that I am the LORD.

7 ^aFor thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, ^aa king of kings, from the north, with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and companies, and much people.

8 He shall slay with the sword thy daughters in the field; and ^ahe shall make a fort against thee, and ^acast a dispersed, are to be found in every region. They, nevertheless, survived a long period; they existed in large numbers so late as the second century of the Christian era. Ver. 12-17. The Idumeans, the posterity of Esau, retained a deep grudge against the Jews on account of their ancestor losing his birthright, and the subjugation of Edom by David. On these grounds, they appear to have taken every opportunity to vent their malice against Israel. Their conduct during the Captivity was so remarkable for its malignity as to call forth an imprecation from the inspired lips of the Psalmist: "Remember the children of Edom, Lord, in the day of Jerusalem, how they said, Down with it, down with it, even to the ground!" The Philistines were the old inhabitants of Canaan, who, from the days of Joshua, had entertained the most intense hatred towards Israel, which they displayed on every occasion, until ultimately reduced; and even then they aided the Chaldeans in cutting off the fugitives from captivity. The enemies of God's people have ever found that the pleasure of persecution was purchased at a dear rate. "Touch not mine anointed: do my prophets no harm," is counsel which has never been disregarded without incurring the severest penalties.

Chap. XXVI. 1-14. The eleventh year here mentioned is that of the taking of Jerusalem. The Tyrians were the chief merchants of the ancient world, and they seem to have thought the ruin of Jerusalem would contribute to their advantage, since they hoped to obtain the exclusive market, which had been partially shared between Israel and themselves. Their conduct was not overlooked by that Eye which observes all things, and a prediction came forth in due season of the vengeance which would repay their malignity. Of ancient prophecies, not one has met with a more complete and astonishing fulfilment than that against Tyre. Isaiah, Ezekiel, and Jeremiah, all united in testifying to the utter destruction of this mart of nations. In this way, mount against thee, and lift up the buckler against thee.

9 And he shall set ^aengines of war against thy walls, and with his axes he shall break down thy towers.

10 By reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall cover thee: thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots, when he shall enter into thy gates, ^aas men enter into a city wherein is made a breach.

11 With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets: he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall go down to the ground.

12 And they shall ^amake a spoil of thy riches, and make a prey of thy merchandise; and they shall break down thy walls, and destroy ^athy pleasant houses: and they shall lay thy stones, and thy timber, and thy dust, in the midst of the water.

13 And I will cause ^athe noise of thy songs to cease; and the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard.

14 And I will make thee like the top of ^arock: thou shalt be a ^aplace to spread nets upon; thou shalt be built no more: ^afor I the LORD have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

15 ^aThus saith the Lord God to Tyrus, Shall not the isles ^ashake at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry, when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee?

16 Then ^aall the princes of the sea shall come down from their thrones, and lay away their robes, and put off their broidered garments: they shall ^aclothe themselves with ^atrembling; they shall ^asit upon the ground, and shall tremble at ^aevery moment, and be astonished at thee.

17 And they shall ^atake up a lamentation for thee, and say to thee, ^bHow art thou destroyed ^athat wast inhabited of ^asea-faring men, the renowned city, which wast ^astrong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it!

18 Now shall the isles tremble in the day of thy fall; yea, the isles that are in the sea, shall be troubled at thy departure.

19 For thus saith the Lord God, When I shall make thee a desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; when I shall

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 The riches and large abundance of Tyrus. 26 Her great and iron coverable fall.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Now, thou son of man, ^atake up a lamentation for Tyrus;

3 And say unto Tyrus, O thou that art situate at the entry of the sea, ^awhich art a merchant of the people for many isles, Thus saith the Lord God, O Tyrus, thou hast said, I am ^aof perfect beauty.

4 Thy borders are in the ^amidst of the seas, thy builders have perfected thy beauty.

5 They have ^amade all thy ship-boards of fir-trees of Senir; they have taken cedars from Lebanon to make masts for thee.

6 Of ^athe oaks of Bashan have they made thine oars; ^athe ^acompany of the Ashurites have made thy benches of ivory, brought out of ^athe isles of Chittim.

7 Fine ^alinen, with broidered work from Egypt, was that which thou spreadest forth to be thy sail; ^ablue and purple from the isles of ^aElishah was that which covered thee.

8 The inhabitants of ^aZidon and ^aArvad were thy mariners: thy wise men, O Tyrus, that were in thee, were thy pilots.

9 The ancients of ^aGebal, and the wise men thereof, were in thee thy ^acalkers: all the ships of the sea with their mariners were in thee to occupy thy merchandise.

10 They ^aof Persia, and ^aof Lud, and of Phut, were in thine army, thy men of war: they hanged the shield and helmet in thee; they set forth thy comeliness.

11 The men of Arvad, with thine army, were upon thy walls round about, and the Gammadims were in thy towers: they hanged their shields upon thy walls round about; they have made thy beauty perfect.

Tyre had meted out to her the same measure she had dealt forth to Jerusalem. The trade she had so long monopolised was now divided amongst the other nations of the earth. Ver. 15-21. The destruction of Tyre necessarily produced a great effect on surrounding nations. It was so unlooked for, that none apprehended it, and when it took place, it was a blow which shook the nations like an earthquake. Nothing like it had ever occurred since commerce was known among mankind. Its extinction, for the time, involved extensive ruin to multitudes in other nations, who had traded with Tyre. A considerable period was required to restore matters to something like order, and to open up new channels of trade. The fulfilment of this prediction is eminently fitted to confirm the faith of the Church of God in the ancient testimony of the prophets.

Chap. XXVII. 1-36. The prophet is commanded to lament the fall of Tyre, as it was customary at funerals to bemoan the dead. The situation of Tyre, like that of England, was peculiarly favourable to the commerce of the world. It united the trade of Asia, Africa, and Europe, the whole of the then known world. At that period, the result of its commerce was boundless wealth and corresponding luxury. Pride came before her fall, and a haughty spirit before her destruction. The por-12 Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs.

13 ¹Javan, ^mTubal, and Meshech, they were thy merchants: they traded the persons of men and vessels of brass in thy ³market.

14 They of the house of ⁿTogarmah traded in thy fairs with horses, and horsemen, and mules.

15 The men of ^oDedan were thy merchants; many isles were the merchandise of thine hand: they brought thee for a present horns of ivory and ebony.

16 ^pSyria was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of ^qthe wares of thy making: they occupied in thy fairs with emeralds, purple, and brodered work, and fine linen, and coral, and ¹agate.

17 Judah, and the land of Israel, they were thy merchants: they traded in thy market wheat of Minnith, and Pannag, and honey, and oil, and ²balm.

18 Damascus was thy merchant in the multitude of the wares of thy making, for the multitude of all riches; in the wine of Helbon, and white wool.

19 ⁴Dan also and Javan, ³going to and fro, occupied in thy fairs: bright iron, cassia, and calamus, were in thy market.

20 Dedan was thy merchant in ⁴precious clothes for chariots.

21 ^rArabia, and all the princes of ^rKedar, they ^ooccupied with thee in lambs, and rams, and goats: in these were they thy merchants.

22 The merchants of Sheba and Raamah, they were thy merchants: they occupied in thy fairs with chief of all spices, and with all precious stones, and gold.

23 Haran, and ^rCanneh, and ^rEden, the merchants of ^rSheba, ^rAsshur, and Chilmad, were thy merchants.

24 These were thy merchants in ⁶all sorts of things, in blue ¹clothes, and brodered work, and in chests of rich apparel, bound with cords, and made of cedar, among thy merchandise.

25 The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee in thy market: and thou wast replenished, and made very glorious in the midst of the seas.

30 And shall cause their voice to be heard against thee, and shall cry bitterly, and shall cast up dust upon their heads; they shall wallow themselves in the ashes:

31 And ²they shall make themselves utterly bald for thee, and gird them with sackcloth; and ³they shall weep for thee with bitterness of heart and bitter wailing.

32 And in their wailing they shall ⁴take up a lamentation for thee, and lament over thee, saying, ⁴What city is like Tyrus, like ⁵the destroyed in the midst of the sea?

33 When thy wares went forth out of the seas, thou filledst many people; thou didst enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches, and of thy merchandise.

34 In the time when thou shalt be broken by the seas in the depths of the waters, thy merchandise, and all thy company in the midst of thee, shall fall.

35 All ¹the inhabitants of the isles shall be astonished at thee, and ²their kings shall be sore afraid, they shall be troubled in their countenance.

36 The merchants among the people shall hiss at thee; ³thou shalt be ⁴a terror, and ⁵never shalt be any more.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

¹ God's judgment upon the prince of Tyrus for his impious pride. 26 The judgment of Zidon, &c.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, say unto the prince of traiture here drawn by the prophet, exhibits a measure of refinement and of luxury unknown to any other portion of mankind, in any period of the world's history. Like England, the Tyrians were a commercial rather than a military people, and, therefore, they were not in a position to war with powers possessing large armies. This led them to hire soldiers from Persia, Lydia, and Libya, and other quarters where professional troops could be procured. Tyre is described as a ship in the midst of a storm, wrecked through the mismanagement of her seamen. When the Tyrians provoked Nebuchadnezzar to make war upon them, they may be said to have rowed their noble vessel into dangerous waters; and when the city was taken, it was "broken by the east wind in the midst of the seas." Such, too, was the fact in the case of Alexander the Great, which involved them in sore trouble, terminating in their utter ruin. Carnal policy rarely ends well; but such is the policy by which the nations of the earth have hitherto been governed.

The just and the right generally made no part of their concern; and aspiring to the property of their fellow-creatures, they lost their own.

Chap. XXVIII. 1-19. Prosperity and humility, in the present state of human nature, seem quite incompatible. Pride may consist with poverty, but it is naturally engendered by wealth. The Chaldeans were not among the people who traded with Tyre, so that there could be no grudge on commercial grounds; and yet in the course of Providence they were destined to execute the Divine judgments against her. The Chaldeans, at that time by far the most terrible of the nations, would oppose their victorious arms to the avarice and effeminacy of the Tyrian sovereign. The prophet dwells much on the delicacies and luxuries of the Tyrians, and the state of utter heathenism in which they were living. Nothing could exceed their splendour and glory. All that wealth could do for a people, wealth had done for

Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord God, ^aBecause thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, ^bI am a god, ^cI sit in the seat of God, in the midst of the seas; ^dyet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart as the heart of God: ^eBehold, ^fthou art wiser than Daniel; there is ^gno secret that they can hide from thee:

⁴ With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures:

⁵ By ²thy great wisdom, and by thy traffick, hast thou increased thy riches, ³and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches:

⁶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God, ^bBecause thou hast set thine heart as the heart of God;

⁸ They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas.

⁹ Wilt thou yet say before him that slayeth thee, I am God? but ^kthou shalt be a man, and no god, in the hand of him that ^hslayeth thee.

¹⁰ Thou shalt die ¹the deaths of the uncircumcised by the hand of strangers: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

¹¹ [¶] Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, ¹² Son of man, take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord God, Thou sealest up the sum, ^mfull of wisdom, and perfect in beauty.

¹³ Thou hast been ⁿin Eden the garden of God; every precious stone was thy covering, the ^osardius, topaz, and the diamond, the ^pberyl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the ^qemerald, and the carbuncle, and gold: the workmanship of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created.

¹⁵ Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, ^utill iniquity was found in thee.

them. They were thus lifted up to a pinnacle above all the nations, and from that they were precipitated into the abyss of destruction. The king of Tyre imbibed the spirit of his country, and made the extension of commerce his prime study, reckless of violence and oppression, and every species of iniquity that might further the objects of his cupidity. He counted his palaces, sanctuaries or temples to his own divinity, in which he sat glorifying himself, and receiving the worship of his submissive myriads. Ver. 20-26. Zidon was the mother city of Tyre, and as such was destined to share the fall of her doomed daughter. The pestilence was literally sent into Zidon, either by Nebuchadnezzar or the Chaldean army, who besieged it, or by the Persian king, who took and destroyed it. The closing verses were in part fulfilled by the return of the Jews from the Captivity, although it is probable the complete accomplishment still remains to be realised, when Israel shall be converted to the Lord, gathered from their present dispersion throughout the earth, and re-established in their own land. But there is something higher than this to be looked for. The heavenly Canaan cannot be lost to the chosen people. However dispersed, afflicted, and down-trodden, they will be all preserved and prepared to inherit the kingdom

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 The judgment of Pharaoh for his treachery to Israel.
8 The desolation of Egypt. 17 Egypt Nebuchadrezzar's reward, &c. 21 Israel shall flourish again.

In the ^atenth year, in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
2 Son of man, ^bset thy face against ^cPharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and ^dagainst all Egypt:

3 Speak, and say, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ^eI am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, ^fthe great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, ^gMy river is mine own, and I have made it for myself.

4 But ^hI will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will cause ⁱthe fish of thy rivers to stick unto thy scales; and I will bring thee up out of the midst of thy rivers, and all the fish of thy rivers shall stick unto thy scales.

5 And ^kI will leave thee thrown into the wilderness, thee and all the fish of thy rivers: thou shalt fall upon the ^lopen fields; thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered: ^mI have given thee for meat to the beasts of the field, and to the fowls of the heaven.

6 And all the inhabitants of Egypt shall ⁿknow that I am the LORD, because they have been ^aa staff of reed to the house of Israel.

7 When they took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder; and when they leaned upon thee, thou brakest, and madest all their loins to be at a stand.

8 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ^oI will bring a sword upon thee, and ^pcut off man and beast out of thee.

9 And the land of Egypt shall be desolate and waste; and they shall know that I am the LORD: because he hath said, The river is mine, and I have made it.

10 Behold, therefore I am against thee, and against thy rivers, and ^qI will make the land of Egypt ^rutterly waste and desolate, ^sfrom the tower of ^tSyene even unto the border of Ethiopia.

11 No ^ufoot of man shall pass through which it hath pleased God to appoint them from the foundation of the world.

Chap. XXIX. 1-16. The prophet now passes to Egypt, which had likewise earned for itself a portion of the awful visitations which were to descend upon the earth. The great dragon signified the crocodile in the Arabic tongue. Among the ancients it was a symbol of Egypt, and actually appears so on Roman coins. The unmanageable and terrific monster, which lay secure and fearless in the rivers, setting mankind at defiance, was a fair emblem of that power in former times. But what man could not do God would accomplish, by putting a hook in his jaws, and drawing him out for destruction. The prophet subsequently changes the figure—a sword is to be employed to cut, pierce, and destroy. This was realised by the outbreak of civil wars; and the invasion of Nebuchadnezzar proved the utter desolation of that once prosperous and powerful kingdom. He reduced it, for a time, to a state of utter ruin. Multitudes of people were carried thence, as the Jews had been into captivity, and numbers perished, or fled into other nations to 14 And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt, and will cause them to return ^zinto the land of ^aPathros, into the land of their ^bhabitation; and they shall be there a ^cbase kingdom.

16 And it shall be no more ^fthe confidence of the house of Israel, which ^gbringeth their iniquity to remembrance, when they shall look after them: ^hbut they shall know that I am the Lord God.

17 ¶ And it came to pass in ⁱthe seven and twentieth year, in the first month, in the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, ^jNebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyros: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled; yet had he no wages, nor his army, for Tyros, for the service that he had served against it:

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ^kI will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall take her multitude, and ^ltake her spoil, and take her prey; and it shall be the wages for his army.

20 I have given him the land of Egypt for his ^mlabour wherewith he served against it, because they wrought for me, saith the Lord God.

21 ¶ In that day will ⁿI cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth, and I escape the thralldom of the Chaldeans. This dismal state of things continued for the long period of forty years, as had been predicted—a term which clearly coincided with that of the ruin of the Babylonish monarchy; and it is probable that Cyrus permitted the captive Egyptians to return at the same time. Ver. 17-21. Egypt had never deserved well of Israel, notwithstanding the confidence which had been placed in it; but after the complete prostration of the Egyptian power, the Jews were no longer under the temptation to lean upon that reed. It is a fact, remarkable in history, and presenting a very striking idea of the strength of the fortifications of Tyre, that Nebuchadnezzar, notwithstanding his military experience and matchless power, besieged it thirteen years before he took it. This period was a severe exercise both of his pride and his patience. His soldiers endured the severest hardships, and the expense incurred was incalculable. It was hoped, however, that when the city should have been seized, the wealth would suffice to compensate the loss, and to reward so extended an effort; but the Tyrians exerted themselves to prevent this, by devising means for the removal of their most

CHAPTER XXX.

1 The desolation of Egypt and her helpers. 20 The arm of Babylon shall be strengthened to break the arm of Egypt.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God, Howl ye, Woe worth the day!

3 For the day is near, even the day of the LORD is near, a cloudy day; it shall be the time of the heathen.

4 And the sword shall come upon Egypt, and great pain shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt, and they shall take away her multitude, and her foundations shall be broken down.

5 Ethiopia, and Libya, and Lydia, and all the mingled people, and Chub, and the men of the land that is in league, shall fall with them by the sword.

6 Thus saith the LORD, They also that uphold Egypt shall fall; and the pride of her power shall come down: from the tower of Syene shall they fall in it by the sword, saith the Lord God.

7 And they shall be desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities shall be in the midst of the cities that are wasted.

8 And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I have set a fire in Egypt, and when all her helpers shall be destroyed.

9 In that day shall messengers go forth from me in ships, to make the careless Ethiopians afraid, and great pain shall come upon them, as in the day of Egypt: for, lo, it cometh.

10 Thus saith the Lord God, I will also make the multitude of Egypt to cease by the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.

11 He and his people with him, the terrible of the nations, shall be brought to destroy the land: and they shall draw their swords against Egypt, and fill the land with the slain.

12 And I will make the rivers dry, and sell the land into the hand of the wicked; and I will make the land waste, and all that is therein, by the hand of strangers: I the LORD have spoken it.

13 Thus saith the Lord God, I will also destroy the idols, and I will cause their images to cease out of Noph; and there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt: and I will put a fear in the land of Egypt.

14 And I will make Pathros desolate, and will set fire in Zoan, and will execute judgments in No.

15 And I will pour my fury upon Sin, the strength of Egypt; and I will cut off the multitude of No.

16 And I will set fire in Egypt: Sin shall have great pain, and No shall be rent asunder, and Noph shall have distresses daily.

18 At Tehapneh also the day shall be darkened, when I shall break there the yokes of Egypt; and the pomp of her strength shall cease in her: as for her, a cloud shall cover her, and her daughters shall go into captivity.

19 Thus will I execute judgments in Egypt; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

20 ¶ And it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first month, in the seventh day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 21 Son of man, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and, lo, it shall not be bound up to be healed, to put a roller to bind it, to make it strong to hold the sword.

22 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and will break his arms, the strong, and that which was broken; and I will cause the sword to fall out of his hand.

23 And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries.

24 And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand: but I will break Pharaoh's arms, and he shall groan before him with the groanings of a deadly-wounded man.

valuable treasures, or else by their destruction, so that the plunder of the city was insufficient to defray the charges of the siege, and to repay the labours of the army. As if to compensate for these disappointments, the Lord, in his providence, gave them Egypt, with all its wealth, which sufficed to enrich them. These ancient conflicts serve to illustrate the true character of human nature. The business of the Prophetic Monarchies was bloodshed. They succeeded, by war, successively to establish themselves, and to sustain their powers for the appointed time; and by war they were successively overthrown and annihilated. The misery of man has, throughout every age, been great upon him, because of the warlike spirit. The alternative was to destroy, or to be destroyed.

Chap. XXX. 1-19. From ver. 9 we are taught that God, in his providence, would take care to communicate to the Ethiopians the knowledge of the ruin of Egypt, and to alarm them for their own safety. Such intelligence was much fitted to awaken terror, since the calamities impending were such as they could neither resist nor elude. The figure in ver. 12 is clearly taken from the Nile, the overflowing of which produces plenty and wealth to the surrounding country, so that the drying up of the river would have been equivalent to the destruction of the crop, and the introduction of famine. God was about to dry up the sources of national prosperity, as a punishment to the inhabitants, which they could neither prevent nor endure without utter ruin. The fate of Egypt is one of the most remarkable known to history. It was first overrun and plundered by the Chaldeans, to whom succeeded the Persians, Macedonians, Romans, Saracens, Mamelukes, and Turks, who have successively possessed and crushed it. Nothing can exceed the tyranny which they have there 25 But I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down; and they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall stretch it out upon the land of Egypt.

26 And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 A recital unto Pharaoh of the glory of Assyria, 10 and the fall thereof for pride. 18 The like destruction to Egypt.

AND it came to pass ^ain the eleventh year, in the third month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ^bspeak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to his multitude, ^cWhom art thou like in thy greatness?

3 Behold, ^dthe Assyrian was ^ea cedar in Lebanon ^fwith fair branches, and with a shadowing shroud, and of an high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs.

4 The waters ^gmade him great, the deep ^hset him up on high with her rivers running round about his plants, and sent out her ⁱlittle rivers unto all the trees of the field.

5 Therefore ^jhis height was exalted above all the trees of the field, and his boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long, because of the multitude of waters, when ^khe shot forth.

6 All the fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs, and under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young, and under his shadow dwelt all great nations.

7 Thus was he fair in his greatness, in the length of his branches: for his root was by great waters.

8 The cedars in the garden of God could not hide him: the fir-trees were not like his boughs, and the chesnut-trees were not like his branches; ^lnor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty.

9 I have ^mmade him fair by the multitude of his branches; so that ⁿall the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him.

10 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height, and he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs, ^aand his heart is lifted up in his height;

11 I have therefore delivered him into the hand of ^bthe mighty one of the heathen; ^che shall surely deal with him: ^dI have driven him out for his wickedness.

12 And ^estrangers, the terrible of the nations, have cut him off, and have left him: ^fupon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen, and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land; and all the people of the earth are ^ggone down from his shadow, and have left him.

13 Upon ^hhis ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain, and all the beasts of the field shall be upon his branches:

14 To ⁱthe end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height, neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs, neither their trees ^jstand up in their height, all that drink water: for they are all ^kdelivered unto death, to ^lthe nether parts of the earth, in the midst of the children of men, with them that go down to the pit.

15 Thus saith the Lord God, In the day when he went down to the grave ^mI caused a mourning: I covered the deep for him, and I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed; and I caused Lebanon to ⁿmourn for him, and all the trees of the field fainted for him.

16 I ^omade the nations to shake at the sound of his fall, ^pwhen I cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit: ^qand all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, ^rshall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth.

17 They also ^swent down into hell with him, unto ^tthem that be slain with the sword; and ^uthey ^vthat were his arm, that ^wdwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen.

18 ¶ To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth: ^xthou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised with ^ythem that exercised, and the prostration which has resulted from it. Ver. 20-26. The king of Babylon had previously dispossessed the king of Egypt of all his conquests from the river of Egypt to the Euphrates, so that this part of his territory was taken away, and never could be recovered; and now the Lord threatens to destroy the remainder of his power, even the kingdom of Egypt itself. When God invades, the strongest nation must submit. Whenever the besom of destruction is moved by the Divine Hand, nations are but as the dust of the threshing-floor before it.

Chap. XXXI. 1-9. The words of the prophet would probably find their way to the ears of the king of Egypt, who would naturally treat them as the kings of Israel had done. Pharaoh was proud and impious, too great to listen to lessons touching his own weakness and wickedness, and to hear of that God in whom he lived and moved and had his being. His vanity and pride, however, would conduce, not to his safety, but his danger. The Assyrian was fitly compared to the cedar, a tree remarkable for its loftiness, strength, and longevity; but even the cedar could be cut down, and then hewed into pieces. That monarchy was not only great, but the most ancient known to history; but never was the soil more thoroughly cleared of a cedar than the earth was of that monarchy. The time was when its military power trampled down every other against which it was exerted. But when its hour was completed, it waxed feeble and passed away. Ver. 10-18. Several prophets united in testifying to the pride and wickedness of the Assyrian monarchy, and in its ultimate fall as its punishment. It was a warning to the kings of the earth against the ambition which had brought ruin upon it.

CHAPTER XXXII.

¹ A lamentation for the fearful fall of Egypt. ¹¹ The sword of Babylon shall destroy it.

AND it came to pass ^ain the twelfth year, in the twelfth month, in the first day of the month, ^bthat the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

² Son of man, ^btake up a lamentation for Pharaoh king of Egypt, and say unto him, ^c'Thou art like a young lion of the nations, ^dand thou ^eart as a ^f'whale in the sea; and thou camest forth with thy rivers, and troubledst the waters with thy feet, and fouledst their rivers.

³ Thus saith the Lord God, ^a'I will therefore spread out my net over thee with a company of many people; and they shall bring thee up in my net.

⁴ Then ^a'will I leave thee upon the land, I will cast thee forth upon the open field, and will cause all the fowls of the heaven to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee.

⁵ And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains, and fill the valleys with thy height.

⁶ I will also ^a'water with thy blood the land ^b'wherein thou swimmest, ^ceven to the mountains; and the rivers shall be full of thee.

⁷ And when I shall ^a'put thee out, ^b'I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light.

⁸ All the ^a'bright lights of heaven will I make ^b'dark over thee, and set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord God.

¹¹ ¶ For thus saith the Lord God, ^a'The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon thee.

of the nations, all of them; and they shall spoil the pomp of Egypt, and all the multitude thereof shall be destroyed.

¹⁴ Then will I make their waters deep, and cause their rivers to run like oil, saith the Lord God.

¹⁵ When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the country shall be ^a'desolate of that whereof it was full, when I shall smite all them that dwell therein, ^b'then shall they know that I ^cam the LORD.

¹⁶ This is the lamentation wherewith they shall lament her: the daughters of the nations shall lament her: they shall lament for her, ^aeven for Egypt, and for all her multitude, saith the Lord God.

¹⁷ ¶ It came to pass also in the twelfth year, in the fifteenth day of the month, ^bthat the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

¹⁹ Whom dost thou pass in beauty? ^a'go down, and be thou laid ^b'with the uncircumcised.

²² ^a'Asshur is there, and all her company: his graves are about him: all of them slain, fallen by the sword:

²³ Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, and her company is round about her grave; all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused ^a'terror in ^b'the land of the living.

The fall of that power affected many nations and provinces and peoples who had contributed to its greatness. The centralising power which the success of its arms had established was attended with the advantage of giving peace to a large portion of the earth, which was favourable to agriculture and commerce and general improvement; and on this ground the component parts of the empire had reason to lament its extinction.

Chap. XXXII. 1-16. This was about a year and a half after the taking of Jerusalem, when the captives had become reconciled to their situation. The king of Egypt is here likened to two of the fiercest creatures known on earth or in the water—the lion and the crocodile. It has been thought that the latter refers to the hippopotamus, who walks overhead in the deepest river, feeding on the plants which grow at the bottom. The word, however, signifies a sea monster or crocodile. It cannot mean whale, the term here employed, since the whale has no feet. The army of the Chaldeans, however, would bring a net strong enough to seize and hold him. In Egypt they had several methods of taking the crocodile; in Siam, it is seized by laying nets at proper distances across the river, and bringing them together, by which he is inveigled, and drawn ashore. Ver. 17-32. The whole of these lofty figures portend 25 They have ^aset her a bed in the midst of the slain with all her multitude: her graves are round about him; ^aall of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword: though their terror was caused in the land of the living, yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit: he is put in the midst of them that be slain.

26 There is ^bMeshech, Tubal, and all her multitude: her graves are round about him; all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword, though they caused their terror in the land of the living.

27 And they ^cshall not lie with the mighty that are fallen of the uncircumcised, which are gone down to hell with ^dtheir weapons of war: and they have laid their swords under their heads; ^ebut their iniquities shall be upon their bones, though they were the terror of the mighty in the land of the living.

28 Yea, ^fthou shalt be broken in the midst of the uncircumcised, and shalt lie with them that are slain with the sword.

29 There is Edom, her kings, and all her princes, which with their might are ^glaid by them that were slain by the sword: they shall lie with the uncircumcised, and with them that go down to the pit.

30 There ^hbe the princes of the north, all of them, and all ⁱthe Zidonians, which are gone down with the slain: with their terror they are ashamed of their might; and they lie uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword, and bear their shame with them that go down to the pit.

31 Pharaoh shall see them, and ^jshall be comforted over all his multitude, even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword, saith the Lord God.

32 For ^kI have caused my terror in the land of the living: and he shall be laid in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that are slain with the sword, even Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord God.

people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their watchman:

3 If, when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet, and warn the people;

4 Then ^awhosoever ^bheareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come and take him away, ^chis blood shall be upon his own head.

5 He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him: ^dbut he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul.

6 But if the watchman see the sword come, ^eand blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but ^fhis blood will I require at the watchman's hand.

7 So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

8 When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, ^gthat wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

9 Nevertheless, ^hif thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; ⁱif he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but ^jthou hast delivered thy soul.

10 ¶ Therefore, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, Thus ye speak, saying, If our transgressions and our sins ^kbe upon us, and we pine away in them, how should we then live?

11 Say unto them, ^lAs I live, saith the Lord GOD, ^mI have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: ⁿturn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel?

12 Therefore, thou son of man, say unto the children of thy people, The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression: as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth.

13 When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; if he trust to violence and destruction to Egypt. "Hell," mentioned in ver. 21, signifies the state of the dead, where deceased tyrants, with their subjects, are sublimely represented as coming to meet the king of Egypt with his auxiliaries, upon their arrival at the same place. Ver. 27 is deeply affecting; they would not be allowed to lie among those heroes who had died a natural death, and were laid in their graves with pomp and magnificence. The going down to hell with their weapons of war, implies the being buried in their armour, with their weapons lying by their sides—a thing very common amongst ancient nations. Never is the misery of heathenism so strikingly exhibited as in connexion with the tomb. The Gospel alone has brought life and immortality to light, giving the human race to know that there is a hereafter, dread or glorious, according to the respective states of parties before God, and the character they bear as illustrative of that state.

Chap. XXXIII. 1-24. These verses constitute one of the most important portions of inspiration, touching the equity of the Divine dispensations, and the responsibility of man to his Maker. The concern of the reader is to get as precisely as may be at the mind of the Spirit; and so doing, every part of the statement here set forth will not fail to commend itself both to his understanding and his conscience. Then, as now, however, there was a disposition amongst men not simply to carp at sovereignty, his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousnesses shall not be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it.

14 Again, when I say unto the wicked, 'Thou shalt surely die; 'if he turn from his sin, and do ^athat which is lawful and right;

15 If the wicked ^arestore the pledge, ^agive again that he had robbed, ^awalk in the statutes of life, without committing iniquity; ^ahe shall surely live, he shall not die.

16 None ^aof his sins that he hath committed shall be mentioned unto him: he hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely live.

17 ¶ Yet the children of thy people say, The way of the LORD is not equal: but, as for them, their way is not equal.

18 When ^athe righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby.

19 But if the wicked turn from his wickedness, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby.

20 Yet ye say, The way of the LORD is not equal. O ye house of Israel, 'I will judge you every one after his ways.

21 ¶ And it came to pass in the twelfth year of our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month, that one that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, saying, 'The city is smitten.

22 Now the hand of the LORD was upon me in the evening, afore he that was escaped came, and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning; and my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb.

23 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, they that inhabit those wastes of the land of Israel speak, saying, 'Abraham was one, and he inherited the land: ^abut we are many; the land is given us for inheritance.

25 Wherefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, 'Ye eat with the blood, and ^alift up your eyes toward your idols, and shed blood: and shall ye possess the land?

26 Ye ^astand upon your sword, ye ^awork abomination, ^aand ye defile every one his neighbour's wife: ^aand shall ye possess the land?

27 Say thou thus unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, As I live, 'surely they that are in the wastes shall fall by the sword; and him that is in the open field will I give to the beasts ^ato be devoured; and they that be in the forts, and ^ain the caves, shall die of the pestilence.

28 For 'I will lay the land ^amost desolate, and the pomp of her strength shall cease; and the mountains of Israel shall be desolate, that none shall pass through.

29 Then ^ashall they know that I am the LORD, when I have laid the land most desolate, ^abecause of all their abominations which they have committed.

30 ¶ Also, thou son of man, the children of thy people still are talking ^aagainst thee by the walls, and in the doors of the houses, and speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying, Come, I pray you, and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the LORD.

31 And they come unto thee ^aas the people cometh, and ^athey sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they ^ashew much love, ^abut their heart goeth after their covetousness.

32 And, lo, thou art unto them as ^aa very lovely song ^aof one that hath a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument: for they hear thy words, but they do them not.

33 And ^awhen this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,) then ^ashall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 The shepherds of Israel reproved. 7 God's judgment against them. 11 His providence over his flock. 20 The kingdom of Christ.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy against ^athe shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD but at equity; they sighed for the privilege of sowing one thing and reaping another. Their rebellious hearts prompted them to believe that the Lord was a hard master, reaping where he had not sowed, and gathering where he had not strewed. The prophet was instructed to put an end to all this, by an explicit and copious statement of the true facts of the Divine method of procedure. Ver. 25-33. From these verses we learn that, in spite of positive prohibition, in conformity with the hateful superstition of idolatry, they ate flesh with the blood, and obstinately clung to the worship of idols, adding to this deeds of violence and immorality of the most flagrant description. Such conduct called for punishments corresponding to its enormity, and such punishments involved the utter destruction of the country. The habits of nations are not soon changed. The practice of standing at the doors of the houses, and talking together, prevails at the present time. Recent travellers have testified that the villagers, in the evening, sit in social companies, enjoying the evening air before the doors of their dwellings, talking at their ease with much vivacity and self-complacency. It was natural, at such times, to converse about the prophet, and to prompt one another to go and hear him, for purposes, not of benefit, but of amusement, which, of course, implied perversion of his words, and contempt of his mission. They found a certain excitement and gratification in listening to the man of God, who was endowed with an excellent voice and an impressive delivery. This made up the sum total of their religion; and it is well for the present generation each to inquire how far his differs from that of those self-deceived transgressors.

Chap. XXXIV. 1-16. The prophet has hitherto mainly addressed himself to princes and potentates, cities and states; but he is now directed to deal with the shepherds of Israel—signifying their rulers and teachers, priests and prophets, scribes and elders. The address is pungent and overwhelming, superior to anything found in the Old Testament Scriptures, and only surpassed by the address of the Saviour to the Scribes and Pharisees. The misconduct of these shepherds of Israel is delineated with the utmost force and fulness. The demon of selfishness appears to have been the spirit which ruled them.

unto the shepherds, ^bWoe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds ^cfeed the flocks?

3 Ye ^deat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ^eye kill them that are fed: ^fbut ye feed not the flock.

4 The ^gdiseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye ^hsought that which was lost; ⁱbut with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them.

5 And ^jthey were scattered, ^kbecause there is no shepherd: ^land they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered.

6 My sheep ^mwandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, ⁿand none did search or seek after them.

7 ¶ Therefore, ^oye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

8 As I live, saith the Lord God, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, but ^pthe shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock:

9 Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

10 Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ^qI am against the shepherds; ^rand I will require my flock at their hand, ^sand cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more: ^tfor I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.

11 ¶ For thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ^uI, even I, will both ^vsearch my sheep, and seek them out.

12 ^wAs a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered ^xin the cloudy and dark day.

13 And ^yI will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, ^zand feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country.

14 I will ^afeed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: ^bthere shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel.

15 I will feed my flock, and ^cI will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God.

16 I will ^dseek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: ^ebut I will destroy the fat and the strong; ^fI will feed them with judgment.

17 And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, ^gI judge between ^hcattle and cattle, between the rams and the ⁱhe-goats.

18 Seemeth it ^jto a small thing unto you ^kto have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must ^ltread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet?

19 And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet; and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet.

20 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God unto them, ^mBehold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.

21 Because ⁿye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad;

22 Therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle.

23 And I will set up one Shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even ^omy servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.

24 And ^pI the LORD will be their God, and my servant David ^qa prince among them: I the LORD have spoken it.

25 And ^rI will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land; ^sand they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods.

26 And I will make them, and the places round about my hill, a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his

They were utterly regardless of the people's welfare, provided they could exact of them tributes and taxes, tithes and perquisites, to sustain themselves in their downward career of profligacy and rebellion. Not only had they done the people no good, but they had perpetrated on them enormous evils. It had been infinitely better for Israel to have been without shepherds, and wholly left to take care of themselves. Such conduct involved the deepest guilt, and had to be visited with the severest punishment. In proportion as the shepherds had neglected the flock, the Chief Shepherd thought of them with compassion. The promises to them are on a scale as comprehensive as the threatenings against their oppressors. Ver. 17-31. Under these striking figures great facts and principles are concealed. The "fat and the strong" of the fold, signifies the rich and the powerful, the proud and self-sufficient, the luxurious and the sensual. These shepherds either wholly neglected to rule and teach, or they ruled only to oppress, and they taught only to pervert. Here, as elsewhere, light blends with darkness, and hope with desperation. There can be no mistake as to the "One Shepherd," even David, that is, the Lord Jesus. He will rectify all disorder, remove the wicked, and separate the righteous. He would live as Prince among them, Head over all things and his Church, the joy of his people, and the glory of the universe. Under him the Church would flourish, showers of blessings would descend from on high, fructifying the spirit of the human race, and leading it to bring forth fruits unto holiness, having their end unto everlasting life. Nothing can be more beautiful than the picture drawn of the "plant of renown," who season: there shall be ^ashowers of blessing.

27 And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD, ^awhen I have broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that served themselves of them.

28 And they shall no more be a prey to the heathen, neither shall the beasts of the land devour them; but they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid.

29 And ^aI will raise up for them a plant ^aof renown, and they shall be no more ^aconsumed with hunger in the land, neither bear the shame of the heathen any more.

30 Thus shall ^athey know that I the LORD their God am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are my people, saith the Lord God.

31 And ^aye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord God.

is to supply the wants of all that live under his shade. Those who have travelled in the East, where they beheld flocks reclining beneath the shady trees, had the best illustration that can possibly be of the force and beauty of the metaphor.

Chap. XXXV. 1-15. The enmity of the Edomites to the Jews, which might be said to proceed from their common mother, was subsequently aggravated by other circumstances. Although the meekness and prudence of Jacob for a time subdued it, their descendants revived and perpetuated the quarrel, exasperating it on every occasion which offered. The last strong proof of this deplorable enmity was given by the Edomites at the siege of Jerusalem, as was observed in a previous note. At that time all was prosperity in Edom, while Judah was covered with desolation; but this state of things would in due season be reversed, with this difference, that for Edom there would be no restoration—her cities would remain ^a“a perpetual desolation.” The fact that ^a“the Lord was there,” was sufficient guarantee for the seed of Abraham, who had already given abundant proofs of his omnipotence, in putting them in possession of it, and maintaining them therein, although now for a season the Chaldeans were permitted to carry them away for their good. Whatever affliction may befall the people of God, it will be sanctified. Its object is to preserve, and not to destroy. Would they avoid such afflictions, and the necessity for such fiery processes of purification? To do so they have only to walk in the fear of the Lord and in the comforts of the Holy Ghost; to live as seeing Him who is invisible, and to offer up soul, body, and spirit a living sacrifice to the Lord who bought them.

Chap. XXXVI. 1-24. The restoration of Israel from the Captivity is everywhere spoken of as a matter of the most absolute certainty; no peradventure whatever attaches to it; it was in no degree contingent upon anything that should be done by the people. Notwithstanding the return of the Jews, their temporal prosperity was never so great after, as it had been previous to the Captivity. The language, therefore, of ver. 11, respecting their increase and their happiness, refers to their purification from idolatry, their maintenance of the pure worship of God, and their hope of the coming Saviour. It may be, moreover, that these predictions will only made you desolate, and "swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession unto the residue of the heathen, "and ye are "taken up in the lips of talkers, "and are an infamy of the people:

4 Therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God; Thus saith the Lord God "to the mountains and to the hills, to the "rivers and to the valleys, "to the desolate wastes and to the cities that are forsaken, which became "a prey and derision to the residue of the heathen that are round about;

5 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, "Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken "against the residue of the heathen, and "against all Idumea, which have "appointed my land into their possession "with the joy of all their heart, "with despiteful minds, to cast it out for a prey.

6 Prophecy therefore concerning the land of Israel, and say unto "the mountains and to the hills, to the rivers and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy, and in my fury, because "ye have borne the shame of the heathen:

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, "I have lifted up mine hand, Surely "the heathen that are about you, they shall bear their shame.

8 ¶ But ye, O mountains of Israel, "ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are "at hand to come.

9 For, behold, "I am for you, and "I will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown:

10 And "I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it: and the cities shall be inhabited, and "the wastes shall be builded:

11 And I will multiply upon you man and beast; and they shall increase and bring fruit: "and I will settle you after your old estates, and "will do better unto you than at your beginnings; "and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

12 Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and "they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt "no more henceforth bereave them of men.

13 Thus saith the Lord God, Because they say unto you, Thou land devourest up men, and hast bereaved thy nations;

14 Therefore thou shalt devour men "no more, neither "bereave thy nations any more, saith the Lord God.

15 Neither will I "cause men to hear in thee the shame of the heathen any more, neither shalt thou bear the reproach of the people any more, neither shalt thou cause thy nations to fall any more, saith the Lord God.

16 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

17 Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, "they defiled it by their own way, and by their doings: their way was before me as the uncleanness of a removed woman.

18 Wherefore "I poured my fury upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols where-with they had polluted it:

19 And I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries: "according to their way, and according to their doings, I judged them.

20 And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, "they profaned my holy name, when they said to them, These are the people of the LORD, and are gone forth out of his land.

21 ¶ But I had pity for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went.

22 Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God, I do not "this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went.

23 And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; "and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, saith the Lord God, "when I shall be sanctified in you before "their eyes.

24 For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land.

25 ¶ Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you.

26 A "new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away "the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh.

receive their full accomplishment in the conversion of the Jews, and their return to Palestine. The colouring seems decidedly too high for anything short of that glorious consummation. Ver. 25-38. The promise given here is one of a thoroughly evangelical character. The clean water which is to be sprinkled upon them, whereby they are to be cleansed from all their filthiness and all their idols, was just the descent of the Holy Spirit. The result of this would be the importation of a new heart and a new spirit, and the removal of the stony heart out of their flesh, and the substitution of it by a heart of flesh. There is no mistaking this language; it savours so thoroughly of New Testament grace and truth, as to shew that New Testament times alone can bring its full accomplishment. Nothing of this sort has ever yet befallen the Jews. The promise, "I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments to do them," is so thoroughly harmonious with the New Testament, that to a future time we must look for the completion of the glorious events here in part enumerated. The last verse is a suitable climax to the whole. The flock of the Lord at 28 And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; ^aand ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.

29 I will also save you from all your uncleannesses; and I will call for the corn, and will increase it, and lay no famine upon you.

30 And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye shall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen.

31 Then shall ye remember your own evil ways, and your doings that were not good, and shall loathe yourselves in your own sight, for your iniquities, and for your abominations.

32 Not ^afor your sakes do I this, saith the Lord God, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel.

33 Thus saith the Lord God, In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities, I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, and the wastes shall be builded.

34 And the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by.

35 And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become ^blike the garden of Eden: and the waste, and desolate, and ruined cities, are become fenced, and are inhabited.

36 Then the heathen, that are left round about you, shall ^cknow that I the LORD build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate: ^d*'I the LORD have spoken it, and I will do it.*

37 Thus saith the Lord God, ^e*'I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will increase them with men like a flock.*

38 As the ^f*'holy flock*, as the flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts, so shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

about: and, behold, there were very many in the open ¹valley; and, lo, ²*they were* very dry.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, ³*can these bones live?* And I answered, ⁴*'O Lord God, thou knowest.*

4 Again he said unto me, Prophecy upon these bones, and say unto them, ⁵*'O ye dry bones, hear the word of the LORD.*

5 Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, Behold, ⁶*'I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live:*

6 And ⁷*'I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and 'ye shall know that I am the LORD.*

7 So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, ⁸*'there was* a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone.

8 And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above: but there was no breath in them.

9 Then said he unto me, Prophecy unto the ⁹wind, prophecy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord God, ¹⁰*'Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live.*

10 So I prophesied, as he commanded me, and ¹¹*'the breath came* into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

11 Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, ¹²*'Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts.*

12 Therefore prophecy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O my people, ¹³*'I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel:*

13 And ¹⁴*'ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves,* 14 And ¹⁵*'shall put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live; and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that 'I the LORD have spoken it, and performed it, saith the LORD.*

Jerusalem is to be holy; the waste places are to be filled with flocks of men, and all are to know the Lord. These chapters, notwithstanding their beauty and glory, and the hopes with which they are so fully charged, are meanwhile without influence upon the Jews. The veil which is on the eyes of their understanding is so thick, that they can see nothing that is so spiritual. But the Gentiles who have been taught of God understand these things, and it behoves them to look, and long, and pray for the consummation.

Chap. XXXVII. 1-14. This is one of the most notable portions of this wonderful prophecy. Under the emblem of the open valley, strewn with dry bones, the hopeless condition of the Jews throughout the provinces of the Chaldean empire is clearly signified. Nothing seemed so improbable as their restoration to their native land, and yet all things are possible to God, who, in due season, will accomplish the seeming impossibility. While this had its accomplishment in the restoration from the Captivity, it will have a far more signal and glorious fulfilment by the restoration of the people to the favour they have so long forfeited, and to the land of their fathers' sepulchres. It is clear that the prophet's mind was irradiated by light from the Cross, since he expresses himself in a manner which nothing else can explain. When the true converts to Christ, the spiritual Israel, shall be delivered from their anti-Christian oppressors, and collected into one kingdom, forming one flock, under one Shepherd, that which is now figure will become fact. The state of the dry bones was an impressive image of the moral condition of the Jewish nation, as it is of the

15 ¶ The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

16 Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, "For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, "For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions:

17 And join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand.

18 And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meapest by these?

19 Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.

20 And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes.

21 ¶ And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land:

22 And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all:

23 Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions: but I will save them out of all their dwelling-places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God.

24 And David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

1 The army of Gog. 8 His evil attempts. 14 God's judgment against him.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him,

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal;

4 And I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords:

5 Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya with them; all of them with shield and helmet:

6 Gomer, and all his bands; the house of Togarmah of the north quarters, and all his bands; and many people with thee.

7 Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, and be thou a guard unto them.

spiritual condition of the whole human race. It might, at first sight, seem a hopeless undertaking to prophesy to these dry bones; but nothing is really so which God commands. The "wind" is an emblem of the Spirit, the Author of life in the dead soul. Wherever that Spirit is, life takes the place of death, light of darkness; souls are renewed, enmities are extinguished, and men are reconciled to God. Ver. 15-28. Union is the strength, as division is the weakness of nations. It is here foretold, that God's people shall be united in affection and service. This was in part realised after the Captivity, when all the Israelites who returned settled under the same government, forming but one nation. It is probable, however, that there will hereafter be a more complete fulfilment of it. A union awaits the world which nothing but the Gospel can produce, and which it will not fail to realise, of which we have yet had no sign or sample. The whole family of Adam will, one day, be united under one Head, reconciled to one Lord, and rejoicing in one salvation.

Chap. XXXVIII. 1-6. Great difficulty attends the exposition of these words. The point is to ascertain the power signified by Gog. It has been suggested that it means Antiochus Epiphanes, and that the deliverance predicted for the Church occurred in the time of the Maccabees. This, however, is by no means certain. Others have contended that it is a term of general application to the enemies of the Church of God, who have been discomfited by his superintending providence. Others, satisfied with neither of these views, have held it to refer to certain special enemies that shall subsequently arise, either on the conversion of the Jews, or at their restoration to their own land. Another class of interpreters connect it with the second advent of the Saviour to reign personally on earth. Where men of piety and learning have reached conclusions so various, the fact sufficiently proves the absence of the necessary light, which time alone can furnish. Ver. 7-23. Gog is here ironically summoned to prepare himself for the conflict which is to ensue, since, the greater his force, the greater the humiliation of his defeat. The language of ver. 16 and 17 is full of hope for the Church. When these predictions shall have been accomplished, the nations then will stand astonished at the foreknowledge of the prophet, which will materially contribute to prepare them for the conversion which is to follow. The victory over Gog and his associates will be a principal 8 ¶ After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, ^aand they shall dwell safely all of them.

9 Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm; thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee.

10 Thus saith the Lord God, It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt ^bthink an evil thought:

11 And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; ^cI will go to them that are at rest, that dwell ^dsafely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates, 14 ¶ Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord God; ⁱIn that day when my people of Israel ^jdwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it?

15 And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army:

16 And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, ^kas a cloud to cover the land; ^lit shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, ^mthat the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes.

17 Thus saith the Lord God, Art thou he ⁿof whom I have spoken in old time ^oby my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years, that I would bring thee against them?

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 God's judgments upon Gog. 8 Israel's victory. 17 The feast of the fowls and beasts.

THEREFORE, thou ^ason of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, Thus saith the Lord God, ^bBehold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal:

2 And ^cI will turn thee back, and ^dleave but the sixth part of thee, ^eand will cause thee to come up from the ^fnorth parts, and will bring thee upon the mountains of Israel:

3 And ^gI will smite thy bow out of thy left hand, and will cause thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand.

4 Thou shalt ^hfall upon the mountains of Israel, thou, and all thy bands, and the people that is with thee: ⁱI will give thee unto the ravenous birds of every ^jsort, and to the beasts of the field ^kto be devoured.

5 Thou shalt fall upon the ^lopen field; for I have spoken ^mit, saith the Lord God.

6 And ⁿI will send a fire on Magog, and among them that dwell ^ocarelessly ^pin the means of shaking the empire of infidelity, and leading to the universal submission of the heathen world. It is distinctly intimated here that Gog will as a cloud cover the land. The gathering will be such as had not previously been witnessed, and the overthrow a new thing in the earth. Gog and Magog, according to John, will compass the "beloved city," the true Church, after the Millennium, when fire will come down from God out of heaven, and devour them. There is, nevertheless, amid seeming certainty, great difficulty in determining even the general import of these awful predictions. It has been extensively believed that, in addition to the external opposition, a spirit of discord will break out throughout the invaders, which will issue in mutual destruction, which will be completed by hailstones, pestilence, fire, and brimstone.

Chap. XXXIX. 1-16. The immense army of Gog, led forth against Israel, will embody nearly all the men of his land; and the subsequent judgments which are to descend upon them, will reduce them to the sixth part of the whole. The "fire" probably means some terrible judgment that will rest on the countries whence the army of Gog was collected. There is something absolutely terrible in the picture here presented of a havoc to be made in the army of Gog. Nothing like it has ever occurred since the world began. Seven whole months will be required to clear the dead bodies off the isles; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

7 So ¹will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people Israel; ²and I will not let them pollute my holy name any more: and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, ³the Holy One in Israel.

8 ¶ Behold, ¹it is come, and it is done, saith the Lord God; ²this is the day whereof I have spoken.

9 And they that dwell in the cities of Israel ¹shall go forth, ²and shall set on fire and burn the weapons, both the shields and the bucklers, the bows and the arrows, and the ³hand-staves, and the spears, and they shall ⁴burn them with fire seven years:

10 So that they shall take no wood out of the field, neither cut down ¹any out of the forests; for they shall burn the weapons with fire: and they shall spoil those that spoiled them, and rob those that robbed them, saith the Lord God.

11 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, ¹that I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Israel, the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea; and it shall stop the ²noses of the passengers: and there shall they bury Gog, and all his multitude; and they shall call it, The valley of ³Hamon-gog.

12 And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the land.

13 Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them: and it shall be to them a renown, ¹the day that I shall be glorified, saith the Lord God.

14 And ²they shall sever out men of continual employment, passing through the land, to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth, ³to cleanse it: after the end of seven months shall they search.

15 And the passengers ¹that pass through the land, when ²any seeth a man's bone, then shall he ³set up a sign by it, till the buriers have buried it ⁴in the valley of Hamon-gog.

16 And also the name of the city ¹shall be ²Hamonah. Thus shall they cleanse the land.

17 ¶ And, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God, ¹Speak unto ²every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field, Assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side ³to my ⁴sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, ⁵even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh, and drink blood.

18 Ye shall ¹eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, and of ²goats, ³of bullocks, all of them ⁴fatlings of Bashan.

19 And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you.

20 Thus ¹ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, with mighty men, and with all men of war, saith the Lord God.

21 And ¹I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, ²and my hand that I have laid upon them.

22 So the house of Israel shall ¹know that I am the LORD their God from that day and forward.

23 ¶ And ¹the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore ²hid I my face from them, and ³gave them into the hand of their enemies; so fell they all by the sword.

24 According to their uncleanness, and according to their transgressions, have I done unto them, and hid my face from them.

25 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, ¹Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, ²and will be jealous for my holy name;

26 After that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid.

27 When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, ²and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations;

28 Then ¹shall they know that I am the LORD their God, ²which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there.

29 Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God.

CHAPTER XL.

1 The time, manner, and end of Ezekiel's vision. 39 The eight tables, 44 the chambers for the singers. 48 The porch of the house.

IN the five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month, in face of the earth, although all the people of the land will be engaged in it. That will be to them a "renown," the day that Jehovah shall be glorified. Ver. 17-29. It was a custom amongst the ancients to invite their friends to a feast on the occasion of a sacrifice. Acting on this figure, God invites the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air to come and partake of the sacrifice of slaughtered enemies of his Church. God's judgments on his people's enemies are a sacrifice to his justice, and a feast of the faith and hope of his people. They have been long down-trodden and oppressed, but the day will come when they will lift up their heads, and behold the vengeance which is reserved for their adversaries.

Chap. XL. 1-3. The vision which commences here extends to the end of the book. At this time the temple at Jerusalem was in ruins, seeing that it was now four-the fourteenth year after that the city was smitten, in the self-same day ^athe hand of the LORD was upon me, and brought me thither.

2 In ^bthe visions of God brought he me into the land of Israel, and set me upon a very high mountain, ^{1b}by which was as the frame of a city on the south.

3 And he brought me thither, and, behold, there was a man, ^cwhose appearance was like the appearance of brass, ^dwith a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring-reed; and he stood in the gate.

4 And the man said unto me, Son of man, ^ebehold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shall shew thee; for to the intent that I might shew them unto thee art thou brought hither: ^f'declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.

5 And behold a wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring-reed of six cubits long, by the cubit and an hand-breadth: so he measured the breadth of the building, one reed; and the height, one reed.

6 ^gThen came he unto the gate ²which looketh toward the east, and went up the stairs thereof, and measured the threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad, and the other threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad.

7 And every little chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits; and the threshold of the gate, by the porch of the gate within, was one reed.

8 He measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed.

9 Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and ^hthe posts thereof, two cubits; and the porch of the gate was inward.

10 And ⁱthe little chambers of the gate eastward were three on this side, and three on that side; they three were of one measure: and the posts had one measure on this side and on that side.

11 And he measured the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits; and the length of the gate, thirteen cubits.

12 The ^jspace also before the little chambers was one cubit on this side, and the space was one cubit on that side; and the little chambers were six cubits on this side, and six cubits on that side.

13 He measured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber to the roof of another: the breadth was five and twenty cubits, door against door.

14 He made also posts of threescore cubits, even unto the post of ¹the court round about the gate.

15 And from the face of the gate of the entrance unto the face of the porch of the inner-gate were fifty cubits.

16 And there were ²narrow windows to ³the little chambers, and to their posts within the gate round about, and likewise to the ⁴arches; and windows were round about ⁵inward; and upon each post were ⁶palm-trees.

17 Then brought he me into ⁷the outward court, and, lo, ⁸there were chambers, and a pavement made for the court round about: ⁹thirty chambers were upon the pavement.

18 And the pavement by the side of the gates, over against the length of the gates, was the lower pavement.

19 Then he measured the breadth, from the fore-front of the lower gate ¹⁰unto the fore-front of the inner court ¹¹with-out, an hundred cubits eastward and northward.

20 ¹²¶ And ¹³the gate of the outward court ¹⁴that looked toward the north, he measured the length thereof, and the breadth thereof.

21 And ¹⁵the little chambers thereof were three on this side, and three on that side; and the posts thereof, and the ¹⁶arches thereof, were ¹⁷after the measure of the first gate: the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

22 And their windows, and their arches, and their ¹⁸palm-trees, were after the measure of the gate that looketh toward the east; ¹⁹and they went up unto it by seven steps; and the arches thereof were before them.

23 And ²⁰the gate of the inner court was over against the gate toward the north, and toward the east; ²¹and he measured from gate to gate an hundred cubits.

24 ²²¶ After that he brought me toward the south, ²³and behold a gate toward the south: ²⁴and he measured the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to these measures.

25 And there were ²⁵windows in it, and in the arches thereof round about, like those windows; ²⁶the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

teen years after the complete destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. The precise object of the vision is not very obvious. It may be that no model of Solomon's temple remained, and that, therefore, this vision was in some degree intended to supply the deficiency, in the prospect of its re-erection. We have the authority of the New Testament for the assertion, that the temple and temple worship were emblematic of the New Testament Church and the state of things therewith connected. If by the "very high mountain" we are to understand Mount Moriah, on which Solomon built his temple, it must be understood figuratively, for that mountain was not very high. But if viewed as representing the state of the Christian Church, foretold by the prophets that it should be "established on the top of the mountains"—that is, an object sufficiently elevated to command the eye of all nations—then there is in it both beauty and force. Ver. 4-49. It is to be observed that the angel passes by the Court of the Gentiles without measuring it, perhaps signifying that the multitude of the nations flowing into the Church could not be comprised in any measure or number. The importance of the chapter arises from its spiritual application. There is no probability that the Jews, on their restoration—supposing that to precede conversion—will attempt the rebuilding of the temple on the original plan; but 26 And there were ^aseven steps to go up to it, and the arches thereof were before them; and it had ^apalm-trees, one on this side, and another on that side, upon the posts thereof.

27 And there was a gate ^ain the inner court toward the south: ^aand he measured from gate to gate toward the south an hundred cubits.

28 And he brought me to the inner court by the south gate: and he measured the south gate ^aaccording to these measures;

29 And ^athe little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to these measures: ^aand there were windows in it, and in the arches thereof round about: it was fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad.

30 And the arches round about were ^afive and twenty cubits long, and five cubits ^abroad.

31 And the arches thereof were toward the outer court; ^aand palm-trees were upon the posts thereof: and the going up to it had ^aeight steps.

32 ¶ And he brought me ^ainto the inner court toward the east: and he measured the gate according to these measures.

33 And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, were according to these measures; and there were windows therein, and in the arches thereof round about: ^a*it was* fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad.

34 And the arches thereof were toward the outward court; and palm-trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had ^aeight steps.

35 ¶ And he brought me ^ato the north gate, and measured ^ait according to these measures;

36 The ^alittle chambers thereof, the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, and the windows to it round about: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

37 And ^athe posts thereof were toward the outer court; and palm-trees were upon the posts thereof on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had ^aeight steps.

38 And ^athe chambers, and the entries thereof, were by the posts of the gates, ^awhere they washed the burnt-offering.

39 ¶ And in the porch of the gate were two tables on this side, and two ^atables on that side, to slay thereon ^athe burnt-offering, and ^athe sin-offering, and ^athe trespass-offering.

goeth up to the entry of the north gate, were two tables; and on the other side, which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables.

41 Four tables were on this side, and four tables on that side, by the side of the gate; eight tables, whereupon they slew their sacrifices.

42 And the four tables were of hewn stone for the burnt-offering, of a cubit and an half long, and a cubit and an half broad, and one cubit high: whereupon also they laid the instruments wherewith they slew the burnt-offering and the sacrifice.

43 And within were ^ahooks, an hand broad, fastened round about: and ^aupon the tables was the flesh of the offering.

44 ¶ And without ^athe inner gate were the ^achambers of the singers in the inner court, which was at the side of the north gate; and their prospect was toward the south; one at the side of the east gate having the prospect toward the north.

45 And he said unto me, This chamber, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests, ^athe keepers of the ^acharge of the house.

46 And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north is for the priests, ^athe keepers of the charge of the altar: these ^aare the sons of Zadok, among the sons of Levi, ^awhich come near to the LORD to minister unto him.

47 So he measured the court, ^aan hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, four-square; and the altar that was before the house.

48 ¶ And he brought me to the ^aporch of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side.

49 The length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits; and he brought me by ^athe steps whereby they went up to it: and there were ^apillars by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

CHAPTER XLI.

The measures, parts, chambers, and ornaments of the temple.

AFTERWARD ^ahe brought me ^ato the temple, and measured the posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the tabernacle.

2 And the breadth of the ^adoor was ten cubits; and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side: and he measured ^athe length thereof, forty cubits, and the breadth, twenty cubits.

3 Then went he inward, and measured when once their eyes shall have been opened to understand the Scriptures, of course no such idea will ever arise in their minds. They will then look to something purer, higher, and holier. They will discover that the reign of sacrifice has long since terminated, and that their rejected Lord, by one offering, has perfected for ever all that come to God by him.

Chap. XLI. 1-26. The only thing particularly noticeable, in relation to the New Testament, is the expres-the post of the door two cubits, and the door six cubits, and the breadth of the door seven cubits.

4 So he measured the length thereof, twenty cubits, and the breadth, twenty cubits, before the temple: and he said unto me, ⁶This is the most holy place.

5 After he measured the wall of the house six cubits; and the breadth of every side-chamber four cubits, round about the house on every side.

6 And the side-chambers were three, ²one over another, and ³thirty in order; and they entered into the wall which was of the house for the side-chambers round about, that they might have hold, but they had not hold in the wall of the house.

7 And ⁵there was an enlarging and a winding about still upward to the side-chambers; for the winding about of the house went still upward round about the house: therefore the breadth of the house was still upward, and so increased from the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst.

8 I saw also the height of the house round about: the foundations of the side-chambers were ^aa full reed of six great cubits.

9 The thickness of the wall, which was for the side-chamber without, ¹was five cubits; and ^{that} ²which was left was the place of the side-chambers that were within.

10 And between the chambers was the wideness of twenty cubits round about the house on every side.

11 And the doors of the side-chambers were toward the place that was left, one door toward the north, and another door toward the south: and the breadth of the place that was left was five cubits round about.

12 Now the building that was before ^{the} separate place, at the end toward the west, was seventy cubits broad; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about, and the length thereof ninety cubits.

13 So he measured the house, an hundred cubits long; and the separate place, and the building, with the walls thereof, an hundred cubits long;

14 Also the breadth of the face of the house, and of the separate place toward the east, an hundred cubits.

15 And he measured the length of the building over against the separate place which was behind it, and the galleries thereof on the one side, and on the other side, an hundred cubits, with ^{the} inner temple, and the porches of the court;

22 The ²altar of wood was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits; and the corners thereof, and the length thereof, and the walls thereof, were of wood: and he said unto me, ³This is the table that is before the LORD.

23 And ⁴the temple and the sanctuary had two doors.

24 And the doors had two leaves apiece, two turning leaves; two leaves for the one door, and two leaves for the other door.

25 And there were made on them, on the doors of the temple, ²cherubims and palm-trees, like as were made upon the walls; and there were thick planks upon the face of the porch without.

26 And there were ⁷narrow windows and palm-trees on the one side and on the other side, on the sides of the porch, and upon the side-chambers of the house, and thick planks.

CHAPTER XLII.

1 The priests' chambers: 15 the use thereof. 16 The outward court measured.

THEN ^ahe brought me forth into ^bthe outer court, the way toward the north; and he brought me into the ^cchamber that was over against the separate place, and which was before the building toward the north.

2 Before the length of an hundred cubits was the north door, and the breadth was fifty cubits.

3 Over against ^dthe twenty cubits which were for the inner court, and over against ^ethe pavement which was for the outer court, was ^fgallery against gallery in three stories.

sion in ver. 22—"This is the table that is before the Lord." The words "altar" and "table" are used promiscuously. In Heb. xiii. 10, by altar the apostle clearly means table. It has not unnaturally been supposed that, by this remarkable expression, an intimation has been given that, under the New Testament dispensation, the table would be substituted for the altar in that ordinance by which we are admitted to the nearest communion with our God, figuratively feasting in his house, and sharing his paternal favour.

Chap. XLII. 1-20. The magnitude of the temple, as

4 And before the chambers was a walk of ten cubits breadth inward, ^aa way of one cubit; and their doors toward the north.

5 Now the upper chambers were shorter: for the galleries ¹were higher than these, ²than the lower, and than the middlemost of the building.

6 For they were in ^bthree stories, but had not pillars as the pillars of the courts: therefore the building was straitened more than the lowest and the middlemost from the ground.

7 And the wall that was without over against the chambers, toward the outer court on the fore-part of the chambers, the length thereof was fifty cubits.

8 For the length of the chambers that were in the outer court was fifty cubits: and, lo, before the temple were an hundred cubits.

9 And ³from under these chambers was the entry on the east side, as ⁴one goeth into them from the outer court.

10 The chambers were in the thickness of the wall of the court toward the east, ¹over against the separate place, and over against the building.

11 And ^athe way before them was like the appearance of the chambers which were toward the north, as long as they, and as broad as they; and all their goings out were both according to their fashions, and according to their doors.

12 And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the south ¹was a door in the head of the way, even the way directly before the wall toward the east, as one entereth into them.

13 ¶ Then said he unto me, The north chambers and the south chambers, which are before the separate place, ^mthey be holy chambers, where the priests that ⁿapproach unto the LORD shall eat the most holy things: there shall they lay ^othe most holy things, and the meat-offering, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering; for the place is holy.

14 When the priests enter therein, then shall ^pthey not go out of the holy place into the outer court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy; ^qand shall put on other garments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people.

15 ¶ Now, when he had made an end of measuring the inner-house, he brought me forth toward the gate whose prospect is toward the east, and measured it round about.

CHAPTER XLIII.

1 The glory of God returneth into the temple. 7 God's promise to dwell there if the people put away their sins. 18 Of the altar, &c.

AFTERWARD he brought me to the gate, even ^athe gate that looketh toward the east:

2 And, behold, ^bthe glory of the God of Israel ^ccame from the way of the east; and his voice was like a noise of many waters; and ^dthe earth shined with his glory.

3 And it was according to the appearance of the vision which I saw, even according to the vision that I saw when I came ¹to destroy the city: and the visions were like the vision that I saw by ^ethe river Chebar; and I fell upon my face.

4 And the glory of the LORD ^fcame into the house, by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the east.

5 So ^hthe spirit took me up, ⁱand brought me into the inner court; and, behold, the glory of the LORD filled the house.

6 And ^kI heard him speaking unto me out of the house; and ^lthe man stood by me.

7 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, ^mthe place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, ⁿwhere I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever, and my holy name, shall the house of Israel ^ono more defile, neither they, nor their kings, by their whoredom, nor by the carcases of their kings in their high places.

8 In their setting of their threshold by my thresholds, and their post by my posts, ²and the wall between me and them, they have even defiled my holy name by their abominations that they have committed: wherefore I have consumed them in mine anger.

delineated by Ezekiel, is enormous; with its outbuildings, it extended to about an English mile on each side, or four miles round, which is far greater than the temple of Solomon, or that reared after the Captivity. From this it is clear, therefore, that the vision cannot be explained of any literal temple. It must have a figurative import, and can only have its full realisation in the New Testament dispensation. We are here distinctly taught that a difference ought to be put between common and sacred things, and that a wall of separation excludes impenitent men from the blessings of the Gospel in this world, as well as in that which is to come.

Chap. XLIII. 1-27. The personal presence of the Lord Jesus at the second temple, notwithstanding its diminished splendour, rendered it more glorious than that built by Solomon. The prophet beheld the glory of the Lord "coming from the East." Christ is the Sun of righteousness; and, as the sun, he rises in the East, and thence his light has been communicated to the Western world. The glory of the Lord, manifested in 9 Now ¹let them put away their whoredom, and ²the carcasses of their kings, far from me, ³and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever.

10 ¶ Thou son of man, ¹shew the house to the house of Israel, ²that they may be ashamed of their iniquities; and let them measure the ³pattern.

11 And if they be ashamed of all that they have done, ¹shew them the form of the house, and the fashion thereof, and the goings-out thereof, and the comings-in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the laws thereof: and write ²it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, ³and do them.

12 This is the law of the house; ¹Upon the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house.

13 ¶ And these are the measures of the altar after the cubits: ¹The cubit is a cubit and an hand-breadth; even the ²bottom shall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit, and the border thereof by the ³edge thereof round about shall be a span; and this shall be the higher place of the altar.

14 And from the bottom upon the ground even to the lower settle shall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; and from the lesser settle even to the greater settle shall be four cubits, and the breadth one cubit.

15 So ¹the altar shall be four cubits; and from ²the altar and upward shall be ³four horns.

16 And the altar shall be ¹twelve cubits long, twelve broad, ²square in the four squares thereof.

17 And the settle shall be fourteen cubits long, and fourteen broad in the four squares thereof; ¹and the border about it shall be half a cubit; and the bottom thereof shall be a cubit about; ²and his stairs shall ³look toward the east.

18 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, thus saith the Lord God, These are the ordinances of the altar in the day when they shall make it, ¹to offer burnt-offerings thereon, and to sprinkle blood thereon.

19 And thou shalt give to ¹the priests the Levites that be of the seed of Zadok, ²which approach unto me, to minister unto me, saith the Lord God, ³a young bullock for a sin-offering.

CHAPTER XLIV.

1 The east gate assigned only to the prince. 9 Idolaters incapable of the priest's office. 17 Ordinances for the priests.

THEN he brought me back the way of the gate ¹of the outward sanctuary which ²looketh toward the east, and it ³was shut.

2 Then said the LORD unto me, This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; ¹because the LORD, the God of Israel, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut.

3 ¹It is ²for the prince; ³the prince, he shall sit in it ⁴to eat bread before the LORD; ⁵he shall enter by the way of the porch of ⁶that gate, and shall go out by the way of the same.

4 ¶ Then brought he me ¹the way of the north gate before the house: and I looked, and, behold, ²the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD; ³and I fell upon my face.

5 And the LORD said unto me, Son of his Church, is her ornament and felicity. It is only through the Lord Jesus dwelling in our nature that we are privileged to commune with God the Father, and to hear his voice of love and pity. A sense of his goodness melts the heart. The penitent pardoned hates both himself and his sins; and never does he cease to do so till he forget the condition to which sin had brought him, and the great salvation which sovereign grace had imparted. No performance of the creature can be accepted of the Lord until the soul be renewed, forgiven, and adopted. The spirit of devotion is a spirit of holy fear, as well as of holy love. The distance between us and our heavenly Father is so great as to be inconceivable; but we have in heaven a merciful High Priest, whose sacrifice met all our necessities, and with whom the Father of mercies is ever well pleased.

Chap. XLIV. 1-31. Solomon placed his own seat at the entrance into the inner court before the altar, and here the prince, in after times, appears to have placed himself when he came to worship in the temple. Near to this the High Priest was seated, as may be gathered from 1 Sam. 1. 9, and from that spot the High Priest pronounced the blessing after the conclusion of the man, ¹mark well, and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears all that I say unto thee concerning all the ordinances of the house of the LORD, and all the laws thereof; and mark well the entering in of the house, with every going forth of the sanctuary.

8 And ⁷ye have not kept the charge of mine holy things; but ye have set keepers of my ⁸charge in my sanctuary for yourselves.

9 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, ⁹No stranger, uncircumcised in heart, nor uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my sanctuary, of any stranger that is among the children of Israel.

10 And ¹⁰the Levites that are gone away far from me, when Israel went astray, which went astray away from me after their idols; they shall even ¹¹bear their iniquity.

11 Yet they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, ¹²having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering to the house: they shall slay the burnt-offering and the sacrifice for the people, ¹³and they shall stand before them to minister unto them.

12 Because ¹⁴they ministered unto them before their idols, and ¹⁵caused the house of Israel to fall into iniquity; ¹⁶therefore have I lifted up mine hand against them, saith the Lord God, ¹⁷and they shall bear their iniquity.

13 And ¹⁸they shall not come near unto me, to do the office of a priest unto me, nor to come near to any of my holy things, in the most holy place; but they shall ¹⁹bear their shame, and their abominations which they have committed:

14 But I will make them ²⁰keepers of the charge of the house, for all the service thereof, and for all that shall be done therein.

15 ¶ But the priests the Levites, ²¹the sons of Zadok, that kept the charge of my sanctuary when the children of Israel went astray from me, they shall come near to me to minister unto me, and ²²they shall stand before me to offer unto 22 Neither shall they take for their wives a widow, nor her that is ^vput away; but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow ^wthat had a priest before.

23 And they shall ^xteach my people the difference between the holy and profane, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean.

24 And ^yin controversy they shall stand in judgment; and they shall judge it according to my judgments: and they shall keep my laws and my statutes ^zin all mine assemblies; ^aand they shall hallow my sabbaths.

25 And they shall ^bcome at no dead person to defile themselves: but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, for brother, or for sister that hath had no husband, they may defile themselves.

26 And ^cafter he is cleansed, they shall reckon unto him seven days.

27 And in the day that he goeth into the sanctuary, unto the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, he shall offer his sin-offering, saith the Lord God.

28 And it shall be unto them for an inheritance; ^dI am their inheritance: and ye shall give them no possession in Israel; ^eI am their possession.

29 They shall ^feat the meat-offering, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-service. Ver. 10-14 clearly foreshadow a complete reformation in the Church of Christ, and the wide-spread prevalence of true piety among the converted Jews. The materials of which the garments of the priesthood were made were all of fine linen, contrived for glory and beauty. The reason which has been assigned is, that wool is more apt than linen to contract dirt and breed insects. It was an ancient maxim, that whatever was taken from a dead body was impure, and should not be permitted to enter the temple. It is remarkable, that the Egyptian priests always wore linen on their bodies and shoes of matings, or rushes, on their feet. With respect to ver. 20, the priests of Isis shaved their heads close to the skin, and the priests of Buddho do so offering; and every ^sdedicated thing in Israel shall be theirs.

30 And the ^sfirst of all the first-fruits of all things, and every oblation of all, of every sort of your oblations, shall be the priest's: ye shall also give unto the priest the first of your dough, ^cthat he may cause the blessing to rest in thine house.

31 The priests shall not eat of any thing that is dead of itself, or torn, whether it be fowl or beast.

CHAPTER XLV.

1 The portion of land for the sanctuary, 6 for the city, 7 and for the prince, &c.

MOREOVER, when ye ¹shall ^adivide by lot the land for inheritance, ^bye shall offer an oblation unto the LORD, ²an holy portion of the land: the length shall be the length of five and twenty thousand reeds, and the breadth shall be ten thousand. This shall be holy in all the borders thereof round about.

2 Of this there shall be for the sanctuary ^cfive hundred in length, with five hundred in breadth, square round about; and fifty cubits round about for the ^ssuburbs thereof.

3 And of this measure shalt thou measure the length of five and twenty thousand, and the breadth of ten thousand: ^dand in it shall be the sanctuary and the most holy place.

4 The ^aholy portion of the land shall be for the priests, the ministers of the sanctuary, ^bwhich shall come near to minister unto the LORD; and it shall be a place for their houses, and an holy place for the sanctuary.

5 And ^athe five and twenty thousand of length, and the ten thousand of breadth, shall also the Levites, the ministers of the house, have for themselves, ^bfor a possession for twenty chambers.

6 ¶ And ye shall appoint the possession of ^cthe city five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long, over against the oblation of the holy portion: it shall be for the whole house of Israel.

7 ¶ And a portion shall be ^afor the prince on the one side and on the other side of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the possession of the city, before the oblation of the holy portion, and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward, and from the east side eastward; and the length shall be over against one of the portions, from the west border unto the east border.

8 In the land shall be his possession in Israel: ^aand my princes shall no more oppress my people; and the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes.

on the entrance of the people. The Levites were very numerous; in the time of David they amounted to thirty-eight thousand men, and, consequently, as large a space of ground was allotted to them as belonged to the temple and the whole priestly order. Good news is presented by ver. 8 for the people. Hitherto they had generally

CHAPTER XLVI.

Ordinances for the princes and the people.

THUS saith the Lord God, The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east ^a shall be shut the ^b six working days; but ^c on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new-moon it shall be opened.

2 And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate, and the priests shall prepare his burnt-offering, and his peace-offerings, and he shall worship at the threshold of the gate: then he shall go forth; ^d but the gate shall not be shut until the evening.

3 Likewise ^e the people of the land shall worship at the door of this gate before the LORD, in the sabbaths, and in the new-moons.

4 And ^f the burnt-offering that the prince shall offer unto the LORD in the sabbath-day shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish.

5 And ^g the meat-offering shall be an ephah for a ram, and the meat-offering for the lambs ^h as he shall be able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

6 And in the day of the new-moon it shall be a young bullock without blemish, and six lambs, and a ram: they shall be without blemish.

7 And he shall prepare a meat-offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram; and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

8 And when the prince shall enter, ⁱ he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof.

9 ¶ But when the people of the land shall ^j come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, ^k he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that 19 ¶ After he brought me through ^{ag} the entry, which ^{ah} was at the side of the gate, into the holy chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north: and, behold, there ^{ai} was a place on the two sides westward.

20 Then said he unto me, This ^{aj} is the place where the priests shall ^{ak} boil the trespass-offering and the sin-offering, where they shall ^{al} bake the meat-offering; that they bear ^{am} them not out into the outer court, ^{an} to sanctify the people.

fared but ill. The princes did more to oppress than to protect them. They had been ground to the dust by exorbitant taxes, corrupted by a profligate court, and exposed from time to time to the incursions of adversaries through the misconduct of their own king. But there would be an end to these things by the establishment of the reign of justice, truth, and love.

Chap. XLVI. 1-24. It is noticeable that provision is made only for the morning offering, that of the evening is omitted; which makes another important difference between this and the old laws, Ex. xxix. 38-42. There were uncovered apartments for the purpose of dressing those parts of the peace-offerings which were made for the temple by individuals. On these their families and 21 Then he brought me forth into the outer court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and, behold, ⁴in every corner of the court there was a court.

22 In the four corners of the court there were courts ⁵joined of forty cubits long, and thirty broad: these four ⁶corners were of one measure.

23 And there was a row of building round about in them, round about them four, and it was made with boiling-places under the rows round about.

24 Then said he unto me, These are the places of them that boil, ⁷where the ministers of the house shall boil the sacrifice of the people.

13 The borders of the land, &c.

AFTERWARD he brought me again unto ^athe door of the house; and, behold, ^bwaters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the fore-front of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under, from the right side of the house, at the south side of the altar.

2 Then brought he me out of the way of the gate ^cnorthward, and led me about the way without unto the outer gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

3 And when ^dthe man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters; ^ethe waters ¹were to the ancles.

4 Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; ^fthe waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins.

5 Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, ²waters ²to swim in, a river that could not be passed over.

6 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, ³hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river.

their friends feasted, while portions were sent to the poor, the widow, and the orphan; and thus the spirit of devotion was the means of preserving the spirit of compassion and benevolence in the land.

Chap. XLVII. 1-7. The language here is figurative. There are no such waters in the temple. It is true that the water which was supplied to the Brassen Sea might have been brought by pipes to the place, but a fountain producing abundance of water was not there, and could not be there, on the top of such a hill. It follows that those waters are to be understood spiritually, or typicallly, as indeed, also, the whole complexion of the passage shews. If these waters be viewed figuratively, they may be considered as beautifully representing the gradual spread of the Gospel. In Judah, waters and trees were common emblems of prosperity and happiness. These waters were, doubtless, an emblem of the glorious Gospel, with the Holy Ghost rendering it effectual, and diffusing spiritual blessings throughout the world. They strongly indicate the increase of spiritual power with advancing time: small at first, they expand at length into a great river that could not be passed over! Glorious times will these be to live in! But the saints may share the felicity by continually petitioning for their rapid advent. Everything appertaining to the kingdom of God has been progressive and expansive. There is first the Patriarchal Ages, then the Legal Dispensation established by Moses, then the Ministry of John the Baptist, then the Saviour's own Ministry, abolishing the Old and establishing the New Dispensation. The New Dispensation bears a similar character. At first we have a few poor men, afterwards a multitude, then the Gentiles of Asia and Greece, then the Continent and Isles of Europe, and now Africa, Asia, America, and the Isles of the South Seas—in a word, the principal portion of the great globe. Ver. 8-11. These waters ran into the sea, which is supposed to mean the Dead Sea, or Lake of Sodom, east of Jerusalem. In this, it is affirmed, no living creature is found; at any rate it does not, like other seas, supply fish; so that the inference is, its waters are in some degree pestilential. But the prophet is informed that, when the waters of the sanctuary should enter the sea, it would then be healed, or made wholesome. This remarkable language, viewed spiritually, illustrates the blessed influence of the Gospel wherever it comes. Ver. 12-23. The Apostle John has almost transcribed this part of the vision, and applied it to the salvation of the Gospel, as perfected in the felicity of the heavenly world. If the subject is to be viewed spiritually, and believers to be understood by these trees, the emblem shews that they are rendered flourishing and fruitful by the Word and Spirit; they become useful, and persevere in their fruitfulness to the end of their lives. Such, doubtless, ought to be the case with all the pilgrims of Zion—their profession, doctrine, example, and their whole lives should uniformly tend to instruct the ignorant, reform the vicious, and to build up the young believer.

Chap. XLVIII. 1-35. The closing expression of this chapter. "The Lord is there," is very remarkable. If the allusion, as is generally thought, be to the Shekinah, or symbol of the Divine presence, the passage cannot apply to the second temple, in the same sense as it did to the first. Ezekiel tells us that the Divine presence should be in the city of which he speaks, and that the manifestation should be so powerful as to designate the city itself. The square may be viewed as the emblem of strength and solidity. The Eastern nations were so prone to figure, that even their axioms and oracles of wisdom were wrapped up in emblematical phraseology:

and the west side four thousand and five hundred.

17 And the suburbs of the city shall be toward the north two hundred and fifty, and toward the south two hundred and fifty, and toward the east two hundred and fifty, and toward the west two hundred and fifty.

18 And the residue in length, over against the oblation of the holy portion, shall be ten thousand eastward, and ten thousand westward; and it shall be over against the oblation of the holy portion; and the increase thereof shall be for food unto them ^athat serve the city.

19 And they that serve the city ^ashall serve it out of all the tribes of Israel.

20 All the oblation shall be five and twenty thousand by five and twenty thousand: ye shall offer the holy oblation ^afour-square, with the possession of the city.

21 ¶ And ^athe residue shall be for the prince, on the one side and on the other of the holy oblation, and of the possession of the city, over against the five and twenty thousand of the oblation toward the east border, ^band westward over against the five and twenty thousand toward the west border, over against the portions for the prince; and it shall be the holy oblation: and the sanctuary of the house shall be in the midst thereof.

and it has pleased the Most High to employ the same style of expression for the communication of his wonders of love and mercy. It behoves all them who name the name of Christ, to lay themselves out to be of use in the holy city, seeing that they will thereby promote their own welfare, as well as the glory of their Divine Lord. Amid all that has been humbling and distressing throughout this awful prophecy, we have from time to time rays of light to cheer the desert gloom. Thus it is at the close, where we are taught to consider the regularity, stability, and honour of our New Testament Jerusalem, which began to be reared in apostolic times, and which will be carried to perfection amid the light and glory of the Millennium.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL.

Daniel was carried into captivity when a youth, in the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim, king of Judah. As a prophet, he was contemporary with Ezekiel, although the dispensation assigned to each was very different. The Book of Daniel consists of two parts—six chapters of history, and six of prophecy. For him was reserved the honour, above any of his contemporaries or predecessors, of setting forth great matters touching the Prophetic Empires, and the Advent of the Saviour, together with the establishment and progress of his kingdom. He was peculiarly distinguished both for intelligence and devotion, as well as for a singularly sweet and lovely spirit. As the favourite of Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius, and Cyrus, he enjoyed a measure of national importance and political power such as fell to the lot of no other prophet. Daniel was the peer of the sovereigns—Ezekiel that of the captives.

CHAPTER I.

1 Jehoiakim's captivity. 8 Daniel, Hananiah, Michael, and Azariah, refusing the king's meat, thrive upon pulse and water.

IN the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it.

2 And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God, which he carried into the land of Shinar, to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure-house of his god.

3 ¶ And the king spake unto Ashpenaz, the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes;

4 Children in whom was no blemish, but well-favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

5 And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat, and of the wine which he drank: so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king.

6 Now among these were, of the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Michael, and Azariah;

7 Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names: for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar; and to Hananiah, of Shadrach; and to Michael, of Meshach; and to Azariah, of Abed-nego.

8 ¶ But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

9 Now God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs.

10 And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why should he see your faces worse liking than the children which are of your sort? then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king.

11 Then said Daniel to Melzar, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Michael, and Azariah, 12 Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us pulse to eat, and water to drink.

13 Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat; and as thou seest, deal with thy servants.

14 So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days.

15 And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat.

16 Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink, and gave them pulse.

17 ¶ As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams.

18 Now, at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.

19 And the king communed with them; and among them all was found none like Chap. I. 1-8. Daniel is explicit as to dates. At this time Jehoiakim became tributary to the king of Babylon, and, consequently, the seventy years of the Captivity began. The monarchs of the East have, in every age, been accustomed to employ eunuchs in their palaces, and about their own persons; and they have frequently exalted them to the highest dignities. In all barbarous countries stateliness has been a quality much prized. They seem erroneously to have thought that great stature implied great intelligence and superior parts, which was, and is, frequently the reverse of the fact. In Ethiopia civil officers were distributed according to the bulk and beauty of the men; and not only there, but in other Eastern nations. The youths who attain high offices in the Turkish empire must possess goodly features, as well as a handsome person. Some curious facts of this kind are recorded by Eastern travellers, who testify to having seen young men of singular comeliness, and elegantly dressed, conduct themselves with peculiar modesty and propriety in the presence of their masters. The kings of Persia, who succeeded the kings of Babylon, were accustomed to order the food of the royal table to be served up to the courtiers. Daniel seems to have been afraid lest defilement might arise from the food being prohibited

Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: ^atherefore stood they before the king.

20 And ^bin all matters of ^cwisdom and understanding, that the king enquired of them, he found them ^cten times better than all ^dthe magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm.

21 And ^eDaniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus.

CHAPTER II.

1 Nebuchadnezzar forgetteth his dream, 14 which is revealed to Daniel. 31 The dream, 36 and interpretation.

AND ^ain the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, ^bNebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith his spirit was troubled, ^cand his sleep brake from him.

2 Then the king ^dcommanded to call the magicians and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to shew the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king.

3 And the king said unto them, ^e"I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream.

4 Then spake the Chaldeans to the king ^fin Syriack, ^g"O king, live for ever: ^htell thy servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation.

5 The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The thing is gone from me: if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ⁱye shall be ^jcut in pieces, and your houses shall be ^kmade a dunghill:

6 But if ye shew the dream, and the interpretation thereof, ^lye shall receive of me gifts and ^mrewards, and great honour: therefore shew me the dream, and the interpretation thereof.

7 They answered again, and said, ⁿ"Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation of it.

8 The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would ^ogain the time, because ye see the thing is gone from me.

9 But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, ^pthere is but one decree for you; ^qfor ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me, till ^rthe time be changed: therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can shew me the interpretation thereof.

10 ¶ The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can shew the king's matter: therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean.

11 And it is a rare thing that the king requireth; ^aand there is none other that can shew it before the king, except the gods, ^bwhose dwelling is not with flesh.

12 For ^c"this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

13 And ^dthe decree went forth that the wise men should be slain; ^eand they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain.

14 ¶ Then Daniel ^fanswered with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the ^gcaptain of the king's guard, which was gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon:

15 He answered and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why ^his the decree so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel.

16 Then Daniel went in, and desired of the king that he would give him time, and that he would shew the king the interpretation.

17 Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to ⁱHananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions:

18 That they would desire mercies ^jof the God of heaven concerning this secret; that ^kDaniel and his fellows should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon.

19 ¶ Then ^lwas the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

20 Daniel answered and said, Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: ^mfor wisdom and might are his:

21 And ⁿhe changeth the times and the seasons: ^ohe removeth kings, and setteth up kings: ^phe giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding:

22 He ^qrevealeth the deep and secret things: ^rhe knoweth what is in the darkness, ^sand the light dwelleth with him.

23 I ^tthank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, who hast given me wisdom and might, ^uand hast made known unto me now what we desired of by the law of Moses, or else from its being offered to idols, or subjected to some idolatrous ceremony in their name. Ver. 9-21. The prince of the eunuchs displayed great humanity and consideration towards the young men, and fearing that less sumptuous fare than that provided by royal authority might affect their health, he was backward to concede the favour they asked. They succeeded, however, to overcome his scruples, confident that the result would be satisfactory. There is every reason to believe that there was a Divine hand in the whole matter, and that God had a wonderful purpose to accomplish by the arrangement. The most notable thing in the chapter is the fact that Daniel lived to the first year of King Cyrus, and consequently witnessed the full accomplishment of Jeremiah's prophecy concerning the seventy years.

Chap. II. 1-80. The Chaldeans were the most ancient philosophers in the world of whom we have any account. They were much addicted to the study of the heavenly bodies, from which they professed to prognosticate, or to reveal, the secrets of futurity. In those times every nation had its wise men, so-called, who practised upon them profitable impositions. A case occurred now, however, which was calculated to put their skill to the test, and which, but for Daniel, would have brought upon them swift destruction. Nothing could be more outrageous than the demand of the king, while it was eminently fitted to set at naught all pretenders to a wisdom superior to that of mortals. The passage strikingly illustrates the character of ancient despotisms. Nothing can exceed the ferocious arrogance and arbitrary violence of the king, who was governed by no consideration of either law or justice; he knew no other rule of action than whim, pride, or passion, and he made nothing of the destruction of human life. The business, doubt-thee: for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.

24 ¶ Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him, ¹Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will shew unto the king the interpretation.

25 Then Arioch ¹brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said thus unto him, ²I have found a man of the ³captives of Judah that will make known unto the king the interpretation.

26 The king answered and said to ⁴Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, ⁵Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have seen, and the interpretation thereof?

27 Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded ⁶cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, shew unto the king;

28 But there is ⁷a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and ⁸maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be ⁹in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these;

29 (As for thee, O king, thy thoughts ¹⁰came into thy mind upon thy bed what should come to pass hereafter; and he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass:

30 But as for me, ¹¹this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, but for ¹²their sakes that shall make known the interpretation to the king, ¹³and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.)

31 ¶ Thou, O king, ¹⁴sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee, ¹⁵and the form thereof was terrible.

32 This image's ¹⁶head was of fine gold, his ¹⁷breast and his arms of silver, his ¹⁸belly and his ¹⁹thighs of brass, of the summer thrashing-floors; and the wind carried them away, that ¹no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image ²became a great mountain, ³and filled the whole earth.

36 ¶ This is the dream; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king.

37 Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for ⁴the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

38 And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the heaven, hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. ⁵Thou art this head of gold.

39 And after thee shall arise ⁶another kingdom inferior to thee, and ⁷another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

40 And ⁸the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things; and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise.

41 And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potter's clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay.

42 And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay; so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly ⁹broken.

43 And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: but they shall not cleave ¹⁰one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay.

44 And in ¹¹the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, ¹²which shall never be destroyed: and the ¹³kingdom shall not be left to other people, ¹⁴but it shall ¹⁵break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

45 Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain ¹⁶without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath ¹⁷made known to the king what shall come to pass ¹⁸hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure.

46 ¶ Then the king Nebuchadnezzar ¹⁹fell less, produced a great sensation throughout the court, the city, and the country, while it revealed the wondrous fact, that they had among them a man who could dive into the secrets of futurity, and even read the dreams of kings! There were not wanting then, as now, in benighted countries, multitudes who professed to interpret dreams; and, as stretching into the future, it was not easy to convict them of deception. The demand, however, that they should first tell the dream itself, and then give the interpretation, brought things to an issue. He whose sagacity, or celestial aid, enabled him to tell the dream, was entitled to credit for his interpretation of it. The deportment of Daniel was alike remarkable for simplicity, modesty, and dignity. He was forward to proclaim the glory and majesty of his God, and the testimony he bears is worthy of the occasion. The thanks tendered for the discovery of the secret is a deeply affecting expression of piety. The prophet's humanity reflects lustre on his piety. He hastened to prevent the destruction of the wise men. Ver. 31-49. The foundation of all Daniel's prophecies is laid in the sublime vision of the image composed of various metals. The Great Monarchies were clearly set forth, and the prophecy was fulfilled in the succession of the Persians, the Greeks, and the Romans, in turn, to the rule of the world. The Babylonian Monarchy commenced in the year of the world 1771, and ended 3466, before Christ 638, having thus lasted throughout the long period of nearly 1700 years. The stone cut out without hands, that broke the image to pieces, and became a great mountain filling the earth, was none other than upon his face, and worshipped Daniel, and commanded that they should offer an oblation ^aand sweet odours unto him.

47 The king answered unto Daniel, and said, Of a truth it is, that your God is ^aa God of gods, and ^aa Lord of kings, and ^aa revealer of secrets, seeing thou couldst reveal this secret.

48 Then the king made Daniel a great man, and gave him many great gifts, and made him ^aruler over the whole province of Babylon, ^aand chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon.

49 Then Daniel requested of the king, and ^ahe set Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, over the affairs of the province of Babylon: but Daniel ^asat in the gate of the king.

CHAPTER III.

1 Nebuchadnezzar dedicateth a golden image in Dura. 8 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego are accused for not worshipping the image. 24 Their miraculous deliverance.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.

2 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

3 Then ^athe princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up; and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

4 Then an herald cried ^aaloud, To you ^ait is commanded, ^bO people, nations, and languages,

5 That at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, ^adulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up:

6 And whoso ^afalleth not down and worshippeth, shall ^athe same hour be cast into the midst of ^aa burning fiery furnace.

7 Therefore at that time, ^awhen all the the kingdom of God, the New Testament Church. This kingdom is described by two figures—first as a stone, and secondly as a mountain. The idea beautifully indicates progress, and the consummation comprises a universal empire. The prophet frankly expounds his own prophecy, which must deeply have added to the interest attendant on its publication to the empire at large. The discovery of the dream had opened the ear of the monarch, and prepared him to receive whatever else might proceed from the lips of the prophet.

Chap. III. 1-18. The Babylonians were addicted to the erection of stupendous images. One historian states, that Xerxes took a statue of gold forty feet high out of the temple of Belus, in Babylon, when he demolished it. The image was probably placed upon a pedestal, and people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of musick, all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

8 ¶ Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans came near, ^aand accused the Jews.

9 They spake, and said to the king Nebuchadnezzar, ^bO king, live for ever.

10 Thou, O king, ^ahast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of ^athe cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, shall fall down and worship the golden image:

11 And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

12 There are ^acertain Jews, whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego: these men, O king, have ^anot regarded thee; they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

13 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar, ^ain his rage and fury, commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. ^aThen they brought these men before the king.

14 Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said unto them, Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, do not ye serve ^amy gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up?

15 Now, if ye be ready, that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made, ^awell: but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; ^aand who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?

16 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, ^awe are not careful to answer thee in this matter.

17 If it be so, ^aour God, whom we serve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace; and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king.

18 But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, both may have been measured. The plain of Dura is believed to have been near the Tigris, in Mesopotamia, where a town called Dura, or Doura, still exists. Ver. 6 presents the first mention we have of hours in the Sacred Scriptures, which was probably an invention of the Chaldeans or the Babylonians. The father of Greek historians tells us, that his countrymen received the twelve parts of the day from Babylon. The scene of the furnace was inconceivably terrible, and the preservation of the men's lives was an event of a nature so extraordinary, that it could not fail to produce a thrilling sensation, from the king downward, to all who heard it. Travellers have told us that fire is, or was, a great element in the capital punishments of the East. Cooks who may have offended the king or court were dealt with in their own way—roasted over a slow fire; while nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

19 ¶ Then ¹was Nebuchadnezzar ²full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego: ³therefore ⁴he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace ⁵one seven times more than it was wont to be heated.

20 And he commanded the ¹most mighty men that ²were in his army ³to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, and to cast ⁴them into the burning fiery furnace.

21 Then these men were bound in their ¹coats, their hosen, and their ²hats, and their ³other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

22 Therefore because the king's ¹commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the ²flame of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

23 And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ¹fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

24 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was ¹astoned, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his ²counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king.

25 He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and ¹they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like ²the Son of God.

26 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the ¹mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ²ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come ³hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, came forth of the midst of the fire.

27 And ¹the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, ²upon whose bodies the fire had no power, ³nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire had passed on them.

bakers were thrust into a heated oven! Chardin states that he saw ovens in the royal square of Ispahan for the purpose of terrifying the bakers, and thus preventing them from taking undue advantage of the general distress. Ver. 19-20. The dress of the Babylonians consisted of an outer tunic of linen reaching down to the feet; over this was a robe of woollen; and over all a white short coat, with a turban on the head. The furnace would seem to have been an uncovered building with an enclosure of fire, so that the king, while sitting in his palace, might see it, and enjoy the sufferings of the victims of his cruelty. It is not to be supposed that the king had any idea of the Son of God as meaning the Lord Jesus Christ. All he meant, probably, was a supernatural person, "a son of the gods"—an angel—some one sent by Daniel's God. It may, nevertheless, have been the Lord Jesus as the Angel of the Covenant, although unknown to the tyrant. The occasion was so supremely great as to authorise, if not to demand, his

CHAPTER IV.

1 Nebuchadnezzar's dream. 19 Daniel interprets it. 28 The story of the event.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king, ¹unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; ²Peace be multiplied unto you.

2 ¹I thought it good to shew the signs and wonders ²that the high God hath wrought toward me.

3 How ¹great are his signs! and how mighty ²are his wonders! ³his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation.

4 ¶ I Nebuchadnezzar ¹was at rest in mine house, and flourishing in my palace:

5 I saw ¹a dream which made me afraid, and the thoughts upon my bed, and the visions of my head, troubled me.

6 Therefore made I a decree ¹to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream.

7 Then came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers: and I told the dream before them; ¹but they did not make known unto me the interpretation thereof.

8 But at the last Daniel came in before me, (whose name was ¹Belteshazzar, according to the name of my god, ²and in whom ³is the spirit of the holy gods,) and before him I told the dream, ⁴saying,

9 O Belteshazzar, ¹master of the magi-glorious presence with his faithful servants. No event like it had previously occurred in the history of the Church, and it was meet that it should be signalled by such a manifestation.

Chap. IV. 1-27. The king, by previous events, seems to have been brought to recognise the one living and true God. He speaks in terms not unworthy even of a son of Abraham. He seems, indeed, to have been under the influence of Inspiration, else he had never spoken of God's kingdom as an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion being from generation to generation. The sovereignties of the world are frequently represented by large trees, in the language of Eastern countries. The figure, as supplying shade, is understood as denoting the protection which they afforded to their subjects. The vision of the king was peculiarly terrible, and such as could not fail to appal him to the uttermost. Much controversy has obtained as to the import of the terms cians, because I know that ¹the spirit of the holy gods ²is in thee, and ³no secret troubleth thee, ⁴tell me the visions of my dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof.

10 Thus were the visions of mine head in my bed: I ¹saw, and behold ²a tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great.

11 The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof ¹reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth:

12 The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all: ¹the beasts of the field had ²shadow under it, and ³the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it.

13 I saw ¹in the visions of my head upon my bed, and, behold, ²a watcher and ³an holy one came down from heaven:

14 He cried ¹aloud, and said thus, ²"Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit: ³let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches:

15 Nevertheless, ¹leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and ²let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth:

16 Let his heart ¹be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let ²seven times pass over him.

17 This matter is ¹by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of ²the holy ones; to the intent ³that the living may know that ⁴the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it ⁵the basest of men.

18 This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar have seen. Now thou, O Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation thereof, ¹forasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation: ²but thou art able; for the spirit of the holy gods is in thee.

19 ¶ Then ¹Daniel (whose name was Belteshazzar) ²was astonished for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake, and said, Belteshazzar, ³let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee. Belteshazzar answered and said, My lord, ⁴the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies.

20 The ¹tree that thou sawest, which grew, and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth:

21 Whose leaves were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation:

22 It is ¹thou, O king, that art grown and become strong: for ²thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth.

23 And whereas the king ¹saw a watcher and an holy one coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew the tree down, and destroy it; yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, ²and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him;

24 This is the interpretation, O king, and this is ¹the decree of the most High, which is come upon my lord the king:

25 That they shall ¹drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will.

26 And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots; thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule.

27 Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and ¹break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by shewing mercy to the poor; if it may be a ²lengthening of thy tranquillity.

28 ¶ All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.

29 At the end of twelve months he walked ¹in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon.

30 The king spake, and said, Is not this ¹great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?

31 While the word was in the king's mouth, there ¹fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee

"watchers," and "holy ones." There seems no reason to doubt that they were simply angels—ministering spirits sent forth to minister to the heirs of salvation. Ver. 23-37. The moment chosen for the king's humiliation was one in which his soul was filled with pride and self-idolatry. Nothing more arrogant could have escaped from his lips, and no voice more terrible have been addressed to his ear. Although the city had existed many ages before, he had surpassed all his predecessors in enlarging, beautifying, and improving it, till it became the wonder of the world for its temples, palaces, and architectural glories. The king's success was employed to feed the fires of his own imperial arrogance, to the utter exclusion of all remembrance of his mortality, and accountability to a Higher Power. How he came to be driven from men, and to herd with the beasts of the field, we have no means of ascertaining; the fact, however, is certain. The monarch was bereft of reason, after which he was utterly neglected by his relatives, and those who, for the time being, exercised authority; and for seven long years he was living in this deplorable condition. The chapter is one peculiarly adapted to it is spoken; ⁴The kingdom is departed from thee:

32 And they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field: they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, ⁵until thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will.

33 The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar; and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.

34 And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and ¹I blessed the most High, and I praised and honoured ²him that liveth for ever, ³whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation:

35 And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: ¹and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and ²none can stay his hand, or say unto him, ³What doest thou?

36 At the same time my reason returned unto me; and, for the glory of my kingdom, mine honour and brightness returned unto me; and my counsellors and my lords sought unto me; and I was established in my kingdom; and excellent majesty was added unto me.

37 Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise, and extol, and honour the King of heaven, ¹all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment: and those that walk in pride he is able to abase.

8 Then came in all the king's wise men: ¹but they could not read the writing, nor make known to the king the interpretation thereof.

9 Then was king Belshazzar greatly troubled, and his ²countenance was changed in him, and his lords were astonished.

10 ¶ Now the queen, by reason of the words of the king and his lords, came into the banquet-house; and the queen spake, and said, ¹O king, live for ever: ²let not thy thoughts trouble thee, nor let thy countenance be changed:

11 There is a man in thy kingdom in whom is the spirit of the holy gods; and in the days of thy ¹father, ²light and understanding, and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him; whom the king Nebuchadnezzar thy ¹father, the king, I say, thy father, made master of the magicians, astrologers, Chaldeans, and soothsayers;

12 Forasmuch as ⁴an excellent spirit, benefit the rulers of mankind. The lesson is beautifully stated by the monarch himself, after his return to reason, and to rule. With what meekness he confesses, that "those who walk in pride, He is able to abase!"

Chap. V. 1-16. Belshazzar was the last king of the Babylonian race—a circumstance which materially contributes to his celebrity. He was grandson of Nebuchadnezzar, and had reigned through a period of seventeen years, during the whole of which he waged an unsuccessful war with Cyrus, and the Medes and Persians. Cyrus had driven his armies before him, till at length he had surrounded Babylon, which he took, and slew Belshazzar. One of the most sublimely awful things on record is the writing of the fingers on the palace wall. Such an event, under such circumstances, was calculated to strike terror into the stoutest heart. The effect produced upon the king was natural. The anguish of the moment was probably such as had never agitated a human bosom.

How impressively is the case depicted by these words, "His countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another!" The queen mentioned was not the queen-consort, but, it is believed, the queen-mother, who had not been present at the impious banquet, but, hearing the tidings of the handwriting, she hastened to give the king the benefit of her counsel. She spoke of Daniel with profound respect, and even reverence; she appears to have remembered the events of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, which were probably overlooked by the impious and besotted Belshazzar. It has, nevertheless, been suggested, that there is another reason which would account for his ignorance. When a king dies, the physicians and astrologers are removed—the one, for not having driven away death; and the other, for not having predicted it! Be this as it may, the king appears to have had no knowledge of Daniel, who, therefore, must have ceased to exercise and knowledge, and understanding, ²interpreting of dreams, and shewing of hard sentences, and ³dissolving of ⁴doubts, were found in the same Daniel, ⁵whom the king named Belshazzar: now let Daniel be called, and he will shew the interpretation.

13 Then was Daniel brought in before the king. And the king spake, and said unto Daniel, Art thou that Daniel, which art of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the king my ⁶father brought out of ⁷Jewry?

14 I have even heard of thee, ⁸that the spirit of the gods ⁹is in thee, and ¹⁰that light, and understanding, and excellent wisdom, is found in thee.

15 And now the wise men, the astrologers, have been brought in before me, that they should read this writing, and make known unto me the interpretation thereof: but they could not shew the interpretation of the thing:

16 And I have heard of thee, that thou canst ¹¹make interpretations, and dissolve doubts: now, if thou canst read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation thereof, ¹²thou shalt be clothed with scarlet, and ¹³have a chain of gold about thy neck, and shalt be the third ruler in the kingdom.

17 ¶ Then Daniel answered and said before the king, ¹⁴Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy ¹⁵rewards to another; yet I will read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation.

18 O thou king, the most high God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour:

19 And for the majesty that he gave him, all people, nations, and languages, trembled and feared before him: whom he would he slew, and whom he would he kept alive, and whom he would he set up, and whom he would he put down.

20 But ¹⁶when his heart was lifted up, and his mind hardened ¹⁷in pride, he was ¹⁸deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him:

21 And ¹⁹he was driven from the sons of men; and ¹his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses: they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; ²till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and ³that he appointeth over it whomsoever he will.

22 And thou his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knewest all this;

23 But hast ⁴lifted up thyself against ⁵the Lord of heaven; and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee, and thou and thy lords, thy wives and thy concubines, have drunk wine in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, ⁶which see not, nor hear, nor know: and the God ⁷in whose hand thy breath is, ⁸and whose ⁹are all thy ways, ¹⁰hast thou not glorified.

24 Then ¹¹was the part of the hand sent from him; and this writing was written.

25 ¶ And this is the writing that was written, MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN.

26 This is the interpretation of the thing: MENE; God ¹²hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it.

27 TEKEL; ¹³Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting.

30 ¶ In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain.

CHAPTER VI.

¶ It pleased ²⁰Darius to set over the kingdom ²¹an hundred and twenty princes, which should be over the whole kingdom; authority in the empire. Ver. 17-31. The deportment of Daniel had lost none of its dignity through age. Never did prophet assume an air more awful than that which characterised the interview. The hour of judgment had arrived, sentence had gone forth, and the courtesies which the prophet had shewn to the king's grandfather were refused to himself. He delivered his truthful, terrible message with the fidelity which became the occasion, apprising the king that his reign, his life, and the Chaldean monarchy, were about to expire together. Belshazzar appears to have been, in all respects, a much inferior man to his grandfather, and every way an object of contempt. In him, impety had reached a climax, and vengeance was now to descend to the uttermost. The explanation of the mysterious writing struck terror into his soul, and into that of all who heard it. It was the knell of the empire! Few expressions of Scripture have been so celebrated, and bid so fair to last for ever, as the figure of the balances. The Mohammedans preserve among the relics in the Mosque of Omar, on Mount Moriah, a pair of large scales, in which they say souls are to be weighed at the judgment to take place in the valley there. An eminent traveller tells us, that, according to custom, the Mogul is literally weighed once a year, on his birthday, in the presence of his chief grandees. The scales were plated with gold, and so was the beam on which they hung by great chains made of the same metal. The king, sitting in one of these scales, was weighed first against silver coin, which was immediately afterwards distributed amongst the poor; he was next weighed against gold; and after that against jewels. These things were contained in silken bags successively placed in the balances. Mr Thomas Roe, who recorded the fact, says, "When I saw him in the balances, I thought of Belshazzar, who was found too light. By his weight, of which his physicians keep an exact account, they presume to guess concerning the present state of his body, of which they speak flatteringly, however they think it may be."

Chap. VI. 1-9. Darius shewed a large amount of administrative capacity; the plan of division and subdivision was the only method of dealing with an empire so vast and unwieldy. It was natural that the king

2 And over these three presidents, of whom Daniel was first; ^athat the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage.

3 Then this Daniel ^dwas preferred above the presidents and princes, because ^aan excellent spirit was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm.

4 ¶ Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; but they could find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him.

5 Then said these men, 'We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God.

6 Then these presidents and princes ¹assembled together to the king, and said thus unto him, ²'King Darius, live for ever.

7 ³'All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counsellors, and the captains, ¹have consulted together to establish a royal statute, and to make a firm ²decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any god or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, ³'he shall be cast into the den of lions.

8 Now, O king, ¹establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, ²'according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which ³'altereth not.

9 Wherefore king Darius ^asigned the writing and the decree.

10 ¶ Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and, ^a'his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, ^bhe kneeled upon his knees ³'three times a day, and prayed, and ^c'gave thanks before his God, ^a'as he did aforetime.

11 Then these men ^aassembled, and found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God.

12 Then ^a'they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; ^bHast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any god or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, ^a'The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.

13 Then answered they, and said before the king, ^a'That Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, ^b'regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day.

15 Then these men assembled unto the king, and said unto the king, ^a'Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, That no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed.

16 Then ^a'the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast ^bhim into the den of lions. Now the king spake, and said unto Daniel, ^a'Thy God, whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.

17 And ^a'a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.

18 ¶ Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were ^a'instruments of music brought before him; ^b'and his sleep went from him.

19 Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions.

20 And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, ^a'is thy God, whom thou servest continually, ^b'able to deliver thee from the lions?

should soon come to hear of a man so extraordinary as Daniel, and of his unparalleled wisdom and experience, and promote him to the highest place in the government. This signal distinction, however, produced corresponding envy. Daniel's integrity was his stronghold; and never was a loftier tribute paid to the rectitude of a public servant. His religion operated with such power as to exclude everything in his conduct which might furnish a handle to accuse him; it became, therefore, necessary to devise means of turning that religion itself into a crime. Malice and envy are fertile of expedients; these men made a proposal, which, however preposterous in itself, while it flattered the king, formed a snare for the prophet. The king acted very unwisely in not demanding a reason for the course which these men had adopted. Ver. 10-17. Daniel made no difference in his religious exercises; he was alike careful to avoid concealment and ostentation. By a little management he might have eluded the vigilance of his enemies; but he resolved, in all things, to act as aforetime. Hate is full of energy; his accusers lost no time in apprising the king of Daniel's disobedience. The monarch, when too late, discovered the error into which he had fallen, but even then he exerted himself to the utmost to effect the deliverance of the innocent victim of their malice and his own indiscretion. But it was all to no purpose; the law of the country was hostile to the benevolence of the king, who submitted to the terrible necessity, in confidence that the God of Daniel would appear for his faithful servant. Ver. 18-28. Such a deliverance as God here wrought for the prophet could not fail to create an unparalleled sensation throughout the empire. The integrity of the king was evident by the whole of his deportment, which displayed the sincerest sorrow on account of the prophet. The results were all that he could wish—the lions were turned into lambs, and the prophet was safe beyond the reach of danger. In this exercise of the Divine power, special prominence is given to Daniel's faith: he was preserved "because he believed in his God." The grounds of the king's command concerning the accusers, with their wives and children, are not apparent. But the king clearly set down their conduct to the score of malicious envy, and determined that the lions should arbitrate in the matter between them and the prophet of the Lord. The result was decisive—the Divine restrictions removed, the lions, true to their nature, rushed on their prey, and in an instant the company were devoured. Daniel's power was thus immutably established, and it 21 Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever.

22 My God hath sent his angel, ¹and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.

23 Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, ²because he believed in his God.

24 ¶ And the king commanded, and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, their children, and their wives: and ³the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

25 ¶ Then king Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; ⁴Peace be multiplied unto you.

26 I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men ⁵tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; ⁶for he is the living God, and stedfast for ever, ⁷and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end.

27 He delivereth and rescueth, ⁸and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the ⁹power of the lions.

28 So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Daniel's vision of the four beasts, 9 and of God's kingdom. 15 The interpretation thereof.

IN the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon, Daniel ¹had a dream, and visions of his head upon his bed: then ²he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the ³matters.

2 Daniel spake, and said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, the four winds of the heaven strove upon the great sea.

3 And ⁴four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another.

4 The first was ⁵like a lion, and had eagle's wings: I beheld till the wings thereof ⁴were plucked, ⁵and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, ⁶and a man's heart was given to it.

5 And behold another beast, ⁷a second, like to a bear, and it raised up ⁸itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it: and they said thus unto it, ⁹'Arise, devour much flesh.

6 After this I beheld, and lo another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl: the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it.

7 After this ¹⁰I saw in the night-visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; ¹¹and it had ten horns.

8 I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were ¹²eyes like the eyes of man, and ¹³a mouth speaking great things.

9 ¶ I beheld ¹⁴till the thrones were cast down, and ¹⁵the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: ¹⁶his throne was like the fiery flame, ¹⁷and his wheels as burning fire.

10 A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: ¹⁸thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: ¹⁹the judgment was set, and the books were opened.

11 I beheld then, because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame.

12 As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet ²⁰their lives were prolonged for a season and time.

13 I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, ²¹one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to ²²the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him.

lasted as long as the reign of Darius and Cyrus the Persian.

Chap. VII. 1-8. This is the same Belshazzar referred to in chap. v., which in the arrangement might advantageously have followed the present chapter. It is probable, however, that the present method was adopted with a view to the separation of the historic and the prophetic portions from each other, and their distinct exhibition. The present vision was about seventeen years before the events just recorded, and contains substantially the same facts as the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, under different aspects, and with additional circumstances. It is agreed, on all hands, that the "little horn" pointed to the Popedom, which, from small beginnings, acquired a large temporal dominion through laying its hand on the ten kingdoms. The "eyes like the eyes of a man" significantly betokened the extraordinary vigilance, sagacity, and cunning of the Papal power. All history testifies to the accuracy of the Divine predictions. The great things that were to be spoken were falsehoods and anathemas, impieties and blasphemies. The Pope lays claim to infallibility, and to a power which authorises him to dispense with the Divine laws, as also to exercise the Divine prerogative of forgiving sin, while he makes merchandise of the things of God and the souls of men. Ver. 9-14. The fulfilment of the sublime prophecy here set forth will probably precede the introduction of the latter-day glory, while the final judgment will succeed to the consummation of all things. The great personage, "like the Son of man, coming with the clouds of heaven," clearly points to the 14 And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, ¹that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is ²an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom ³that which shall not be destroyed.

15 ¶ I Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of ⁴my ⁵body, and the visions of my head troubled me.

16 I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things.

17 These ⁶great beasts, which are four, are four kings, ⁷which shall arise ⁸out of the earth.

18 But the saints of the ⁹most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

19 Then I would know the truth of ¹⁰the fourth beast, which was diverse from all ¹¹the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth ¹²were of iron, and his nails of brass; ¹³which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;

20 And ¹⁴of the ten horns that ¹⁵were in his head, and ¹⁶of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even ¹⁷of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, ¹⁸whose look ¹⁹was more stout than his fellows.

21 I beheld, and ²⁰the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;

22 Until ²¹the Ancient of days came, and ²²judgment was given to the saints of the most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

23 Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be ²³the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces.

24 And ²⁴the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings ²⁵that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

25 And he ²⁶shall speak ²⁷great words

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Daniel's vision of the ram and he-goat. 13 The two thousand three hundred days of suspension of sacrifice.

I ¹N^a the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me at the first.

2^b And ²I saw in a vision; (and it came to pass, when I saw, that I ³was at ⁴Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of ⁵Elam:) and I saw in a vision, and I was by the river of Ulai.

3 Then I lifted up mine eyes, and saw, and, behold, there stood before the river a ram which had ⁶two horns: and the ⁷two horns were high; but one ⁸was higher than ⁹the other, and the higher came up last.

4 I saw the ram ¹⁰pushing westward, and northward, and southward; so that no beasts might stand before him, neither ¹¹was there any that could deliver out of his hand; but he did according to his will, and became great.

5 And as I was considering, behold, an he-goat came from the west, on the face of the whole earth, and ¹²touching not the ground; and the goat ¹³had ¹⁴a notable horn between his eyes.

6 And he came to the ram that had ¹⁵two horns, which I had seen standing before

Lord Jesus, the Son of God, who came to the Ancient of Days, and was brought in before him by the angelic attendants to receive a glorious, universal, and everlasting kingdom. The scene here presented transcends everything ever conceived by the human understanding. Ver. 15-28. Daniel seems to have bent beneath the burden of these stupendous communications. Awed and dazzled by their magnificence, he yet understood them not, and was anxious to obtain a glimpse of their import. The great thing set forth here is the final triumph of the people of God, and the absorption of all the world's kingdoms into that of Christ. Nothing can exceed the beauty and grandeur of the closing verses, which may well suffice to cheer the drooping hearts of God's people under the manifold depressions to which his cause is still subjected, and the difficulties with which it will have to contend before its universal triumph. That triumph, however, is purely a question of time. The eternal purpose of the Most High requires it; while infinite wisdom, exercising infinite power, will without fail bring it about.

Chap. VIII. 1-12. The kingdom of Media and Persia, previously represented by a voracious bear, now appears as a ram, with two horns. It is usual for the kings of Persia to wear a diadem of gold in the form of a ram's head. The Chaldean Monarchy was now drawing to a close, and the means of destruction were presented to the prophet's eye. The ram had two horns when he was smitten by the goat, which signified the Macedonian power—the next prophetic empire. The ram is an emblem rather of firmness and rapid movement, than of power. In the case, however, of Alexander, there was power as well as rapidity. He pushed his conquests "westward, northward, and southward," with irresistible impetuosity and uniform success, till he had fulfilled the purposes of Providence. It is a notable fact, that the goat was the emblem of the Macedonian kingdom, the people of which were long called the goats. The successes of Alexander were pointed out to himself by the Jewish High Priest, with an effect that may easily be conceived, under the following circumstances:—When Alexander besieged Tyre, Josephus tells us, the Jewish High Priest having sworn allegiance to Darius, refused to pay tribute to Alexander, and the refusal so exasperated him, that he instantly determined on the destruction of the Jewish people. When the conqueror advanced, the Chief Priest, in his pontifical vestments, the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power.

7 And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was moved with choler against him, and smote the ram, and brake his two horns; and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him: and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand.

8 Therefore the he-goat waxed very great: and, when he was strong, the great horn was broken; and for it came up four notable ones, toward the four winds of heaven.

9 And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land.

10 And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven; and it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them.

11 Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down.

12 And an host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground; and it practised, and prospered.

13 ¶ Then I heard one saint speaking, and another saint said unto that certain saint which spake, How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot?

14 And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, when I, even I Daniel, had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning, then, behold, there stood before me as the appearance of a man.

16 And I heard a man's voice between the banks of Ulai, which called, and said, Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision.

17 So he came near where I stood; and when he came, I was afraid, and fell upon my face: but he said unto me, Understand, O son of man; for at the time of the end shall be the vision.

19 And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: for at the time appointed the end shall be.

20 The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia.

21 And the rough goat is the king of Grecia: and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king.

22 Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power.

23 And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up.

24 And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people.

25 And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace shall destroy many: he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without hand.

26 And the vision of the evening and the morning which was told is true: wherefore shut thou up the vision; for it shall be for many days.

27 And I Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days: afterward I rose up, and did the king's business; and I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it.

CHAPTER IX.

8 Daniel confessing his sins, 16 prayeth for the restoration of Jerusalem. 20 Gabriel informeth him of the seventy weeks.

IN the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus, of the seed of the Medes, which was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans;

2 In the first year of his reign, I Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would attended by the other priests, went out to meet him; and to the astonishment of his attendants, the fiery conqueror bowed the knee before the High Priest, with awe and veneration. This unaccountable act was soon explained. While Alexander had been planning the expedition at Dio, he had a dream in which he beheld that very High Priest, with the habit he wore, invite him to come into Asia, and promise him success in his expedition. The obvious and extraordinary fulfilment of the dream so impressed him, that he avowed his purpose to adore the God of the Jews; and accordingly he entered Jerusalem in peace, and offered sacrifice in the Temple, where the High Priest shewed him the prophecies concerning himself, his wars, and conquests. The statement here given is probably true, since that alone can explain the course of Alexander, who not only did not wreak his vengeance on the Jews, but granted them special and peculiar privileges. Ver. 13-27. The days referred to have been the subject of much learned inquiry, and not a little controversy. The results generally agreed upon amount substantially to this:—If the 1260 days, or years, began A.D. 606, they must end A.D. 1866, and 2300 reckoned backward from that period, will bring us to the year B.C. 454. It is nevertheless hazardous to place too much confidence in the exactness of such calculations. But the probability is great that the main points in this statement are correct. It is now nearly 2400 years since Daniel had his vision; and in the course of things, it admits of no dispute, that the end of the 2300 days, or years, draws nigh. The facts alone can illustrate these sublime and awful prophecies. It were impossible, by mere speculation, to strike out accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem.

3 ¶ And ¹I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, ²with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes :

4 And I prayed unto the Lord my God, and ⁵made my confession, and said, O Lord, ⁶the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments ;

5 We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts, and from thy judgments :

6 Neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land.

7 O Lord, ⁸righteousness ⁹belongeth unto thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day ; to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel, ¹⁰that are near, and ¹¹that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee.

8 O Lord, ⁹to us ¹⁰belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, ¹¹because we have sinned against thee.

9 To the Lord our God ¹⁰belong mercies and forgivenesses, ¹¹though we have rebelled against him ;

10 Neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in his laws, ¹¹which he set before us by his servants the prophets.

11 Yea, ¹²all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing, that they might not obey thy voice ; therefore ¹³the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that ¹⁴is written in the law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him.

13 As it is written in the law of Moses, all this evil is come upon us : ¹⁴yet ¹⁵made we not our prayer before the Lord our God, ¹⁶that we might turn from our iniquities, and understand thy truth.

14 Therefore hath the Lord ¹⁵watched upon the evil, and brought it upon us : for ¹⁶the Lord our God ¹⁷is righteous in all his works which he doeth : for we obeyed not his voice.

15 And now, O Lord our God, that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast ¹⁶gotten thee renown, as at this day ; we have sinned, we have done wickedly.

16 ¶ O Lord, according to all thy righteousness, I beseech thee, let thine anger and thy fury be turned away from thy city Jerusalem, thy holy mountain : because for our sins, and ¹⁷for the iniquities of our fathers, Jerusalem and thy people ¹⁸are become a reproach to all that are about us.

17 Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, and ¹⁸cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary that is desolate, ¹⁹for the Lord's sake.

18 O my God, ¹⁹incline thine ear, and hear ; open thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city ²⁰which is called by thy name : for we do not ²¹present our supplications before thee for our righteousnesses, but for thy great mercies.

19 O Lord, hear ; ²⁰O Lord, forgive ; O Lord, hearken and do ; defer not, for ²¹thine own sake, O my God : ²²for thy city and thy people are called by thy name.

20 ¶ And whiles I was speaking, and praying, and ²¹confessing my sin, and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the Lord my God ²²for the holy mountain of my God ;

21 Yea, whiles I was speaking in prayer, even ²²the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly ²³swiftly, ²⁴touched me about the time of the evening oblation.

anything even approaching the truth. The prophecies of Daniel are peculiar ; he is in the highest sense of the term a prophet ; he narrated but little, and, it seems, never preached. His position as one of the prophets of the Captivity was different from that of his predecessors in Palestine. With the exception of his sublime prayer, he indulges but seldom in devotional sentiments. There is in him but little doctrine, and not much that is preceptive.

Chap. IX. 1-19. The books here referred to, of course, signify the prophecies of Jeremiah, which were probably issued in successive portions, and all possessed by Daniel. From this it appears, that each generation of prophets studied the writings of their predecessors for the more perfect understanding of the times which were passing over them. As stated in a former note, the Seventy Years were dated from the latter end of the third, or the beginning of the fourth year of Jehoiakim, when Daniel was carried captive ; and this was in the sixty-ninth year, so that the hour of deliverance was at hand. It is remarkable that, notwithstanding the certainty that, at the expiration of the period specified, the Jews should be restored, the prophet, with the most fervent importunity, implored the accomplishment of the prediction. There is a principle here involved, which extends to everything between God and the creature. Jeremiah had told them, in chap. xxix., that they were to "call upon him, and to pray unto him," and that he would "hearken unto them." Daniel was now an object of the deepest interest to his people, since he had advanced considerably beyond the age of eighty ; and, accordingly, was one of the very few who had lived throughout the whole of this eventful period of his country's history. Daniel appears to have had regular periods of devotion—a plan, where practicable, doubtless possessing advantages ; but the immense majority of God's people are not in circumstances to enable them to enjoy it ; and happily, nothing that is impossible is necessary. Devotion consists more in spirit than in act—in the habitual recognition of the Divine presence, and a steadfast endeavour to promote the Divine glory. This is the most remarkable record in the prophetic writings of the Old Testament. In this respect, Daniel stands alone, and far above all his fellows. The prayers of Moses, 22 And he informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding.

23 At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth, and I am come to shew thee; for thou art greatly beloved: therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision.

24 Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most Holy.

25 Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, unto the Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times.

26 And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself: and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined.

27 And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate.

CHAPTER X.

1 Daniel, having humbled himself, seeth a vision: 10 being troubled with fear, he is comforted by an angel.

IN the third year of Cyrus king of Persia a thing was revealed unto Daniel, whose name was called Belteshazzar; and the thing was true, but the time appointed was long: and he understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision.

2 In those days Daniel was mourning three full weeks.

3 I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks were fulfilled.

4 And in the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river, which is Hiddekel;

5 Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz:

6 His body also was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in colour to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude.

7 And I Daniel alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves.

8 Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me: for my comeliness was turned in me into corruption, and I remained no strength.

9 Yet heard I the voice of his words: and when I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my face toward the ground.

10 And, behold, an hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands:

11 And he said unto me, O Daniel, a man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright: for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling.

12 Then said he unto me, Fear not, Daniel; for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words.

13 But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one and twenty days: but, lo, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me; and I remained there with the kings of Persia.

Solomon, and Daniel, are the chief things of the sort in the Old Testament. Ver. 20-27. The closing verses constitute one of the most precious portions of Inspiration. In the seventieth week Messiah was to be cut off, by a violent death, without any offence of his own. The last week of the seventy, whether ending at the death of Christ, or extending two or three years after that event, was to be signalled by the Messiah's confirming the covenant with many. This period, in effect, put an end to the Mosaic dispensation, with the ceremonial law, and everything appertaining to it. The Jews, however, continued for a season to adhere to these sacrifices, rejecting the Messiah as an impostor, and still looking for the Prophet of whom Moses had spoken to the fathers. But when the invading armies arrived, and destroyed Jerusalem and the temple, the sacrifices, as a matter of course, ceased to be offered. But, from the moment that Christ ascended, they had been divested of their typical character, and were no longer valid observances, possessing vitality, and constituting a means of grace.

Chap. X. 1-9. Darius was now dead, and his decree for the release of the captive Jews had taken place two years previously. At this time Daniel may be considered as having reached his ninetieth year. The venerable prophet seems to have been distressed at the intelligence of the obstructions which were placed in the way of the Jews rebuilding the temple. It is also not improbable that he was deeply affected at witnessing the backwardness of his captive countrymen to avail themselves of the proclamation of Cyrus. It has, however, been supposed, that his grief, in part, arose from the impossibility of attaining to a knowledge of his own visions. He nevertheless appears to have reached the conclusion that the period of their fulfilment was very distant, for he says, "The thing was true, but the time appointed was long." To that extent, therefore, "he understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision." Ver. 10-21. While Daniel lay prostrate on the earth, the hand of an angel touched him, and lifted him upon his knees and hands, that he might attend to the vision. The angel was Gabriel, as appears from the opening verse of the next chapter. If so, it has been suggested, with considerable probability, that the glorious personage mentioned in 14 Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people ¹in the latter days: for yet the vision is for many days.

15 And when he had spoken such words unto me, I set my face toward the ground, and I became dumb.

16 And, behold, one ¹like the similitude of the sons of men ²touched my lips: then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision ³my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength.

17 For how can ⁴the servant of this my lord ⁵talk with this my lord? for as for me, straightway there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me.

18 Then there came again and touched me one like the appearance of a man, and he strengthened me, 19 And said, O man greatly beloved, fear not: peace be unto thee; ⁶be strong, yea, be strong. And when he had spoken unto me, I was strengthened, and said, ⁷Let my lord speak; for ⁸thou hast strengthened me.

20 Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I come unto thee? and now will I return to fight with the prince of Persia: and when I am gone forth, lo, ⁹the prince of Grecia shall come.

21 But ¹⁰I will shew thee that which is noted in the scripture of truth: and there is none that ¹¹holdeth with me in these things, but Michael your prince.

13 For ²¹the king of the north shall return, and shall set forth a multitude greater than the former, and shall certainly come ²²after certain years with a great army, and with much riches.

14 And in those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south: also the ²³robbers of thy people shall exalt themselves to establish the vision; but they shall fall.

ver. 5 and 6, was the Son of God, whom Gabriel and the other angels attended and served. The sublime account here given of angelic movements is peculiarly affecting. The difficulties attending the explanation, however, are so great that more light is necessary to the satisfactory explanation of the passage. Not a few of our most able and learned expositors have betaken themselves to the solution, but hardly any two are agreed; and in the midst of so much contradiction and confusion, nothing remains but uncertainty. One thing, however, is sure: Satan and his angels are ever active in obstructing the progress of Christ's kingdom, and they operate for this purpose in all possible ways. When we think of their knowledge, experience, numbers, and power, the idea may well strike terror into the Christian's heart, were it not that to all created beings there are limits, both as to power and action, and that He who is King of kings and Lord of lords is also the Ruler of the "Princes of the powers of the air," whom He can shut up at pleasure, or permit to act so that his very malice may prove subservient to the purposes of His love and mercy.

Chap. XI. 1-45. The four Prophetic Empires shewn to Nebuchadnezzar under the symbol of the image, were again represented to Daniel under the forms of four wild beasts. The entire chapter is a prophetic history of 15 So the king of the north shall come, and ^acast up a mount, and take the ^bmost fenced cities; and the arms of the south ^bshall not withstand, neither ^chis chosen people, neither shall there be any strength to withstand.

16 But he that cometh against him ^cshall do according to his own will, and none shall stand before him; and he shall stand in the ¹glorious land, which by his hand shall be consumed.

17 He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, and ²upright ones with him; thus shall he do: and he shall give him the daughter of women, ³corrupting her; but she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him.

18 After this shall he turn his face unto the isles, and shall take many: but a prince ⁴for his own behalf shall cause ^bthe reproach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach he shall cause it to turn upon him.

19 Then he shall turn his face toward the fort of his own land: ^dbut he shall stumble, and fall, and not be found.

20 Then shall stand up in his ^eestate ⁷a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom: but within few days he shall be destroyed, neither in ⁸anger, nor in battle.

21 And in his ⁹estate shall stand up ^aa vile person, to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries.

23 And after the league made with him he shall work deceitfully: for he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people.

24 He shall enter ¹peaceably even upon the fattest places of the province; and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his fathers' fathers: ^hhe shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches: yea, and he shall ²forecast his devices against the strong holds, even for a time.

25 And he shall stir up his power and his courage against the king of the south with a great army; and the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army; but he shall not stand: for they shall forecast devices against him.

lies at one table; but it shall not prosper: for yet the end shall be at the time appointed.

28 Then shall he return into his land with great riches; and his heart shall be against ^kthe holy covenant; and he shall do exploits, and return to his own land.

29 At the time appointed he shall return, and come toward the south: but it shall not be as the former, or as the latter.

30 ¶ For ¹the ships of Chittim shall come against him; therefore he shall be grieved, and return, ^mand have indignation against the holy covenant: so shall he do; he shall even return, and have intelligence with them that forsake the holy covenant.

31 And arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place ⁿthe abomination that ⁴maketh desolate.

35 And some of them of understanding shall fall, to try ⁶them, and to purge, and to make them white, ^qeven to the time of the end: because it is yet for a time appointed.

36 And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against ^rthe God of gods, and shall prosper ^ttill the indignation be accomplished: ⁴for that that is determined shall be done.

37 Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women, nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all.

38 But ⁷in his estate shall he honour the God of ⁸forces: and ^ua god whom his fathers knew not shall he honour with gold, and silver, and with precious stones, and ^vpleasant things.

39 Thus shall he do in the ¹most strong holds with a strange god, whom he shall acknowledge and increase with glory: and he shall cause them to rule over many, and shall divide the land for ²gain.

40 And at the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him: and the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships; portions of the mighty events which were subsequently to agitate the human race in these successive empires. This chapter is, therefore, an epitome, by anticipation, of all the authentic history which has followed, touching those great powers which were to precede the revelation of the Son of God from heaven, and the establishment of his kingdom on the earth, and the development of the Papal power. From the prophecies here set forth, inferences might be drawn respecting the fearful depravity of the successive generations and governments and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow and pass over.

41 He shall ²enter also into the ³glorious land, and many countries shall be overthrown: but these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom, and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon.

42 He shall ⁴stretch forth his hand also upon the countries; and the land of Egypt shall not escape.

43 But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt: and the Libyans and the Ethiopians shall be at his steps.

44 But tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him: therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many.

45 And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palaces between the seas ⁵in the ⁶glorious holy mountain: yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him.

2 And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, ⁴some to everlasting life, and some to shame and ⁵everlasting contempt.

3 And they that be ¹wise shall ²shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that ³turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.

words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: ¹many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.

5 ¶ Then I Daniel looked, and, behold, there stood ²other two, the one on this side of the ³bank of the river, and the other on that side of the bank of the river.

shadowed forth. But, however revolting these prophetic glimpses may be, they are beautiful compared with the corruption revealed by the actual facts. Everything in the world, and everything in the Church, testifies to the depravity of man, and the impotency of all instrumentalities for his renovation apart from the Gospel of Christ as applied by the Spirit of God.

Chap. XII. 1-4. Writers are entirely at variance as to the personage meant by Michael. It is generally, however, thought that it is the Lord Jesus Christ. The sublime predictions of Daniel are closed in a manner peculiarly affecting. The general resurrection is essentially connected with the final adjustment of the affairs of the human family. Notwithstanding the objections which fanciful expositors have made, there seems to be no reasonable doubt that, by the language of the prophet, we are to understand the resurrection of the dead, the day of judgment, the separation of mankind into two classes, and their settlement in two states. To apply the passage to the restoration of the Jewish nation, and their call to the faith of the Gospel, seems doing violence to language. Even the Jews themselves considered it as pointing to the general resurrection. The language of the third verse, touching the spread of truth, and the conversion of men, is inexpressibly beautiful, as well as fraught with most momentous import. Of all engagements in which mortal man may be employed, none are comparable to this, of "turning many to righteousness," as may be gathered from the fact that no rewards are comparable to the reward which attaches to that—"They shall shine as the stars for ever and ever!" The language of the fourth verse also so strongly partakes of an evangelical character as to shew that the entire passage bears a latter-day aspect. Never, till after the establishment of Christianity, did men begin to run to and fro for the express purpose of increasing knowledge. Ver. 5-13. The man clothed in linen has been generally considered as our Great High Priest, the Lord Jesus. The reply to the question signifies three years and a half, or 1260 days from the time when the king, before prophesied of, made way for one to "scatter the power of the holy people," when all these things should be "finished." When Daniel heard this, he was conscious of not understanding it; and, therefore, he repeated his inquiries, till reminded that the "words were to be closed, and sealed up to the time of the end." The purification referred to, doubtless, points to the persecutions which awaited the people of God in future times. The "abomination of desolation" is a general phrase, which, it is probable, comprises more events than one. It is applied by the Saviour to the destruction of the City and Temple by the Romans. It may also refer to the building of a temple by the Roman Emperor, Adrian, to Jupiter, in the place where the Temple of Solomon stood, and the afflictions of the Jews which followed. It may also apply to the desolation of Christendom, and the converting of places of worship into mosques; and, indeed, this latter event seems particularly pointed at. If such be the fact, the religion of Mohammed will prevail in the East 1260 days, and be followed by a glorious revolution. There are, nevertheless, great difficulties to HOSEA.

Hosea was contemporary of Isaiah, Joel, Amos, and Jonah; and prophesied throughout the long period of sixty years, during the successive reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. His prophecies, which were chiefly directed to the Ten Tribes, are remarkable for conciseness, force, and fidelity. None of the prophets possess more pungency of rebuke, earnestness of remonstrance, or pathos of exhortation.

CHAPTER I.

1 Hosea, to shew God's judgment for spiritual whoredom, takeih Gomer, & hath by her Jezreel, &c.

THE word of the LORD that came unto ^aHosea the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel.

2 The ^bbeginning of the word of the LORD by Hosea. And the LORD said to Hosea, Go, take unto thee a wife of whoredoms, and children of whoredoms: ^cfor the land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the LORD.

3 So he went and took Gomer the daughter of Diblaim; which conceived, and bare him a son.

4 And the LORD said unto him, ^dCall his name Jezreel; for yet a little ^ewhile, and I will ^favenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel.

5 And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.

6 ^gAnd she conceived again, and bare a daughter. And God said unto him, Call her name ^hLo-ruhamah: for I will ⁱno more have mercy upon the house of Israel; ^jbut I will utterly take them away.

7 But ^kI will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and ^lwill save them by the LORD their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen.

8 ^m¶ Now, when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and bare a son.

9 Then said God, Call his name ⁿAmmi: for ye ^oare not my people, and I will not be your God.

be encountered in approaching anything like a solution of the chronology. There can be no mistake, however, as to the result: the day cannot be far distant when the Millennial glory will burst on the world. That we are approaching great changes, is evident alike from prophecy, and from Providence, and the existing aspect of human affairs. All enemies must submit to Him whose right it is to reign, and who will "overturn and overturn" whatever stands in the path of his progress. The Jews must be restored, the Mohammedans converted, Anti-christ destroyed, and the whole Gentile world brought into the one fold, under the one Shepherd.

Chap. I. 1-5. Nothing but the Divine command could authorise the course pursued by the prophet. Some of our best translators and expositors have received the whole as a mere parable; the prophet is bid to represent the spiritual adultery of Israel under the figure of a vicious woman, shewing that the people were as vile as the example quoted. In this way the provoking idolatry of the people, and their utter departure from the Lord, would be impressively exemplified. Ver. 6-11. It is clear that the prophet here speaks in figure. The numbers referred to in ver. 10 must necessarily allude to the spiritual Israel as comprising both Jew and Gentile, who are both to be made one in Christ, as one body under one head. The day will certainly arrive when the Messiah shall be received by the Jews, and when all the seed of Abraham shall bow before him. Then will they be cleansed from all their filthiness of flesh and spirit, and led to perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord.

Chap. II. 1-18. God here calls true believers by names of opposite signification to those given to the wicked. In the former chapter, although the people in the days of Hosea were deeply depraved, there were among them those who had not bowed the knee to Baal; and the Most High here commissions the faithful few to warn the nation. "She shall not find her paths," is a phrase which signifies breaches in a hedge or stone fence made by repeated clambering over it. The text alludes to a double enclosure, first of loose stones, and, secondly, an outside bramble hedge, whereby Zion should be so enclosed with difficulties as not to be able to escape.

shall seek them, but shall not find them: then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband; *for then was it better with me than now.

8 For she did not know that I gave her corn, and wine, and oil, and multiplied her silver and gold, which they prepared for Baal.

9 Therefore will I return, and take away my corn in the time thereof, and my wine in the season thereof, and will recover my wool and my flax given to cover her nakedness.

10 And now will I discover her lewdness in the sight of her lovers, and none shall deliver her out of mine hand.

11 I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast-days, her new-moons, and her sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts.

12 And I will destroy her vines and her fig-trees, whereof she hath said, These are my rewards that my lovers have given me: and I will make them a forest, and the beasts of the field shall eat them.

13 And I will visit upon her the days of Baalim, wherein she burnt incense to them, and she decked herself with her ear-rings and her jewels, and she went after her lovers, and forgot me, saith the LORD.

14 ¶ Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her.

15 And I will give her her vineyards from thence, and the valley of Achor ^m for a door of hope: and she shall sing there, as in the days of her youth, and as in the day when she came up out of the land of Egypt.

16 And it shall be at that day, saith the LORD, that thou shalt call me Ishi, and shalt call me no more Baali.

17 For I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth, and they shall no more be remembered by their name.

18 And in that day will I make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven, and with the creeping things of the ground: and I will break the bow, and the sword, and the battle, out of the earth, and will make them to lie down safely.

19 And I will betroth thee unto me

CHAPTER III.

1 By the prophet taking unto him an adulteress, it is showed the desolation of Israel before their restoration.

THEN said the LORD unto me, Go yet, love a woman beloved of her friend, yet an adulteress, according to the love of the LORD toward the children of Israel, who look to other gods, and love flagons of wine.

2 So I bought her to me for fifteen pieces of silver, and for an homer of barley, and an half homer of barley.

3 And I said unto her, Thou shalt abide for me many days: thou shalt not play the harlot, and thou shalt not be for another man; so will I also be for thee.

4 For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim.

5 Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the LORD their God, and David their king; and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days.

CHAPTER IV.

1 God's judgments against the sins of the people, 6 and of the priests. 15 Judah is exhorted to take warning by Israel's calamity.

HEAR the word of the LORD, ye children of Israel: for the LORD hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor

With respect to the feast-days in ver. 11, the observance of several of them was retained in the worship of the Golden Calves; and God here threatens them with the Captivity to put an end to these abominations. Ver. 14-23. The state of the Jewish captivity is likened to a residence in the wilderness, which possibly means the Dispersion of the ten tribes. Ever since their first captivity they would see themselves as in a barren desert like their forefathers; and when reduced to despair, he would comfort and encourage them to trust in his mercy, grace, and providence; he would "speak comfortably to her," as a compassionate husband to an unfaithful wife. The language of ver. 18 is undoubtedly expressive of peace, safety, and love—figures all referring to Gospel times. On her repenting, and turning to the Lord, he would have mercy on her, and extend an abundant pardon to all her transgressions.

Chap. III. 1-5. Slavery has prevailed in the East 844 from the remotest antiquity; but it is a thing altogether different from the cruel oppression of modern times. Masters and slaves there are more like friends and companions. There is very little subordination, and still less of rigour, displayed in the East. Since the rejection of the Jews at the introduction of Christianity, and the destruction of their City and Temple by the Romans, they have remained exactly as described—without a king, prince, or sacrifice; without an image, ephod, or teraphim. They have had no government of their own, no country, no sacrifice; they are left dispersed and desolate, despised by the world, and under the frown of the Lord. But a glorious day awaits them; they will assuredly be led by the Divine Spirit to "seek the Lord their God, and David their king," when they will be introduced to the full enjoyment of all the privileges and blessings of adoption.

Chap. IV. 1-11. The portrait here drawn, which is mercy, ^bnor knowledge of God in the land.

2 By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and ¹blood toucheth blood.

3 Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven; yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away.

4 Yet let no man strive, nor reprove another: for thy people are as they that strive with the priest.

5 Therefore shalt thou fall in the day, and the prophet also shall fall with thee in the night, and I will ²destroy thy mother.

6 ¶ My people are ³destroyed for lack of knowledge: ⁴because thou hast rejected knowledge, ⁵I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, ⁶I will also forget thy children.

7 As they were increased, so they sinned against me: ⁸therefore will I change their glory into shame.

8 They ⁹eat up the sin of my people, and they ¹⁰set their ¹¹heart on their iniquity.

CHAPTER V.

¹ God's judgments against the priests, the people, and the princes of Israel, for their manifold sins, ¹⁵ until they repent.

HEAR ye this, O priests; and hearken, ye house of Israel; and give ye ear, O house of the king; ²for judgment is toward you, because ye have been a snare on Mizpah, and a net spread upon ³Tabor.

2 And the revolvers are profound to make slaughter, ⁴though I have been ⁵a rebuker of them all.

4 ⁸They will not frame their doings to turn unto their God: for the spirit of whoredoms is in the midst of them, ⁹and they have not known the LORD.

5 And the pride of Israel doth testify to his face: therefore shall Israel and Ephraim ¹⁰fall in their iniquity; ¹¹Judah also shall fall with them.

6 They shall ¹²go with their flocks and with their herds to seek the LORD; but ¹³they shall not find him: ¹⁴he hath withdrawn himself from them.

7 They have ¹⁵dealt treacherously against the LORD; for they have begotten strange children: now shall ¹⁶a month devour them with their portions.

9 Ephraim shall be desolate in the day of rebuke: among the tribes of Israel in perfect harmony with the pictures presented by Jeremiah and Ezekiel, indicates a depth of depravity which can hardly be exceeded. The character of the people was but too accurate an index of their state; they were "destroyed for lack of knowledge." They had rejected the knowledge of God, and God rejected them. The priests, who ought to have been patterns of excellence, were promoters of iniquity; they, therefore, to an awful extent were responsible for the national corruption. "Like people, like priest," is an expression embodying a most important principle, which has more or less found illustrations in every age since the introduction of Christianity; partaking in the transgression, it was meet they should share in the common punishments. Ver. 12-19. The tendency of transgression is not simply to sear the conscience, but to darken the understanding. In this idolatry originated, and the people must have far departed from God before they could ask counsel of "their stocks and their stones." Such a state implies something far beneath intellectual childhood, a state in which man becomes largely divested of his essential attributes. While the "pure in heart see God," the heart that is overlaid with corruption loses sight, not only of God, but of its own Divine origin.

Chap. V. 1-15. None of the true prophets spoke more directly and severely of the priests than Hosea, who dealt the heaviest blows against their depravity and hypocrisy. Where sin has been great, repentance must correspond with it; for, till the heart be brought into a proper state of humiliation, it neither can desire mercy, nor will mercy be extended to it. They might, indeed, seek the Lord, but they would "not find him, for he had withdrawn himself from them." Ver. 15 presents a 11 Ephraim is oppressed and broken in judgment, because ¹he willingly walked after the commandment.

12 Therefore will I be unto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Judah as rotteness.

13 When Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judah saw his wound, then went Ephraim to the Assyrian, and sent to king Jareb: 'yet could he not heal you, nor cure you of your wound.

14 For I will be unto Ephraim as a lion, and as a young lion to the house of Judah: I, even I, will tear and go away; I will take away, and 'none shall rescue him.

15 I will go and return to my place, till they 'acknowledge their offence, and seek my face: 'in their affliction they will seek me early.

CHAPTER VI.

1 An exhortation to repentance. 4 A complaint of their untowardness and iniquity.

COME, ¹and let us return unto the LORD: for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up.

2 After two days will he revive us: in the third day he will raise us up, and 'we shall live in his sight.

3 Then shall we know, 'if we follow on to know the LORD: his going forth is prepared as the morning; and he shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth.

4 O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? O Judah, what shall I do unto thee? for your 'goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away.

principle also deserving of notice by transgressors and backsliders. God alone can heal their backslidings, and cure their wound; but he will not do it till that wound has been probed and cleansed. "He will go to his place, and nothing can bring him out till they acknowledge their offences, and seek his face." To produce this, in the wisdom of Providence, is the great end of affliction. It is therefore vain for men, still wholly impenitent, or but partially contrite, to expect a restoration to favour, until they have not only confessed their sin, but forsaken it, and been led to detest it with their whole hearts.

Chap. VI. 1-3. This exhortation is clearly an application of the address in the foregoing chapter. There was but one method of escaping their calamities, and that was, immediately returning to the Lord. The expression concerning "days," was clearly proverbial, as signifying an event that would soon come to pass. Some, however, consider it as denoting three distinct periods: the first, the Captivity of the Ten Tribes by the Assyrians, and of the Two Tribes by the Babylonians, considered as one judgment upon the nation, beginning with the captivity of the Ten, and completed in that of the Two Tribes; the second, the whole of the present Dispersion of the Jews; and the third, the period yet to come, commencing with their Restoration, and extending to the Second Advent. Several of our most eminent Biblical critics have adopted this view. But it is wholly arbitrary, since there is nothing contained in the language that points to it. As an exhibition of chronological

CHAPTER VII.

1 A reproof of manifold sins. 11 God's wrath against the people for their hypocrisy.

WHEN ¹I would have healed Israel, then ²'the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered, and the ³'wickedness of Samaria: for they commit falsehood; and the thief cometh in, and the troop of robbers ⁴'spoileth without:

events it is interesting, and these events in themselves are true. The words, "They shall know, if they follow on to know the Lord," are singularly beautiful, presenting at once instruction and encouragement to all the pilgrims of Zion. Ver. 4-11. Few words have been in more frequent use in the history of the Church, than the "morning cloud, and the early dew," which so aptly represent fitful piety, and a spurious profession. The awful character of the prophet's ministrations is meetly expressed by the term "hewed." Only the axe can hew; and that the tree may be felled, the axe must be applied with vigour. In every age the temptation of the human heart has been to lose sight of God, and to merge the spiritual in the ritual. While the sacrifice was remembered, they deemed all right in the neglect of mercy! Burnt-offerings, in their own place, as Divine appointments, shadowing forth the Great Sacrifice, were good, but without the knowledge of God they had no meaning, and could exert no beneficial effect upon the soul. As human nature is unchanged, it is necessary to guard against the temptation to a course essentially the same, and attended with like disastrous consequences. The forms of godliness are good, but form without the power is of no avail.

Chap. VII. 1-10. In the absence of consideration, wickedness will never be remembered, and, while forgotten, it will remain unforgiven. It is and when wickedness gladdens the heart of kings, and princes are pleased with lies! When men grow old in sin, and are wine: he stretched out his hand ^owith scorers.

6 For they have ^rmade ready their heart like an oven, whiles they lie in wait: their baker sleepeth all the night; in the morning it burneth as a flaming fire.

7 They are all hot as an oven, and have devoured their judges: all their kings are fallen; ^rthere is none among them that calleth unto me.

8 Ephraim, he hath mixed himself among the people; Ephraim is a cake not turned.

9 Strangers have devoured his strength, and he knoweth ^{it} not; yea, gray hairs are ^ohere and there upon him, yet he knoweth not.

10 And ^rthe pride of Israel testifieth to his face: ^oand they do not return to the LORD their God, ^rnor seek him for all this.

11 ^r Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart: they call to Egypt, they go to Assyria.

12 When they shall go, I will spread my net upon them; ^rI will bring them down as the fowls of the heaven; I will chastise them, as their congregation hath heard.

13 ^rWoe unto them! for they have ^rfled from me; ^rdestruction unto them! because they have transgressed against me: though I have redeemed them, yet they have ^rspoken lies against me.

14 And ^rthey have not cried unto me with their heart, when they howled upon their beds; they assembled themselves for corn and wine, ^{and} they rebel against me.

15 Though I have ^rbound and strengthened their arms, yet do they ^rimagine mischief against me.

16 They ^rreturn, ^{but} not to the most High; they are like a deceitful bow: their princes shall fall by the sword for the rage of their tongue. ^rThis shall be their derision in the land of Egypt.

CHAPTER VIII.

1, 12 Destruction is threatened for Israel's impiety, 5 and idolatry.

SET the trumpet to ^rthy mouth: ^{he} shall come as an eagle against the house of the LORD, because they have ^rtransgressed my covenant, and ^rpassed against my law.

not aware of it; when "gray hairs are here and there upon them, and they know it not," their danger is great. Under this state of moral insensibility, they will not return to the Lord their God, nor seek his face for mercy. Ver. 11-16. The dove is often set forth as an emblem of innocence, and the Lord himself pointed his disciples to it as an example; but while Christians imitate its innocence, they must eschew its silliness, which implies weakness, fearfulness, and fitfulness. The simile of a "deceitful bow" is a striking emblem of human nature, when men throw off the restraints of God's law, ceasing to love, serve, and confide in him.

Chap. VIII. 1-14. The allusion here is to the Eastern mode of calling the people together by the trumpet; but, that it might produce the desired effect, it was necessary to give a "certain sound," since otherwise the people would not know what was demanded of them. That instrument has been an emblem of preaching the Gospel,

REJOICE not, O Israel, for joy, as ^{other} people: for thou hast ^rgone which must be set forth in language, and otherwise in a manner so clear, that he who runs may read. It is but too possible to worship gold and silver, without their being presented in the form of an idol. No idolatry is so dangerous as that which bears an abstract character. It is equally effective in severing the heart from God, in debasing and polluting the soul, as the various forms of that species of transgression; and it is all the more perilous because of its impalpable character. To this state of mind it was, doubtless, that the prophet referred, when he exhorted the people; "Little children, keep yourselves from idols." The exhortation is the more necessary, since the danger is especially one of spiritual childhood. The young men, spiritually viewed, are less in peril; and the fathers are above yielding to such folly.

Chap. IX. 1-17. The figure here presented may either point to the giving of tithes of their corn to their a whoring from thy God; thou hast loved a reward¹ upon every corn-floor.

2 The floor and the wine-press shall not feed them, and the new wine shall fail in her.

3 They shall not dwell in the LORD's land: ^abut Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and they shall eat unclean things in Assyria.

4 They shall not offer ²wine-offerings to the LORD, ^aneither shall they be pleasing unto him: their sacrifices shall be unto them ^aas the bread of mourners; all that eat thereof shall be polluted: for their bread for their soul shall not come into the house of the LORD.

5 What will ye do in the solemn day, and in the day of the feast of the LORD?

6 For, lo, they are gone because of ^adestruction: Egypt shall gather them up, Memphis shall bury them: ^athe pleasant places for their silver, nettles shall possess them: thorns shall be in their tabernacles.

7 The days of visitation are come, the days of recompence are come; ^aIsrael shall know it: the prophet is a fool, the ^aspiritual man is mad, for the multitude of thine iniquity, and the great hatred.

8 The watchman of Ephraim was ^awith my God: but the prophet is a snare of a fowler in all his ways, and hatred ^ain the house of his God.

9 They have deeply corrupted themselves, as in the days of Gibeah: therefore he will remember their iniquity, he will visit their sins.

10 I found Israel like grapes in the wilderness; I saw your fathers as the first-ripe in the fig-tree at her first time: but they went to Baal-peor, and separated themselves unto that shame; ^aand their abominations were according as they loved.

11 As for Ephraim, their glory shall fly away like a bird, from the birth, and from the womb, and from the conception.

12 Though they bring up their children, yet will I bereave them, that there shall ^anot be a man left: yea, ^awoe also to them when I depart from them!

13 Ephraim, as I saw Tyrus, is planted in a pleasant place: but Ephraim shall bring forth his children to the murderer.

14 Give them, O LORD: what wilt thou give? give them ^aa miscarrying womb and dry breasts.

17 ^aMy God will cast them away, because they did not hearken unto him; ^aand they shall be wanderers among the nations.

CHAPTER X.

Israel is reproved and threatened for their impiety and idolatry.

ISRAEL is ^aan empty vine, he bringeth forth fruit unto himself: according to the multitude of his fruit he hath increased the altars; according to the goodness of his land they have made goodly ^aimages.

2 ^aTheir heart is divided; now shall they be found faulty: ^ahe shall ^abreak down their altars, he shall spoil their images.

3 For now they shall say, We have no king, because we feared not the LORD; what then should a king do to us?

4 They have spoken words, ^aswearing falsely in making a covenant: thus judgment springeth up as hemlock in the furrows of the field.

5 The inhabitants of Samaria shall fear because of ^athe calves of Beth-aven: ^afor the people thereof shall mourn over it, and ^athe priests thereof that rejoiced on it, ^afor the glory thereof, because it is departed from it.

6 It shall be also ^acarried unto Assyria for a present to king Jareb: Ephraim shall ^areceive shame, and Israel shall be ^aashamed of his own counsel.

7 As for ^aSamaria, her ^aking is cut off as the foam upon ^athe water.

8 The ^ahigh places also of Aven, ^athe sin of Israel, shall be destroyed: ^athe thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars; and they shall say to the mountains, Cover us; and to the hills, Fall on us.

9 O Israel, thou hast sinned from the days of Gibeah: there they stood: ^athe battle in Gibeah against the children of iniquity ^adid not overtake them.

10 It is ^ain my desire that I should chastise them; and the people shall be idols instead of to the Lord, or their ascribing their abundant harvests to their idols, or their erecting the altars on their corn-floors, as David did to the true God at Araunah. No folly is comparable to that which consists in a belief of falsehood in matters of vital moment. False prophets, therefore, were proclaimed to be such in the day of God's visitation; and not only false, but deceivers and destroyers of the multitudes they beguiled. The closing verses of the chapter indicate the heaviest affliction that can be endured by a people: "They shall be wanderers among the nations," was a threat which is being fulfilled up to the present hour. Israelites have no settled place of their own; while spread among the nations, they do not mingle with them, but remain a people as entire as in the days of their first captivity. The ten tribes, up to the present moment, if they be not extinct, are in the land of their bondage. On this subject much darkness still rests, and the labours of the learned have contributed very little towards its removal.

Chap. X. 1-11. The high places also of Aven, or Beth-aven, were to be destroyed; and whilst thorns and thistles were growing over desolate altars, the paralysed worshippers would call upon the hills and the mountains to cover them from the terrible vengeance that then impended! It is noticeable that this language of agony is parallel to the expression contained in the Book of Revelation. Ver. 12-15. We have here a most 11 And Ephraim is as an heifer that is taught, and loveth to tread out the corn; ²but I passed over upon ³her fair neck: I will make Ephraim to ride; Judah shall plow, and Jacob shall break his clods.

12 ¹Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy; ²break up your fallow ground: for it is ³time to seek the LORD, till he come and ⁴rain righteousness upon you.

13 Ye have ¹plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity; ye have ²eaten the fruit of lies: because thou didst trust in thy way, in the multitude of thy mighty men.

14 Therefore shall a tumult arise among thy people, and all thy fortresses shall be spoiled, as Shalman spoiled Beth-arbel in the day of battle: the mother was dashed in pieces upon her children.

15 So ¹shall Beth-el do unto you because of ²your great wickedness: in a morning shall the king of Israel utterly be cut off.

important direction in the communicating of instruction. Unless the "fallow ground" be broken up by a close and pungent application of the law, it is to no purpose that it be sown, even with the wheat of heaven. Both the teacher and the preacher should make this a watchword. There is reason to fear that it has been too frequently forgotten, and that its neglect may account for the loss of much evangelical labour. It is to no purpose that the Gospel is preached in all its freeness and fullness, love and mercy, while the "fallow ground" remains unbroken. Let it never be forgotten that it is not the whole that have need of a physician, but they that are sick. To produce this sickness, then—a conviction of sin, a sense of guilt, and apprehension of danger—ought to be a primary part of all evangelical instruction. It is only when that is done that there is encouragement to "seek the Lord till he come, and rain righteousness upon them." While we leave half the work undone, it is in vain that we look to the Lord for a blessing.

Chap. XI. 1-7. In the infancy of the Jewish nation, when Israel was enslaved in Egypt, God manifested his love by their emancipation. As this was a type of Israel's conversion from the bondage of sin and Satan to the liberty of God's children, so it also prefigured the bringing up of the only-begotten Son of God out of Egypt, whither he had been carried for fear of Herod, that he might, in the midst of his own people, perform the work of redemption. The Israelites, notwithstanding their marvellous deliverance, refused to hearken to the prophets of God, who exhorted them to cleave to his service; nay, they were actually hardened and exasperated by rebuke. Ver. 8-12. Had simple justice taken its course, things would have been even worse with Israel; but mercy generally triumphed over judgment, postponing its arrival, and when it came, greatly mitigating it. Light here again breaks forth in the midst of darkness; when discipline shall have answered its end, "they will walk after the Lord," and abstain from those courses which had brought so much evil upon them. Some doubt remains as to the precise import of the language, but it may probably be understood as the prophecy of the conversion of the remainder of Israel to Christ, and as a part of his spiritual kingdom in Palestine.

Chap. XII. 1-11. To feed on the wind, and to follow it, is anything but a proof of wisdom, and Ephraim knew it to his cost. The Lord had a controversy with Judah because of idolatry, and the formation of alliances with idol powers. For this he had resolved to punish them, and he did so more especially in the case of Sennacherib's invasion, although not so awfully as when he tion unto him: he found him in Beth-el, and there he spake with us;

5 Even the LORD God of hosts; The LORD ^{is} his memorial.

6 Therefore turn thou to thy God: keep mercy and judgment, ^{and} wait on thy God continually.

7 [¶] He is ^a merchant, the balances of deceit are in his hand: [¶] he loveth to ^{oppress}.

11 Is there ^{iniquity in} Gilead? surely they are vanity: they sacrifice bullocks in Gilgal; yea, their altars are as heaps in the furrows of the fields.

12 And [¶] Jacob fled into the country of Syria; and Israel served for a wife, and for a wife he kept sheep.

13 And by a prophet the LORD brought Israel out of Egypt, and by a prophet was he preserved.

14 Ephraim provoked him to anger ^{most} bitterly: ^{therefore} shall he leave his ^{blood} upon him, ^{and} his reproach shall his Lord return unto him.

gave up the ten tribes to the Assyrians. The exhortation given in ver. 6 is full of beauty; it was the course precisely adapted to their circumstances, and that alone which could bring them relief. When grievous revolters have deeply departed from God, but, through his grace, return, "keeping mercy and judgment," it may still be some time before their lost comfort be restored. But in that case, let them "wait on the Lord continually," and in due season he will visit them again in mercy, dispelling darkness, speaking peace, filling with love, and inspiring with confidence and hope. Ver. 12-14. So opposite to their conduct was that of their father Jacob, that he fled into Syria to avoid an alliance with any of the idolatrous families of Canaan, and in so doing voluntarily subjected himself to grievous hardships. As the reward, however, of his affecting fidelity, God appeared to him, and wrought great things by him, bringing his posterity out of Egypt, and leading them through the wilderness by the hand of Moses. During the whole of their history as a people they had been deeply indebted to the prophets, their instructors, correctors, advisers, and guides. It bodes ill for a man, a family, or a nation, that have learned to pour contempt on the faithful servants of the Most High God.

Chap. XIII. 1-8. When Ephraim was little in his own esteem, and conducted himself with humility; when he trembled at the word of the Lord, and was fearful of offending, he grew great in Israel. Joshua was a descendant of Ephraim; from his time, that tribe gained the ascendancy in the northern parts of the land, preserving it until the evil day, when Jeroboam, an Ephraimite, became king, and then the ten tribes were frequently called Ephraim. Among the ancient idolaters, kissing the idol was an act of the most solemn adoration; and hence we read of "all the knees which hath not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." In allusion to this, the Psalmist, exhorting the wicked, calls on them to "kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and they perish"—that is, to worship him. Ver. 9-16. Amid the havoc which overspread the country, a remnant would be saved from death and the grave, which was a shadow of the ransom of the true Israel, and the resurrection of Christ. When he died and rose again, he be dashed in pieces, and their women with child shall be ripped up.

JOEL.

It is impossible to determine precisely the period in which Joel prophesied; it seems probable, however, that it was during the reign of Uzziah: if so, he was contemporary with Amos and Hosea. The Book is entirely prophetic, and abounds in denunciations of vengeance against the iniquity of the people, blended with exhortations to repentance, and promises of deliverance, together with an abundance of the blessings of the gospel of salvation.

10 The ^ffield is wasted, the land in a manner disquieted the dominions of the dead, and plagued the King of Terrors. The Lord would not repent of this his purpose. The Apostle Paul makes a happy use of the striking apostrophe in ver. 14, in addressing the Corinthians. The passage is one in which God's people are deeply interested, since, on behalf of every one of them, it will be ultimately realised, to their infinite happiness and everlasting joy.

Chap. XIV. 1-3. Assuming that the word would not be without its effect in producing repentance, the prophet urges Israel to return to the Lord. In so doing, they are taught to take with them words suitable to the circumstances, full of confession, self-loathing and supplication. The prophet, compassionating their ignorance, is explicit in his instruction. They are to ask the Lord to take away sin, and to receive them graciously. Grace, not works, was to be their plea. They were to throw themselves on the mercy of the Most High, and receive the blessings of his bounty. Ver. 4-9. The Lord answers them almost in the words of their prayer, assuring them that he will do for them the very things they required to be done. The picture here drawn is one of singular beauty, most aptly setting forth the effect of the grace of God on the heart of the genuine penitent. The closing verse is one of the most precious in the whole prophecy, or in the whole of Scripture. The Lord's dealings with his people, the doctrines of his word, the requirements of his law, and all that enters into the operations of grace in the converted soul, are marked by wisdom, mercy, and truth.

Chap. I. 1-13. The calamity here set forth is uncertain as to the period of its occurrence. It may have been the seven years' famine in the days of Elisea, or that mentioned by Amos in chap. iv. of his prophecy. It would appear that the sin of drunkenness was, during the days of Joel, very prevalent, followed by its stupifying and degrading effects in a very high degree. The armies of the Chaldeans are represented under the figure of a swarm of locusts. In the present instance, it may point to the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, when he came the first time against Jerusalem, and made Jehoiachim tributary to him; and the second time, when he carried Jehoiachin and his family captive into Babylon, with the multitude of the Jews, and their wealth; or a third time, when he besieged Jerusalem, and took it, and Zedekiah the king, and carried him captive; and a the morning spread upon the mountains; ²a great people and a strong: ³there hath not been ever the like, neither shall be any more after it, even to the years of ⁴many generations.

3 A fire devoureth before them, and behind them a flame burneth: the land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a desolate wilderness; yea, and nothing shall escape them.

7 They shall ¹run like mighty men; they shall climb the wall like men of war; and they shall march every one on his ways, and they shall not break their ranks:

9 They shall run to and fro in the city; they shall run upon the wall; they shall climb up upon the houses; they shall enter in at the windows like a thief.

10 The ¹earth shall quake before them; the heavens shall tremble: ²the sun and the moon shall be dark, and the stars shall withdraw their shining:

11 And the LORD shall ³utter his voice before his army; for his camp is very great: for he is strong that executeth his word: for ²the day of the LORD is great and very terrible; and who can abide it?

12 ¶ Therefore also now, saith the LORD, ¹Turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning;

13 And ²rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God: ³for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, ⁴and repenteth him of the evil.

14 Who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a blessing behind him, fourth time, when Nebuchadnezzar came and burned the temple, and Jerusalem, breaking down the walls, and clearing the land of its inhabitants—facts which exhibit such a succession of calamities, ending in utter destruction, as never befell any nation. In the prospect of circumstances so awful, the prophet makes a most fervent appeal to the priests, the ministers of the altar. They had been the principal means of involving the nation in this distress; and all reformation must commence with them. If the threatened vengeance was to be averted, it could only be by repentance; and it became their paramount duty to endeavour to produce that amongst the misguided myriads whom they had so grievously wronged. Ver. 14-20. The vision presented to the prophet was one which ought to have filled the land with terror, since it predicted evils unmixed and inexpressible. It is impossible to conceive of anything more fearful and afflictive. It sets forth the work of vengeance perfected. Happy they who anticipate the evils to come, and, turning from sin, flee for refuge to the Hope that is set before them!

Chap. II. 1-14. The darkness and the gloom here may allude to the effect produced by locusts, which sometimes came like thick clouds darkening the air; so the land of Egypt was darkened with them, according to Exod. x. 15. The accounts of history and of travellers concerning these creatures are all but incredible. At noonday they have so overspread the heavens as to intercept the rays of the sun, and darken the locality over which they passed. Wherever they settled they devoured every green thing, and covered the country with desolation. The effect produced by their presence was peculiar, much resembling that of a general conflagration. A natural historian, writing of Jamaica, tells us that they destroyed the ground, not only for the time, but hurt even a meat-offering and a drink-offering unto the LORD your God?

15 ¶ Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly;

16 Gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts; let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet:

17 Let the priests, the ministers of the LORD, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them say, "Spare thy people, O LORD, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them: wherefore should they say among the people, Where is their God?"

18 ¶ Then will the LORD be jealous for his land, and pity his people.

19 Yea, the LORD will answer and say unto his people, Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith; and I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen:

20 But I will remove far off from you the northern army, and will drive him into a land barren and desolate, with his face toward the east sea, and his hinder part toward the utmost sea: and his stink shall come up, and his ill savour shall come up, because he hath done great things.

21 ¶ Fear not, O land; be glad and rejoice: for the LORD will do great things.

22 Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field: for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig-tree and the vine do yield their strength.

23 Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the LORD your God: for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month.

24 And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil.

25 And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the canker-worm, and the caterpillar, and the palmer-worm, my great army which I sent among you.

27 And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed.

28 ¶ And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions:

29 And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit.

30 And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke.

31 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the LORD come.

32 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call.

CHAPTER III.

1 God's judgments against the enemies of his people.
18 His blessing upon the church.

FOR, behold, in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem,

2 I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for my people, and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land.

3 And they have cast lots for my people; and have given a boy for an harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink.

4 Yea, and what have ye to do with me, O Tyre and Zidon, and all the coasts of Palestine? will ye render me a recompence? and if ye recompense me, swiftly and speedily will I return your recompence upon your own head;

5 Because ye have taken my silver and my gold, and have carried into your temples my goodly pleasant things:

the trees for two years after; and the historian of Ethiopia declares that whosoever they feed, their leavings seem as if parched with fire. Ver. 15-32. We have here one of the most notable proofs touching the Holy Spirit, and the glorious pentecostal effusion by which the ascension of the Lord Jesus was marked. The language used in ver. 28-32 is so remarkable, and bespeaks the descent of a power so great, that nothing which occurred in Old Testament times could be considered as making an approach to its fulfilment. The Apostle Peter directly applies the text to the descent of the Holy Ghost at Jerusalem. The expression "all flesh," comprehends the Gentiles as well as the Jews—the whole human family. The language was realised on that memorable day when the gift of tongues was bestowed in Jerusalem. Occasionally great effusions of the Holy Ghost have occurred in different countries; and there is reason to apprehend that these have only been the drops before the showers of blessing which yet await the Church, and which are indispensable to make the desert blossom as a rose. This the people of God are authorised to expect, and it is their duty from day to day to supplicate the blessing.

Chap. III. 1-8. This prophecy clearly refers to the latter times of the world, when the Jews, upon their conversion, will be delivered from their oppressors, and restored to their own land. That will be the final victory of the Church over her oppressors. The Tartars, Turks, and others, sometimes sell their children. When the Tartars came into Poland, they carried off as many of the little ones as they were able, in the hope that 6 The children also of Judah, and the children of Jerusalem, ^ahave ye sold unto the ²Grecians, that ye might remove them far from their border.

7 Behold, ¹I will raise them out of the place whither ye have sold them, ²and will return your recompence upon your own head:

8 And I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hand of the children of Judah, and they shall sell them to the Sabeans, to a people far off: for the LORD hath spoken ^{it}.

9 ¶ Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; ³Prepare war, ¹wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near, let them come up:

AMOS.

Amos is the next prophet to Jonah, as he prophesied in the days of Uzziah, who reigned over Judah from the year before Christ 809, to the year 758, or there about. While Amos delivered prophecies against Gentile nations as well as against Judah, he exercised his ministrations principally in Israel. In common with the other Prophets, he foretold the captivity and the dispersion of Israel, their preservation in that state, and future restoration, the coming of the kingdom of Christ, and the conversion of the Gentiles.

their parents would redeem them; and when this was not done, they sold them for a crown a-piece. Ver. 9-21. The beautiful language of ver. 17 may probably refer to the final restoration of the Jews, when their motto shall be, "Holiness to the Lord." How vast the work of grace to be performed on the soul of Israel before these words can be realised! Old things will have passed away, and all things become new. It is clear that this must refer to the after-times. Nothing in relation to Israel has hitherto occurred at all coming up to the glorious import of this language. The "day" referred to in ver. 18 is a term used with considerable latitude; here it means the latter day, or the times of the Messiah, when it is foretold that a most abundant communication of Divine power will attend the administration of God's ordinances. Conversion will be rapid and abundant; the converts will glory in grace, and excel in fruitfulness; the skies will pour down righteousness, and the whole earth will resound with the praises of Jehovah.

Chap. I. 1-8. Carmel was a very fruitful mountain in the tribe of Judah, and as such it is frequently used as an emblem of a most fertile place. The terms, "three and four," are not to be understood as signifying that exact number, but offences generally, while one is mentioned as more aggravated than the others, and as the immediate cause of their calamity. In the case of the Syrians, their chief transgression was their conduct to the inhabitants of Gilead, beyond Jordan, whom they treated with peculiar barbarity. The fire which the 5 I will break also the bar of Damascus, and cut off the inhabitant from the plain of Aven, and him that holdeth the sceptre from the house of Eden: and the people of Syria shall go into captivity unto Kir, saith the LORD.

6 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, For three transgressions of Gaza, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they carried away captive the whole captivity, to deliver them up to Edom:

7 But I will send a fire on the wall of Gaza, which shall devour the palaces thereof:

8 And I will cut off the inhabitant from Ashdod, and him that holdeth the sceptre from Ashkelon; and I will turn mine hand against Ekron; and the remnant of the Philistines shall perish, saith the Lord God.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, For three transgressions of Tyrus, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they delivered up the whole captivity to Edom, and remembered not the brotherly covenant:

10 But I will send a fire on the wall of Tyrus, which shall devour the palaces thereof.

11 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, For three transgressions of Edom, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because he did pursue his brother with the sword, and did cast off all pity, and his anger did tear perpetually, and he kept his wrath for ever:

12 But I will send a fire upon Teman, which shall devour the palaces of Bozrah.

13 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, For three transgressions of the children of Ammon, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they have ripped up the women with child of Gilead, that they might enlarge their border:

14 But I will kindle a fire in the wall of Rabbah, and it shall devour the palaces thereof, with shouting in the day of battle, with a tempest in the day of the whirlwind:

15 And their king shall go into captivity, he and his princes together, saith the LORD.

9 ¶ Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them, whose height was like the height of the cedars, and he was strong as the oaks; yet I destroyed his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath.

10 Also I brought you up from the land of Egypt, and led you forty years through the wilderness, to possess the land of the Amorite.

11 And I raised up of your sons for prophets, and of your young men for Nazarites. Is it not even thus, O ye children of Israel? saith the LORD.

12 But ye gave the Nazarites wine to drink; and commanded the prophets, saying, Prophesy not.

13 Behold, I am pressed under you, as a cart is pressed that is full of sheaves.

14 Therefore the flight shall perish from the swift, and the strong shall not strengthen his force, neither shall the mighty deliver himself:

Lord threatened to send, was the war carried on by Jeroboam the Second, with great success, against the Syrians. Ver. 9-15. The Tyrians had forgotten the covenant of friendship which had subsisted between David and Solomon, kings of Judah, and Hiram, king of Tyre, and their treaties which had been entered into for the mutual benefit of their respective nations. This conduct provoked God to send those judgments which were afterwards inflicted on Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar and Alexander the Great. As signified in a previous note, the Edomites acted a very cruel part towards the descendants of Jacob, even exceeding the Gentiles around. They pursued the Israelites with the sword, and purchased them for slaves from those who made them captives; they were void of compassion towards them, and it seemed as if nothing would satisfy their thirst for revenge. From this we clearly see, that natural affection in men towards their relatives is commendable in the sight of God, whereas the neglect of it is treated as a serious offence.

Chap. II. 1-16. Prodigy, injustice, and cruelty are the vices rebuked in this chapter. Idolatry and inhumanity have ever been inseparable, and the primary element of the system is licentiousness. Such has the heathen world been in every age, and such, as all our

1 The necessity of God's judgments against Israel. 9 The publication and causes of it.

⁶Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not ³be afraid? shall there be evil in a city, ⁴and the LORD hath not done it?

⁷Surely the Lord God will do nothing, ⁸but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.

⁹The lion hath roared, who will not fear? the Lord God hath spoken, who can but prophesy?

¹⁰¶ Publish in the palaces at Ashdod, and in the palaces in the land of Egypt, and say, Assemble yourselves upon the mountains of Samaria, and behold the great tumults in the midst thereof, and the ⁵oppressed in the midst thereof.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Amos reproveth Israel for oppression, 4 for idolatry, 6 and for their incorrigibleness.

HEAR this word, ye kine of Bashan, that are in ¹the mountain of Samaria, ²which oppress the poor, which ³crush the needy, which say to their masters, Bring, and let us drink.

⁴The Lord God ⁵hath sworn by his holiness, that, lo, the days shall come upon you, that he will take you away with hooks, and your posterity with fish-hooks.

¹⁶And also ¹⁷I have withholden the rain from you, when there were yet three months to the harvest: and I caused it to Missionary literature shews, it is at the present hour. The patience of the Lord is marvellous: the most benevolent and compassionate of men must stand confounded when they compare their own personal proceedings towards the perverse and the wicked with those of their heavenly Father; but notwithstanding the Divine forbearance, there are limits imposed by Divine wisdom which may not be transgressed with impunity. No sins are more dangerous than those which are presumptuous.

Chap. III. 1-8. Habitual transgression is incompatible with peace of conscience and friendship with God. Without large coincidence in judgment, inclination, and pursuits, men cannot be intimately united in friendship, or live together in harmony and comfort. Nothing can supply the want of reconciliation with God; wickedness and wretchedness are inseparably connected. From the present condition of human nature, there can be no union with God and his people before regeneration by the Holy Spirit. Only they who are born of God love the Father, and the other members of the Divine family. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Ver. 9-15.

Ashdod was a city of the Philistines, famous for the image and the temple of Dagon. The heathen are called to witness the judgments which God will inflict upon his own people as a warning to themselves. The Philistines, and the Egyptians in particular, are admonished of the consequences which would follow their groundless hostility and insulting cruelty towards Israel. The least part of a sheep, severed from the mouth of a lion, would be a proof of its being torn in pieces, and consequently, the shepherd would not be held answerable for it. A piece of an ear may seem a strange remnant; but travellers tell us they have seen goats with ears a foot long. The divans go round three sides of the room, and "the corner," the place of honour, is still furnished with luxurious cushions. The import of the expression seems to be, that in the midst of their enjoyments they would be seized and carried into captivity.

Chap. IV. 1-5. Bashan was remarkable for the richness of its pastures, and its breed of cattle. Such an idea as this was quite natural for such a man as Amos. The prophet depicts the rich and self-indulgent people under the emblem of fattened bullocks, about to be led rain upon one city, and caused it not to rain upon another city: one piece was rained upon, and the piece whereupon it rained not withered.

8 So two or three cities wandered unto one city, to drink water; but they were not satisfied: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

9 I have smitten you with blasting and mildew: when your gardens, and your vineyards, and your fig-trees, and your olive-trees increased, the palmer-worm devoured them: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

10 I have sent among you the pestilence, after the manner of Egypt: your young men have I slain with the sword, and have taken away your horses; and I have made the stink of your camps to come up unto your nostrils: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

11 I have overthrown some of you, as God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and ye were as a firebrand plucked out of the burning: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

12 Therefore thus will I do unto thee, O Israel: and because I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.

13 For, lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind, and declareth unto man what is his thought, that maketh the morning darkness, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth, The LORD, The God of hosts, is his name.

CHAPTER V.

1 A lamentation for Israel. 4 An exhortation to repentance. 21 God rejecteth their hypocritical service.

HEAR ye this word which I take up against you, even a lamentation, O house of Israel.

2 The virgin of Israel is fallen; she shall no more rise: she is forsaken upon her land; there is none to raise her up.

3 For thus saith the Lord God, The city that went out by a thousand shall leave an hundred, and that which went forth by an hundred shall leave ten, to the house of Israel.

4 ¶ For thus saith the LORD unto the house of Israel, Seek ye me, and ye shall live:

5 But seek not Beth-el, nor enter into Gilgal, and pass not to Beer-sheba: for Gilgal shall surely go into captivity, and Beth-el shall come to nought.

6 Seek the LORD, and ye shall live; lest he break out like fire in the house of Joseph, and devour it, and there be none to quench it in Beth-el.

7 Ye who turn judgment to wormwood, and leave off righteousness in the earth,

8 Seek him that maketh the seven stars and Orion, and turneth the shadow of death into the morning, and maketh the day dark with night: that calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth; The LORD is his name:

9 That strengtheneth the spoiled against the strong, so that the spoiled shall come against the fortress.

10 They hate him that rebuketh in the gate, and they abhor him that speaketh uprightly.

11 Forasmuch therefore as your treading is upon the poor, and ye take from him burdens of wheat: ye have built houses of hewn stone, but ye shall not dwell in them; ye have planted pleasant vineyards, but ye shall not drink wine of them.

12 For I know your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins: they afflict the just, they take a bribe, and they turn aside the poor in the gate from their right.

13 Therefore the prudent shall keep silence in that time; for it is an evil time.

14 Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live; and so the LORD, the God of hosts, shall be with you, as ye have spoken.

15 Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish judgment in the gate: it may be that the Lord God of hosts will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph.

16 Therefore the LORD, the God of hosts, the Lord, saith thus, Wailing shall be in all streets: and they shall say in all the highways, Alas! alas! and they shall call the husbandman to mourning, and such as are skilful of lamentation to wailing.

17 And in all vineyards shall be wailto the slaughter. Angling was carried on in two ways: with the line and hook, and with the spear, or harpoon; they were used as now—the one in catching small fish, the other, large ones. The language here seems to be ironical; the idolaters of Israel are invited to offer sacrifices to their idols, and employ in their service the tithes which ought to have been consecrated to the Levites and the poor, and see what would come of it. Ver. 6-13. "Cleanness of teeth" is an expression which signifies want of food, and the prevalence of famine. It would seem as if the Lord punished Israel with drought, while he sent rain upon Judah, making that remarkable difference between them which he did formerly between Egypt and the land of Goshen; and thus Nature was made to illustrate the operations of Grace. The command to make preparation "to meet their God," may be understood as a challenge to do battle; as if the Lord had said, "Put yourselves in a position of defence, summon your idols to your assistance, and thus try your strength against that of the Lord God Almighty." Rebels against the Divine government subject themselves to destruction. Men must choose between justice and mercy—life and death! There is no third course.

Chap. V. 1-20. The language with which the prophet opens may be ironical, and refer to the present degenerated state of the people, worshipping the calves at Dan and Bethel, or because of its wealth and riches, and the splendour and gaiety in which that system appeared. Notwithstanding all these denunciations, Israel would have nothing to blame for their ruin but their own perversity and impenitence. Still the Lord, in his compassion, assures them, that if they will seek him they shall live, and escape the impending calamities. Nothing was required of them but repentance, humiliation, and submission—believing prayer and steadfast confidence. Their present course of idol-worship was an utter abomi-ing: for ¹I will pass through thee, saith the LORD.

18 Woe unto you that ⁷desire the day of the LORD! to what end is it for you? ²the day of the LORD is darkness, and not light.

19 As if a man did flee from a lion, and a bear met him; or went into the house, and leaned his hand on the wall, and a serpent bit him.

20 Shall not the day of the LORD be darkness, and not light? even very dark, and no brightness in it?

21 [¶]I hate, I despise your feast-days, and I will not ⁴smell in your solemn assemblies.

22 Though ye offer me burnt-offerings, and your meat-offerings, I will not accept them; neither will I regard the ⁶peace-offerings of your fat beasts.

23 Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols.

24 But ¹let judgment ⁶run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream.

25 Have ye offered unto me sacrifices and offerings in the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel?

26 But ye have borne ⁷the tabernacle of your ^bMoloch and Chiun your images, the star of your god, which ye made to yourselves:

27 Therefore will I cause you to go into captivity beyond Damascus, saith the LORD, whose name is The God of hosts.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The wantonness of Israel, 12 and their incorrigibility, 7, 14 shall be plagued with desolation.

WOE ²to them that are ¹at ease in Zion, and trust in the mountain of Samaria, which are named ³chief of the nations, to whom the house of Israel came!

nation, and the Divine visitation would speedily put an end to it; for Bethel and Gilgal, and their inhabitants, idols, priests, and devotees, would speedily fall into the hands of their enemies. It was impossible to escape or to quench the fire of God's indignation. The oppression of the poor ranked among the principal crimes of the country, and on their behalf he would make bare his arm, and break in pieces the oppressor. "Silence" is frequently the highest prudence, and in perilous times it is the only condition of safety. The day desired by those who are menaced with woe, probably meant "the day of the Lord"—an expression very common in the mouth of the prophets, signifying the period when the Divine displeasure would be manifested. One calamity would succeed to another, until the desolation should have become completed. Ver. 21-27. It is remarkable that Israel should have continued the observance of religious solemnities amidst much depravity, as if the character of the worshipper had nothing to do with the acceptance of his sacrifices. The people are, therefore, cautioned against a reliance on hypocritical services when the heart was not right with God. Reform, both individual and national, and among both great and small, could alone bring deliverance. During the sojourn in the wilderness, the sacrifices, partly from necessity, were interrupted or neglected; but these people, now that they occupied the promised land, displayed a zeal on behalf of idolatry which would have sufficed to enable their fathers to walk in all the ordinances and commandments of Moses even in the wilderness. There is no limit to the power of zeal; to love, all things are possible. But if a love of idolatry produced such effects, what might not be expected to result from the love of God shed abroad in the hearts of men saved by grace from everlasting destruction!

Chap. VI. 1-11. The mountain of Zion and the mountain of Samaria were considered the chief, or most celebrated, among the nations, as the two kingdoms were to which they belonged. The woe here pronounced against those that are "at ease in Zion" is fearfully significant. The evil is one to which the people of God are imminently exposed, more particularly in quiet times. While peace has its advantages, it has also its dangers, and it requires both much grace and much wisdom to avoid them. The picture drawn in ver. 9-11 is affecting and awful. Before the final destruction of the city, the ravages of famine and pestilence would be so great, that, in many instances, whole families would perish, while their relations would be constrained to burn their bodies, or to bury their bones with very little assistance, amid speechless awe, and unutterable astonish-you a nation, O house of Israel, saith the LORD, the God of hosts; and they shall afflict you ¹from the entering in of Hamath unto the ²river of the wilderness.

CHAPTER VII.

1 The judgments of the grasshoppers, 4 and of the fire, are diverted by the prayer of Amos. 16 Amaziah's judgment.

2 And it came to pass, that when they had made an end of eating the grass of the land, then I said, O Lord God, forgive, I beseech thee: ²by whom shall Jacob arise? ³for he is small.

against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.

10 ¶ Then Amaziah, the priest of Beth-el, sent to Jeroboam king of Israel, saying, Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel: the land is not able to bear all his words.

11 For thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, ^kand Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land.

12 Also Amaziah said unto Amos, ^lO thou seer, ^mgo, flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there:

13 But prophesy not again any more at Beth-el: for it is the king's ⁿchapel, and it is the ^oking's court.

14 ¶ Then answered Amos, and said to Amaziah, I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was ^pan herdsman, and a gatherer of ^qsycamore-fruit:

15 And the LORD took me ^ras I followed the flock, and the LORD said unto me, ^sGo, prophesy unto my people Israel.

16 Now therefore ^thear thou the word of the LORD: Thou sayest, Prophecy not against Israel, ^uand drop not thy word against the house of Isaac.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Thy wife shall be an harlot in the city, and thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die in a polluted land: ^vand Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 By a basket of summer-fruit is shewed Israel's end. 4 Oppression reprov'd. 11 A famine of God's word threatened.

THUS hath the Lord God shewed unto me; and behold a basket of summer-fruit.

2 And he said, ^wAmos, what seest thou?

ment. Grief, fear, and despair would paralyse the people, while everything around would add to the horrors of the scene. The sufferings of ancient nations, in divers ways, were incalculably greater than those which have been endured in modern times. Ver. 12-14. Horses could not possibly run upon steep and craggy cliffs, nor could the husbandman drive his ploughshare through hard rocks. These emblems were intended to convince the children of Israel of their folly, and to shew them that they could not, by possibility, prosper while laden with iniquity, and intent upon augmenting the guilt of their transgression. They had corrupted judgment and justice, and made it hateful to the innocent. They who ought to have redressed the wrongs of the poor, only increased their misery. Men who do not groan to be delivered from the burden of guilt, will be sure to add to it.

Chap. VII. 1-13. The contention with fire is an expression of difficult import; it has been supposed, however, to imply excessive heat and drought, or lightning, or the breaking forth of subterraneous fires, which induced the prophet to renew his former plea. The "plumb-line" indicated examining with exactness how far the people had deviated from the rule of conduct which had been given them. This vision seems to have discouraged the prophet's intercession, and clearly shewed that their idolatrous iniquities had been such as, without an extraordinary manifestation of mercy, to involve their destruction. But it was of no use: for the present, mercy was out of the question; and the Lord shewed him that he was about to proceed against Israel in executing justice; that the punishment could neither be remitted, nor postponed; that the strongholds, cities, and idolatrous temples, should be desolated; and that this commenced in the destruction of the family of Jeroboam by the sword of the conspirators. Ver. 14-17. Amaziah, the priest of Bethel, presided over the idolatrous worship there, and was, therefore, it may be supposed, much displeased with Amos, who predicted the destruction of his system. In the true spirit of a courtly priest, he apprised Jeroboam of the proceedings of Amos, obviously with a view to bring forth an interdict. So far, however, as the narrative goes, there is no proof that the king attended to the information of Amaziah. But if Amos escaped, he had no reason to be grateful to the priest of Bethel, who had done his utmost to prejudice him with the king. He who examines the hearts of men, and deals with their intentions rather than their results, was not indifferent to the conduct of this idolatrous priest, and, therefore, He gave Amos a commission to him of a character which might well make his ears tingle. Individuals who distinguished themselves by opposition to the prophets of the Lord, on various occasions, received a distinct intimation of the judgments that hung over them, as the reward of their iniquity. The message of Amos was the knell of ruin to Amaziah and his posterity—a message the most awful that was ever delivered by inspired lips to an erring mortal.

Chap. VIII. 1-10. The awful events here predicted may be supposed to have begun in the murder of Zacha-

And I said, A basket of summer-fruit. Then said the LORD unto me, ^bThe end is come upon my people of Israel; ^cI will not again pass by them any more.

3 And the songs of the temple ¹shall be howlings in that day, saith the Lord God: there shall be ^dmany dead bodies in every place; ^ethey shall cast them forth ^fwith silence.

4 [¶]Hear this, O ye that swallow up the needy, even to make the poor of the land to fail,

5 Saying, [¶]When will the ^gnew-moon ^hbe gone, that we may sell corn? and the sabbath, that we may ⁱset forth wheat, making the ephah small, and the shekel great, and ^jfalsifying the balances by deceit?

6 That we may ^kbuy the poor for silver, and the needy for a pair of shoes; yea, and sell the refuse of the wheat?

7 The LORD hath ^lsworn by the excellency of Jacob, Surely ^mI will never forget any of their works.

8 Shall not ⁿthe land tremble for this, and every one mourn that dwelleth therein? and it shall rise up wholly as a flood; and it shall be cast out and drowned, as by the flood of Egypt.

9 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord God, ^othat I will cause the sun to go down at noon, ^pand I will darken the earth in the clear day:

10 And I will turn your feasts into mourning, and all your songs into lamentation: and I will bring up sackcloth upon all loins, and baldness upon every head; and I will make it ^qas the mourning of an only son, and the end thereof as ^ra bitter day.

11 [¶]Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, ^sbut of hearing the words of the LORD:

12 And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east; they ^tshall run to and fro to seek the word of the LORD, and shall not find it.

[¶]I SAW the LORD standing upon the altar; and he said, Smite the ^wlintel of the door, that the posts may shake; and ^xcut them in the head, all of them; and I will slay the last of them with the sword: he that fleeth of them ^yshall not flee away; and he that escapeth of them shall not be delivered.

2 Though they ^zdig into hell, thence shall mine hand take them; though they ^{aa}climb up to heaven, thence will I bring them down:

3 And though they hide themselves in the top of Carmel, I will search and take them out thence; and though they be hid from my sight in the bottom of the sea, thence will I command the serpent, and he shall bite them:

4 And though they go into captivity before their enemies, thence will I command the sword, and it shall slay them: and I will ^{ab}set mine eyes upon them for evil, and not for good.

5 And the Lord God of hosts ^{ac}is he that toucheth the land, and it shall melt, ^{ad}and all that dwell therein shall mourn; and it shall rise up wholly like a flood, and shall be drowned, as by the flood of Egypt.

6 It is he that buildeth his ^{ae}stories in the heaven, and hath founded his ^{af}troop in the earth; he that ^{ag}calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth; ^{ah}The LORD is his name.

7 Are ye not as children of the Ethiopians unto me, O children of Israel? saith the LORD. ^{ai}Have not I brought up Israel out of the land of Egypt? and the Philistines from Caphtor, and the Syrians from Kir?

riah, the son of Jeroboam, as the subsequent contests between the successive usurpers to the throne made way for the Assyrian invasions, and terminated in the ruin of Israel. Ver. 5 and 6 present a mirror which reflects, in an awful manner, the depth of the depravity of the people. When once the day of the Lord becomes a weariness, and is hated because of the interruption it gives to sinful pleasures and ill-gotten gains, it is a token that they are ripe for destruction. They who do this will do more; they will, in every practicable way, cheat, defraud, and plunder their fellow-men. They will not hesitate to make the ephah small and the shekel great, and to falsify the balances by deceit. Amos apprises them that the worst of all famines awaits them—a famine of the Word of God. He assures them that in a short space they would have no more prophets to consult, which would be the punishment of the contempt which they had hitherto poured upon the servants of God. This fearful threat was fulfilled upon the whole nation. In addition to the privation which attended a portion of the captivity after their return, they had no succession of prophets from the time of Malachi till the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. They who oppose the light need not be surprised if the candlestick be taken out of its place; whereas they who walk in the light while they have it, may expect to enjoy it long.

Chap. IX. 1-10. The Lord here appears as offended at the sacrifices, interdicting their further presentation, as well as menacing those who had so unworthily offered them. The altar has been generally understood as that of Bethel, for the sacrifices offered on it to the golden calf chiefly provoked the Lord to vengeance. The power displayed by creation not only exceeds all finite comprehension, but is plainly so vast as to exclude limitation. Creative power is so wonderful and great, that the intellect of man can form no adequate conception of it. Ver. 11-15. On the restoration of the Jews, after their captivity, the Messiah came; and on the completion of his work, “the door of faith was opened to the Gentiles;” and on the future restoration of Israel, the borders of the Christian Church will be indefinitely enlarged by their conversion. The prophet, notwithstanding the pungency and the appalling nature of many of his communications, like certain others of his brethren, concludes with a burst of cheerfulness. No other interpretation can be given of ver. 14, than that Israel shall everywhere be gathered and restored to their own land.

8 Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are upon the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; ¹saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the LORD.

9 For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least ²grain fall upon the earth.

10 All the sinners of my people shall die by the sword, which say, The evil shall not overtake nor prevent us.

11 ¶ In that day will I ³raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and ⁴close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old:

OBADIAH.

Obadiah, from the character of his prophecy, it may be presumed, was contemporary with Jeremiah. Although his predictions are few, they are yet momentous. Several of the other Prophets refer to the cruelties of Edom towards the Jews, but none with the same fulness and force as Obadiah. The prophet's object was to comfort his people under the afflictions present and prospective, and to lift up the veil of futurity, that they might see the glory which awaited their posterity in the latter day.

1 The destruction of Edom, 8 for their pride, 10 and wrong unto Jacob. 17 The salvation and victory of Jacob.

THE vision of Obadiah. Thus saith the Lord God concerning Edom, ¹"We have heard a rumour from the LORD, and an ambassador is sent among the heathen, ²"Arise ye, and let us rise up against her in battle.

2 Behold, I have made thee small among the heathen: thou art greatly despised.

Whether conversion shall precede or follow such restoration, may be matter of dispute; but suffice it to say, that the thing is sure, and will be realised in its time.

Ver. 1-9. Edom, which is the same as Idumea, originally comprised the country lying between the Asphaltite Lake and the Elstic Gulf on the Red Sea. The ancient inhabitants were early conquered, and expelled by the descendants of Esau—an event which fulfilled the prophecies in Gen. xxvi. and xxvii. The sublime language of ver. 4 was strikingly realised in after-times. The ruins of the city Petra burst on the view of the traveller in full grandeur, shut in on the opposite side by precipices, from which ravines and valleys branch out in all directions. It is recorded by travellers that the sides of the mountains are covered with a variety of excavated tombs and private dwellings, which present a most singular appearance. Ver. 10-16. "The day of the Lord," as stated in a previous note, is an expression common to the prophets, and generally referring to judgments on the wicked. The Jews had drunk the cup of the Divine indignation even on Mount Zion, and the heathen should drink abundantly of it in their own land, until they were destroyed. The utter ruin of several nations bordering on Israel, which had oppressed them, is clearly predicted. All such may be viewed as types of the enemies of the Church of God, who are everywhere destined, if they repent not, to perish.

12 But ⁶thou shouldest not have ⁴looked on the day of thy brother in the day that he became a stranger; neither shouldest thou have ²rejoiced over the children of Judah in the day of their destruction; neither shouldest thou have ⁶spoken proudly in the day of distress.

13 Thou shouldest not have entered into the gate of my people in the day of their calamity; yea, thou shouldest not have ²looked on their affliction in the day of their calamity, nor have laid ¹hands on their ¹substance in the day of their calamity:

JONAH.

This book is rather a narrative than a prophecy. The most wonderful event in it was intended as a type or emblem of Christ's death, burial, and resurrection. The appeal made by the Lord himself to its main facts, proves that we are to admit of no allegorical exposition of it. There was such a person as Jonah; he was cast into the sea, and preserved by miracle; he preached to the Ninevites, and literally acted as he is represented to have done.

CHAPTER I.

¹ Jonah, sent to Nineveh, fleeth to Tarshish. 4 He is overtaken by a tempest, 11 thrown into the sea, and swallowed by a fish.

NOW the word of the LORD came unto ²Jonah the son of Amittai, saying,

2 Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry against it; ³for their wickedness is come up before me.

3 But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD, and went down to ²Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish: so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD.

5 Then the mariners were afraid, and ³cried every man unto his god, and cast forth the wares that ^{were} in the ship into the sea, to lighten it of them: but Jonah was gone down into the sides of the ship; and he lay, and was fast asleep.

6 So the shipmaster came to him, and said unto him, What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise, call upon thy God, ^{if} so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not.

7 And they said every one to his fellow,

Ver. 17-21. This opening verse is one of the most beautiful and precious in prophecy. Mount Zion, the Church of God, is the only place from which deliverance to an enslaved world can proceed, and that deliverance is invariably followed by holiness. It is only by continuing in the faith, that the privileges of adoption can be retained and enjoyed. Divers parts of this prophecy were accomplished when the Jews returned to their own land, consequent upon the decree of Cyrus, when the temple was rebuilt, and the worship of God restored, when Jerusalem was re-established in prosperity, and the land replenished with inhabitants. Salvation and holiness are inseparable; in fact, they are almost identical. Salvation, as the term implies, is the restoration of health to the soul; and the man that is renewed, loves the Lord his God, and his neighbour also.

Chap. I. 1-10. Nineveh was the capital of Assyria.

founded by Assur, son of Shem, it is supposed, not long after the building of Babel. It stood on the banks of the Tigris; in the times of Jonah, it was of vast extent, comprising a circuit of three days' journey. It is stated to have been seven leagues long, three broad, and eighteen round. Its walls were a hundred feet high, and so broad that three chariots could be driven abreast on them. Its towers, of which there were fifteen hundred, were each two hundred feet high. In Jonah's days, the population would seem to have been about six hundred thousand, for there were one hundred and twenty thousand young children not knowing the right hand from the left, so that, according to the ordinary calculation of six to a family, the numbers above specified existed. Joppa was one of the most ancient seaports in the world, situated in a fine plain on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, forty-five miles north-west of Jerusalem. The lot was the usual method of referring things to the appointment

Come, and let us cast lots, that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us. So they cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah.

8 Then said they unto him, Tell us, we pray thee, for whose cause this evil is upon us: what is thine occupation? and whence comest thou? what is thy country? and of what people art thou?

9 And he said unto them, I am an Hebrew; and I fear the LORD, the God of heaven, which hath made the sea and the dry land.

10 Then were the men exceedingly afraid, and said unto him, Why hast thou done this? (for the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them.)

11 ¶ Then said they unto him, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea may be calm unto us? (for the sea was wrought, and was tempestuous.)

12 And he said unto them, Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea; so shall the sea be calm unto you: for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

13 Nevertheless the men rowed hard to bring it to the land; but they could not: for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous against them.

14 Wherefore they cried unto the LORD, and said, We beseech thee, O LORD, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man's life, and lay not upon us innocent blood: for thou, O LORD, hast done as it pleased thee.

15 So they took up Jonah, and cast him forth into the sea; and the sea ceased from her raging.

16 Then the men feared the LORD exceedingly, and offered a sacrifice unto the LORD, and made vows.

17 ¶ Now the LORD had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And Zeph. 2. 13-15.

Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.

CHAPTER II.

1 The prayer of Jonah. 10 He is delivered from the fish.

THEN Jonah prayed unto the LORD his God out of the fish's belly,

2 And said, I cried by reason of mine affliction unto the LORD, and he heard me; out of the belly of hell cried I, and thou heardest my voice.

3 For thou hadst cast me into the deep, in the midst of the seas; and the floods compassed me about: all thy billows and thy waves passed over me.

4 Then I said, I am cast out of thy sight; yet I will look again toward thy holy temple.

5 The waters compassed me about even to the soul: the depth closed me round about, the weeds were wrapped about my head.

6 I went down to the bottoms of the mountains; the earth with her bars was about me for ever: yet hast thou brought up my life from corruption, O LORD my God.

7 When my soul fainted within me I remembered the LORD; and my prayer came in unto thee, into thine holy temple.

8 They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy.

9 But I will sacrifice unto thee with the voice of thanksgiving; I will pay that that I have vowed. Salvation is of the LORD.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land.

CHAPTER III.

1 Jonah, sent again, preacheth to the Ninevites. 6 Upon their repentance, 10 God spareth them.

AND the word of the LORD came unto Jonah the second time, saying,

2 Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great or discovery of Providence; and though the mariners might act superstitiously, the event was overruled to accomplish the Divine purposes. Ver. 11-17. Much needless controversy has obtained on the subject of the fish by which Jonah was preserved. One class of writers have assumed that it was the whale—an assumption which infidelity has endeavoured to turn to its own account. Another class have contended for the shark, and cited facts to shew that it is capable of receiving a man. There is no authority, however, for such disquisitions, and no propriety in them; it is enough to know that the Lord prepared a great fish for the purpose. Is it not even probable that the preparation implied the express creation of a creature peculiarly adapted for this very purpose? Nothing can be more simple and natural than the language of Scripture, and it is to be regretted that criticism should complicate it by perverse ingenuity. Three days and nights, among the Hebrews, is an expression which does not signify complete periods of twenty-four hours, but parts of that time. The Lord Jesus lay in the grave one natural day, and part of two others, and it seems probable that this was the precise time of Jonah's continuance in the belly of the fish.

Chap. II. 1-10. No small portion of the most precious parts of Scripture have originated in affliction, the fruit of transgression. This prayer is an impressive example. Had he prayed earlier, and obeyed the Divine command, he might have escaped the terrible condition in which he now found himself. It is, nevertheless, well that those who have looked away from the holy temple of the Lord, and in consequence brought upon themselves overwhelming trouble, should then look towards it, seeing that from it alone can relief be obtained. Such looking, if it be through the Lord Jesus, and with an exclusive regard to his atoning sacrifice, will not be in vain. The prayer of the penitent will go up, and the commandment will go forth to deliver him. It is difficult to say whether Jonah had, or had not, departed for a season from the faith of the true God. It has been thought by some that the declaration, "They that observe lying vanities," is expressive of his own experience; but this conclusion does not necessarily follow. It is natural for the penitent, when reflecting on his own faults and follies, to think of those who are under the same condemnation. The Psalmist frequently, when rejoicing in the love and favour of his God, refers to those who are strangers to that felicity. The great fish prepared for the occasion, having performed its office, deposited the prophet upon the dry land. That was incomparably the most exciting and astonishing event of his life. Nothing, probably, within the range of possibility could so impressively suggest the feelings of a man that has been restored to life. It is impossible to form an idea of what Jonah must have felt as he once more stood on the firm earth, and beheld the heavens over his head. Equally impossible is it to form any notion of the feelings which occupied the bosom of Lazarus, the son of the widow of Nain, and others, who were raised from the dead. The speculations which have been indulged in as to the place on city, and ^bpreach unto it the preaching that I bid thee.

3 So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. (Now Nineveh was ¹an exceeding great city of three days' journey.)

4 And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey, and he cried, and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

5 ¶ So the people of Nineveh ^cbelieved God, ^dand proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them.

6 For ^eword came unto the king of Nineveh; and he arose from his throne, and he laid his robe from him, ^fand covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes.

7 And he caused it to be proclaimed and ²published through Nineveh, by the decree of the king and his ³nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste any thing; let them not feed, nor drink water:

8 But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and ⁴cry mightily unto God; yea, ⁵let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the violence that is in their hands.

9 Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?

10 ¶ And ⁶God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; ⁷and God repented of the evil that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not.

said, I pray thee, O LORD, was not this my saying when I was yet in my country! therefore I fled before unto Tarshish: for I knew that ^bthou art a gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest thee of the evil.

3 Therefore now, O LORD, ^ctake, I beseech thee, my life from me: ^dfor it is better for me to die than to live.

4 ¶ Then said the LORD, ^eDoest thou well to be angry?

5 So Jonah went out of the city, and sat on the east side of the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it in the shadow, till he might see what would become of the city.

6 And ^fthe LORD God prepared a ^ggourd, and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief. So Jonah ^hwas exceeding glad of the gourd.

7 But God prepared a worm, when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered.

8 And it came to pass, when the sun did arise, that God prepared a ⁱvehement east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live.

9 And God said to Jonah, ^jDoest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, ^kI ^ldo well to be angry, even unto death.

10 Then said the LORD, Thou hast ^mhad pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which ⁿcame up in a night, and perished in a night:

11 And ^oshould not I spare ^pNineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six-score thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?

the shore on which the prophet was thrown are frivolous and useless. It was, however, probably not far from the place from which they had sailed, which would make for his convenience in proceeding to fulfil the Divine injunction.
